and it would be wasteful to employ one of mediocre capacity when better men are available. Experience of the actual work will always be a point in favour of officers employed in the department; but ability and other qualities will have to be considered, and the appointment must go to the man, wherever he may be found, who is best fitted for it.

13. The financial effect of our proposals would be as follows. At present the office of the Controller and Auditor-General consists, apart from that officer, of a Deputy Comptroller-General, two Assistant Comptrollers-General and a Chief Superintendent. After the proposed division of duties, we think that the Comptroller-General should retain a Deputy Comptroller-General and a Chief Superintendent, while, as already explained, the Comptroller of Currency should have an Assistant. The comparison will then be—Present Scale.

	Rs.	Rs.
Comptroller-General	3,500—4,000	3,833⅓
Deputy Comptroller-General	1,500—1,800	1,700
Assistant Comptroller-General	300—1,250	847½
Ditto ditto	300—1,250	847½
Chief Superintendent	450—600	562½
Total	...	7,790⅚

Proposed Scale.

	Minimum cost.		Maximum cost.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Comptroller-General	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000
Deputy-Comptroller-General	1,500—1,800	1,700	1,500—1,800	1,700
Chief Superintendent	450—600	562½	450—600	562½
Comptroller of Currency	Pay as an Accountant-General, Class III, Rs. 2,250 plus a local allowance of Rs. 200.	2,450	2,500—100—3,000	2,833⅓
Assistant to Comptroller of Currency	Pay Rs. 300—1,250 plus a local allowance of Rs. 100.	947½	1,000—50—1,250	1,156¼
Total	...	10,660	...	11,252⅙

The net increase in cost will thus amount to Rs. 34,430 per annum as a minimum or Rs. 41,660 as a maximum.

Copy of telegram from the Secretary of State for India, dated the 9th October 1912.

Please see your despatch No. 186 of the 11th July. I am in favour of the separation of functions while reserving judgment as to salaries; but in view of what was said by your Finance Member in the Imperial Legislative Council Debate on the 22nd March last, it is necessary for me to consider further the question of independent status. I doubt advisability of making him subordinate to the Governor-General as distinct from Governor-General in Council. Please let me have your views on the merits of the proposal that he should be appointed and removable only by the Secretary of State. Objection in correspondence ending with your letter No. 300, dated 19th September 1901, was largely on ground of expense which will no longer apply if additional posts are to be created in any case. It will be necessary, whatever be the decision, to define his functions carefully and especially to decide whether he shall continue to take part in the compilation of estimates and accounts. I doubt whether this would be compatible with the position of an officer not under the orders of the Government of India. I shall be glad to have your views by despatch on these points.

Copy of despatch to the Secretary of State for India, No. 31, dated the 7th February 1913.

We have the honour to reply to Your Lordship's telegram of the 9th October last, in which, with reference to our despatch of the 11th July 1912, you ask for an expression of our further views on the question of the position and duties of our Comptroller and Auditor-General. You were in favour, you said in that telegram, of the separation of functions which we had proposed, though you reserved judgment as to the salaries of the two new posts to be created; but you desired to have our opinion on the proposal that the chief Audit officer should be appointed and removable only by the Secretary of State; you doubted whether it was advisable to make him subordinate to the Governor-General as distinct from the Governor-General in Council, and you referred to the necessity of carefully defining his functions with reference more particularly to the compilation of estimates and accounts, a duty which you thought might not be compatible with the position of an officer not under the orders of the Government of India.

2. The main question now for discussion, which may be described briefly as the question of the independence of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, is one of which, we need scarcely assure Your Lordship, we recognised the importance and to which we gave our most careful consideration before we addressed to you our despatch of July last. Our position in this matter is as follows. We do not fail to recognise that, since the Secretary of State is the final authority for the sanction and control of Indian expenditure, there is some theoretic force in the contention that the Auditor-General should be independent of the Government of India and subordinate only to Your Lordship. An arrangement on this basis would place our Auditor-General in an analogous position to that occupied by the corresponding officer in the United Kingdom. But there are such serious differences in the respective circumstances that we consider this analogy to be in a large degree misleading. In the first place, it has to be remembered that, while in England the system of accounting is departmental, and the Comptroller-General is only an auditor, in India audit and accounting are combined. The characteristic of the English system is that the departmental auditor is subordinate to the head of his Department; he cannot give a reference to an outside authority. In India the officer who corresponds to the English departmental auditor is an Accounts officer directly under the Finance Department and independent of the Department whose accounts he audits. He has also, if an Accountant-General, power, without reference to any higher authority, of requiring a reference to the Secretary of State. Again, in England, the Comptroller-General is an original auditor and applies his audit direct through his own staff: whereas in India the original audit is delegated to a number of local officers and the duty of the Comptroller-General is chiefly supervision. The Indian system in fact is based on the independence of the departmental officer in relation to the Department whose accounts he audits, while in the English system there is no independent officer until we reach the Comptroller-General at the summit. It follows that the case for independence of the English Comptroller-General rests on quite different and on much stronger grounds than the case for independence of the Indian Comptroller and Auditor-General. If the latter were made independent of our Government, the Audit Department as a whole would be subject to far less control by the executive than is the case in England. Not only would this be so, but there would be the further very serious practical objection that the Comptroller and Auditor-General would be separated by so great a distance from the only authority to whom he would be responsible. He would be subject to no control by the Government of India. At the same time the control exercised over him from London by the Secretary of State could be neither immediate nor effective. It would be exceedingly difficult for the Secretary of State to decide the merits of cases in which the Government of India might have cause for complaint against an attitude of excessive meticulousness or a tendency to unnecessary interference on the part of the Auditor-General. Such an attitude has been one of the conspicuous defects of our Audit Department in the past, and we cannot but feel that should our Comptroller and Auditor-General be made altogether independent of our Government, the tendency might well be for this spirit to increase rather than to diminish. We do not for a moment suggest that the Secretary of State would wish to encourage such an attitude on the part of the Auditor-General, but he would naturally feel it incumbent on him to support his officer unless a very clear case were shown against him and the situation would be one with which it would be peculiary difficult to deal by correspondence. The same may be said in a lesser degree in regard to the Auditor-General's performance of his general administrative duties and the routine of daily business. These could hardly come to the notice of the Secretary of State and yet might well be of importance in forming an opinion regarding the administration of the Department. Apart from actual misconduct, it would be difficult for the Government of India to prove to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State that the condition of the Audit Department was so seriously defective as to call for the appointment of a new Comptroller and Auditor-General. Bearing these possibilities in mind we venture to think that should it be eventually decided to make the Comptroller and Auditor-General independent of the Government of India, it would be necessary at the same time to introduce into our administration a system of Audit officers under the control of the Department whose accounts they audit analogous to that in force in England. We recognise the objections to this course on the ground of expense, but we see no other method of adequately meeting the situation which would be created. There is also the further difficulty that it would appear necessary for our Comptroller and Auditor-General to continue, as at present, to be concerned in the compilation of our estimates and accounts, a point to which Your Lordship refers in your telegram under reply. He would in this capacity be under the orders of the Government of India, while in the performance of his audit functions he would be entirely independent of his Government. We cannot consider that such an arrangement would be either logical or likely to work satisfactorily.

3. The defects of our present system of audit were fully explained to Your Lordship in paragraph 6 of our despatch of July 11, 1912, and we need not detail them again here. The immediate necessity, to our mind, is that those defects should be remedied, and it is clear that the essential factor for the attainment of this object is that our Auditor-General should be able to devote his whole time to audit estimates and accounts only, and that he should be the best man we can secure for the work. The reform of the Department is a work of great magnitude and difficulty. It will require for its completion both an intimate knowledge of the details of the work and great abilities. For these reasons we have urged on Your Lordship the separation of the functions of the Comptroller-General and Auditor-General from those of the Comptroller of Currency and have suggested a large salary for the former officer. Even when, as we hope, the reform of the Comptroller and Auditor-General's Branch will have been achieved, it will still be a matter of great importance to have a large area of choice for the post of Auditor-General. But should the Auditor-General be made independent of the Government of India, with the corollary that he is to look for no further promotion or appointment at our hands, it is obvious that our area of selection will be seriously narrowed. Our ablest financial officers who may legitimately entertain hopes of promotion to the highest posts in our Government may not be tempted even by a high salary to accept the post on such terms. On the other hand, we see no reason to suppose either that lack of independence has contributed to the present defects of our system or that its removal would aid in their improvement. In so far as the independence of the Auditor-General would have any influence on the question it would rather tend, for the reasons we have given above, to retard the process of reform which we wish to initiate.

4. We are not aware of any evidence to show that the Comptroller-General has in the past been embarrassed by a sense of dependence on the Government of India, or that his position has militated against the proper discharge of his audit functions. If such had been the case we agree that there would have been strong grounds for making him independent of our Government. What we propose, however, will greatly raise his status and position. We propose, a point with which we deal more fully further on in this despatch, that he should be appointed by, and removable only by, the Governor-General, and that he should have the right of direct access to His Excellency. We also propose that his salary should be raised to Rs. 5,000 and we greatly hope that Your Lordship will be able to agree to this suggestion. We consider that if these proposals are accepted, the Comptroller and Auditor-General will occupy a position which should remove all fear of his being impeded by improper pressure in the exercise of his duties.

5. Lastly, we feel constrained to invite Your Lordship's attention to the political aspect of the case which to our mind cannot be left out of account. Whatever may be the theoretical arguments in favour of an independent Auditor we cannot help feeling that such independence will inevitably be interpreted as an admission that the Governor-General and the Government of India either have proved themselves incapable of controlling, or that doubts are entertained regarding their desire or ability to control, expenditure in India. The implication is one no doubt which Your Lordship would repudiate; but we have to consider how the matter will appear to the outside world, and on the broadest grounds we doubt the expediency of appointing in India any officer whom it is declared to be necessary, for the reasons we have indicated, to place outside the control of the Government of India. The step, it is clear to us, would be derogatory to the position both of the Government of India and especially of the Governor-General, and we need not emphasise to Your Lordship the very serious objections to the adoption of a measure which might produce so unfortunate a result. For all these reasons we adhere to the opinion which we formed when the matter was first considered by us. Our Hon'ble Colleague, Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson, is, however, unable on this question to subscribe to the views of the majority of the Council; and we have accordingly to append to the despatch a Minute of Dissent which he has recorded.

6. As regards the relationship of the Comptroller and Auditor-General to the Governor-General, we regret that we appear to have conveyed to Your Lordship a wrong impressions of our intentions. We did not mean to propose that this officer should cease to be under the orders of the Government of India. Our substantial proposals were two in number. We desired in the first place to have it recognised as a definite and permanent condition of the appointment that the Comptroller and Auditor-General should be appointed by the Governor-General and should be removable from office only by the Governor-General; secondly, we wished to give him the right of direct access to His Excellency. These matters are indeed within our own powers, but we thought it desirable to mention them in order to show the manner in which, apart from the pay of the appointment, we proposed that the position of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, which we regarded as inadequate, should be improved. It will be necessary to examine in detail the division of functions between the Comptroller and Auditor-General and the new Comptroller of Currency which we gave in broad outline in paragraph 9 of our despatch of 11th July 1912, and this work we shall undertake as soon as we have Your Lordship's final orders. As we have explained in an earlier paragraph of this despatch, we consider that special difficulties would arise in regard to the accounts work of the Comptroller and Auditor-General if he were made independent of the Government of India; but should Your Lordship be able to accept the proposals contained in our despatch of July 11th last, we think it will be clear from the explanation we have now given that in the assignment of duties to the Comptroller and Auditor-General, no difficulty of a constitutional nature, such as that referred to in your telegram, need be anticipated in connection with the compilation of accounts and estimates.

7. To sum up. Our whole proposals, as set forth in our despatch of July 11th, were based on the necessity of improving audit methods as now practised in this country. The defects of these methods, we consider, have no connection with the dependence or independence of the Comptroller and Auditor-General; the important factor has rather been his want of time, because of the other heavy work with which he has hitherto been charged, to supervise that audit sufficiently and to purge it of its tendency, if not to swallow camels, at least to strain at gnats. Our proposed reforms are calculated to give our Comptroller and Auditor-General higher authority and more leisure; while, as a result of the larger salary and better status offered to him, we shall be able to command a higher standard of ability for the post. By these means we shall hope to secure those results which your Lordship and ourselves alike desire. On the other hand, we cannot but consider that to make the Comptroller-General independent of our Government would be to confer no additional facility for securing the reforms of which we are in need, but would rather have the opposite effect; while in some quarters it might be interpreted as indicating that the change made was required to obviate defects, which have not been shown to exist, and which have no relation to those which actually do exist and which we are endeavouring to remove.

Minute of dissent by the Hon'ble Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson.

I regret to be in opposition on this question to the majority of the Council; but a principle of paramount importance is involved, and the duty of supporting it leaves me no option but to record my dissent.

2. This principle is that the Auditor-General should be subordinate to no other than the authority finally responsible for the sanctioning of the expenditure which he audits. An auditor is a judicial officer. Primarily his duty is to determine what authority should sanction the expenditure involved. It is essential that the conditions of his office should enable him to discharge this duty without fear or favour, and this he is not in a position to do, so long as he is dependent on an authority whose orders, under the rules prescribed for his guidance he may have to challenge.

3. The validity of this principle is admitted by all, but the conclusions reached are different because of the varying degree of importance which is attached to it. My Hon'ble Colleagues seem ready to depart from it because of certain inconvenience which they foresee in its application to Indian conditions. I deny that there is any real inconvenience; but even if there be and it is far more serious than it is alleged to be, in view of the enormous importance of the principle at stake, that inconvenience should be faced.

4. This is not a serious objection. Control from a distance is an incident common to many service appointments, and experience shows that it can be made fully efficient. What evidently is feared is an audit not too facile but too meticulous and severe. An unreasonable audit would immediately reveal itself as such in the reports and audit objections, and the Secretary of State, as responsible finally not only for the expenditure but for the whole administration of India, would be the first to take exception to his chief auditor assuming the attitude of mere obstruction. The objection taken approximates a suggestion that the Secretary of State will be unable to restrain his subordinate or adjust a truly independent audit to the necessities of Indian administration.

5. It is alleged that the political effect of the proposal has to be considered, but I cannot admit that the argument is weighty. If a limitation of powers is derogatory to the position of the Government of India, it exists already. Their financial powers are derived from the Secretary of State and extend no further than he authorises. From this position, the constitutional validity of which cannot be denied, the independence of the Comptroller-General follows as a necessary and inevitable consequence.

6. We cannot ensure that the head of the Government of India will always be determined to uphold the purity and independence of financial criticism. The combination of a Governor-General impatient of financial control and a complaisant Auditor-General is a contingency which, under the scheme preferred by my Hon'ble Colleagues, is as possible as it is certain to result in the imposition of Parliamentary control to a degree which may render Indian Administration well high unworkable.

7. I record this minute primarily as head of the Finance Department and responsible therefore for financial regularity; but I write it none the less as a member of the Government of India. As such I wish to consolidate our position. It is not sufficient that we should have a conscience void of offence; it must be made patent that we are above suspicion. It is wholly in our own interest to strengthen and insist on the independence of audit, and we must be able to point to an audit authority over which we have no executive influence or control.

8. It is not only wrong to postpone the issue presented to us; it is dangerous. If the reform of audit is our objective, the first essential is to remove an admitted and serious weakness in the position of the chief officer of the department from whom the whole of the audit work must take its tone and quality. Indian expenditure is now exposed to the fierce glare of hostile criticism in India and at home. Honest and sound finance has become essential to our very existence, and the only way to insure honest and sound finance is to subject the expenditure to the search-light of independent audit.

GUY FLEETWOOD WILSON.

4th February 1913.

Copy of telegram from the Secretary of State for India, dated the 10th September 1913.

Please refer to your despatch of February 7th, 1913, No. 31, I am still considering questions relating to Chief Officer of Audit and decision may for some time be delayed. Meantime, I sanction appointments of Controller of Currency and Assistant and, as recommended in your despatch No. 186 of July 11th, 1912, abolition of two appointments of Assistant Comptroller-General. Functions of Controller of Currency to be as in paragraph 9 of same despatch subject to any modifications necessary after examination mentioned in paragraph 6 of your despatch of February 7th, No. 31.

Copy of despatch from the Secretary of State for India, No. 149-Financial, dated the 28th November 1913.

Comptroller and Auditor-General and Controller of Currency.

I have now to communicate to you the result of my consideration of the proposals regarding the position of the Comptroller and Auditor-General discussed in the correspondence noted in the margin.*

* Letter from Government of India, No. 186, dated the 11th July 1912.
Telegram from Secretary of State, dated the 9th October 1912.
Letter from the Government of India, No. 31, dated the 7th February 1913.

2. In your letter of the 11th July 1912, you submitted a series of proposals of which the most important may be summarised as follows:—(A) that the Comptroller and Auditor-General should be relieved of part of his present duties which would be transferred to an officer to be known as Controller of Currency; (B) that the branches of work to be transferred to the new officer should be those connected with Mint and Assay, Paper Currency, Council Bills, Exchange, Gold Standard Reserve, Rupee Loans, Public Debt Offices, Resource (or Ways and Means), Treasury, Transfers, and Deposit and Custody of Securities; and that the duties to be retained by the Comptroller and Auditor-General should be those of Audit and Account; (C) that in order to improve the status of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, he should be appointed by the Governor-General (not the Governor-General in Council) and removable from office only by him should have the right of direct access to the Governor-General, and should draw consolidated pay of Rs. 5,000 per mensem, without exchange compensation allowance; and that his annual Appropriation Report should be addressed to the Secretary of State, being forwarded through the Government of India with their observations.

3. The ground for proposal (A) is the growth of the duties now performed by the Comptroller and Auditor-General and the desirability of relieving him so that he may have time to prepare proposals for necessary reforms and to arrange for their introduction. I am convinced of the importance of this, and I so informed you in my relegram of the 9th October 1912,

4. I felt it necessary, however, to consider further the question of the status of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, with special reference to his dependence on, or independence of, the Government of India, and the closely connected question of his retaining the duties of an accounts officer—duties which must necessarily be performed under the orders of the Government of India. The reasons necessitating special consideration of these questions are that, as is observed in your letter of the 7th February 1913, there is some theoretic force—I should have preferred to say "considerable force"—in the contention that that chief audit officer should be independent of the Government whose accounts he audits, and that this view has been to a considerable extent countenanced in the public utterances of high officers speaking on behalf of the Government. I would specially refer to the remarks made by Sir G. Fleetwood Wilson in the Imperial Legislative Council on the 25th January 1912, to his reply to Mr Gokhale's question on the 22nd March 1912, and to the remarks by the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for India in the House of Commons on the 30th July 1912.

5. In your letter of the 7th February 1913, you submit to me the result of your consideration of questions (B) and (C), you are against any change which would make the Comptroller and Auditor-General independent of the Government of India. You, therefore, adhere to the proposals made in your letter of the 11th July 1912, regarding the method of his appointment and the retention by him of the duties of an account officer in addition of those of audit. Your reasons may be summarised as follows:—(1) You consider that the appointment of an auditor independent of the Government of India would involve the corollary that he was to look for no further promotion or appointment by the Government of India, and would thus narrow the area of selection and be detrimental to efficiency. (2) You are not aware of evidence to show that the dependence of the Comptroller and Auditor-General on the Government of India as in the past militated against the proper discharge of his audit functions. (3) You are impressed by the political objections to the appointment of an independent auditor which you say would "inevitably be interpreted as an admission that the Governor-General and the Government of India, either have proved themselves incapable of controlling, or that doubts are entertained regarding their desire or ability to control, expenditure in India." (4) The appointment of an independent Chief Officer of Audit would, or might, necessitate the creation, at considerable expense, of a spearate audit staff, whereas duties of account and audit are now performed by one staff. Your views are not shared by Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson, who has recorded a dissent in which he expresses the opinion that a condition essential to the proper discharge of the duties of audit is wanting so long as the officer responsible for those duties "is dependent on an authority whose orders under the rules prescribed for his guidance he may have to challenge," and that the Government of India in their own interest ought to be in a position "to point to an audit authuority over which they have no executive influence or control."

6. The arguments summarised in the preceding paragraph seem to me to be of unequal force. The considerations mentioned by Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson are of the highest consequence, while the inconvenience that might result from carrying out the reform that he advocates is, to my mind, somewhat overstated.

I grant the value of a large field of choice in the selection of an Auditor General, but I consider that this will be secured by the status and salary proposed for the post. The post will necessarily be one where exceptional continuity of tenure will be expected, and which will not ordinarily be regarded as a stepping stone on the path of official advancement. This must equally be the case, and the possibility of exceptional promotion of an Auditor-General will equally exist, whatever be the authority by which he is appointed.

As regards the absence of distinct evidence that any evil results or shortcomings have resulted from the past subordination of the Auditor-General to the Financial Department, the argument is at best inconclusive, and I am unable to attach much weight to it.

More serious are the apprehensions, if they are well founded, that the political authority and prestige of the Government of India would suffer from the appointment of a Chief Officer of Audit wholly independent of that Government and accountable only to the Secretary of State. But I confess myself unable to share your view that the prestige of the Government of India would be affected in the manner suggested. There are other high officers in India who are neither appointed nor removable by the Government of India, but whose independence in these respects of that Government is not detrimental to its dignity and authority. Independence, in fact, in this connection is not absolute, but is relative to the proper discharge of certain duties. I think that the independence of the Auditor-General should be secured to such extent as is required for the proper discharge of the special functions, and as satifies the criterion expressed in the words quoted from your late Finance Member; and I am satisfied that this is compatible with the most scrupulous maintenance of the position and respect due to the Government of India. I desire, accordingly, to make such arrangements regarding the conditions of appointment to the post and of its tenure, as will harmonise with this intention, and also with the retention, for the present at any rate, of the existing system, under which Audit duties and Accounts duties are performed by the same staff, and the chief Audit Officer in India is also the chief Officer of Accounts and is necessarily under the orders of the Government of India in respect of the latter branch of his duties.

7. The best method of dealing with the question subject to these governing principles appears to me to be that the Comptroller and Audit or-General shall, like a Lieutenant-Governor, be appointed by the Governor-General subject to the approval of higher authority. In the case of a Lieutenant-Governor, the higher authority who gives approval is the Sovereign, but in the case of a financial appointment of this character it will be more appropriate that the approving authority shall be the Secretary of State in Council. I have accordingly decided—

(1) to sanction the appointments proposed in paragraph 13 of your letter of the 11th July 1912, No. 186, at the salaries there stated. (In my telegram of 10th September, I conveyed to you my sanction to the creation of the appointments of Controller of Currency and Assistant Controller, and to the abolition of two appointments of Assistant Comptroller-General;)

(2) to approve the division of functions between the Comptroller and Auditor-General and the Controller of Currency proposed in that letter, subject to the decision by you (the result of which would be reported to me in due course) of the questions of detail mentioned in paragraph 6 of your letter of the 7th February, No. 31;

(3) that the Comptroller and Auditor-General shall be appointed by the Governor-General, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State in Council;

(4) that he shall not be promoted, transferred, punished or dismissed, except with the approval of the Secretary of State in Council; and that, failing promotion, transfer and dismissal, he shall hold office until required by the rules of his service to retire or until he resigns or is invalided;

(5) that the annual Appropriation Report shall be addressed to the Secretary of State in Council and shall be forwarded to him by the Government of India, with any observations that they may wish to make, within a period to be specified;

(6) that the relative precedence shall be reconsidered with reference to his enhanced salary and status.

8. The duties of the Comptroller and Auditor-General in his capacity as Chief Officer of Audit will be generally the same as now, but it may at any time hereafter be necessary to require him to take part in the audit of revenue as well as in that of expenditure, just as the corresponding officer in the United Kingdom may be required by the Treasury under 29 and 30 Victoria, chapter 39, section 33, to examine and audit the account of the Revenue Departments. It should be made clear that the duty of initiating improvements and of carrying out all approved extensions of audit control is part of the ordinary duties of the post of Comptroller and Auditor-General, as now reconstituted.

9. I shall be glad to receive in due course a recommendation as to the officer to be appointed in pursuance of the decision above, and your proposals as to paragraph 7 (5) and (6).

Copy of telegram to the Secretary of State for India, No. 2297-A., dated the 22nd December 1913.

Your despatch No. 149 of 28th November. Comptroller-General. It is doubtful how far exact distribution of functions between Auditor-General and Controller of Currency previously proposed by us can be fully adhered to with due regard to certain indirect results of constitution of two appointments, e.g., effect on budgetting, etc. This question is now being examined in detail and, pending submission of proposals regarding exact range of transferred work, we ask permission to refrain from immediate action on foregoing despatch.

Copy of telegram from the Secretary of State for India, dated the 6th January 1914.

Your telegram, dated 22nd December. Comptroller-General. I agree.

Copy of despatch to the Secretary of State for India, No 210, dated the 25th June 1914.

In our telegram of the 22nd December 1913, we asked your Lordship's permission to refrain from taking immediate action on the orders contained in your despatch No. 149, dated the 28th November 1913, regarding the position and functions of the Comptroller and Auditor-General. We explained that it was doubtful how far the previous proposals for the distribution of work between this officer and the Controller of Currency could be fully adhered to, and we promised to submit further recommendations regarding the exact range of the work to be made over to the latter. This was agreed to in your Lordship's telegram of the 6th January 1914.

2. In the original proposals contained in our despatch No. 186, dated the 11th July 1912, regarding the splitting up of the functions then performed by the Comptroller and Auditor-General, we gave a broad indication of the nature of the work which would be transferred to the new officer. As soon, however, as the Controller of Currency took up his appointment, and the question arose of putting the scheme into practical effect, the necessity became apparent for a more exact delimitation of the functions to be assigned to the two officers. We then made a careful examination, in consultation with the present Comptroller-General and Controller of Currency, of the details of all the branches of work hitherto preformed by the former, and we now state the conclusions at which we have arrived.

3. The whole question turns upon the issue as to which of these two officers should give the Government of India that assistance in budget matters which has formerly been supplied by the Comptroller-General. It is recognised that accounts work must be entirely in the hands of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, and what may be called resource work entirely in the hands of the Controller of Currency. That being so, it is obvious that the latter officer must have at any rate some part, even if it be only in supplying the necessary data, in the examination of our estimates from the point of view of the ways and means arrangements for the year. In some respects, indeed, his share must be the more important, for, though it will be theoretically possible to leave to the Comptroller-General the task of dealing with some of the departmental estimates, such as those relating to the Army, on the basis of data supplied by the Controller of Currency, it is clear that the general ways and means estimate is one for which the latter officer must undertake practically the entire responsibility. Further, there is another important standpoint from which the Controller of Currency can give the Government of India valuable advice during the preparation of the budget, namely, as an expert officer in touch with trade conditions ; in that direction his assistance would in any case be required in dealing with such heads as the railways and customs estimates, and to some extent with those relating to savings bank deposits and opium.

4. For these reasons it is, we think, clear that in any event a large share of the budget work must fall upon the Controller of Currency, and while it might still be possible to assign the remainder to the Comptroller-General, the line of demarcation would be difficult to define, and there would be some loss of economy in regard both to establishments and to the time and work of the two officers. We conclude, therefore, that the only practicable course is to relieve the Comptroller-General entirely of functions connected with the budget, and to transfer them to the Controller of Currency.

5. If this decision meets with your Lordship's approval, we are of opinion that it will necessitate some re-adjustment in the salaries to be assigned to the two officers. As regards the Controller of Currency, the present sanctioned pay is Rs. 2,500—100—3,000 when the post is held by an officer of the Indian Civil Service, while an incumbent drawn from the Accounts Department is to receive his grade pay in the department with a local allowance of Rs. 200 a month For the following reasons, we propose that in the former case the pay should now be raised to Rs. 3,000—125—3,500 a month. In the first place the transfer of duties proposed above will throw on the Controller a good deal of additional and responsible work which was not contemplated when we put forward our original proposals, and will involve his residence for at least two months in Delhi during the winter season. Secondly, we are now of opinion that the pay originally proposed was in itself hardly sufficient. The duties of the post will necessitate extensive touring ; it will be necessary at the same time for the incumbent to maintain a residence at his actual headquarters in Calcutta ; and the conditions generaly will be expensive. Thirdly, the duties already definitely assigned to the Controller of Currency, and those which we now propose to transfer to him, are highly responsible, and, in particular, they will bring him into a relation of some administrative superiority to other officers whose pay is in excess of that now sanctioned for himself. Accountants-General, for example, rise to a pay of Rs. 2,750 a month, with a possible local allowance of Rs 250, while a senior Mint Master can rise to a pay of Rs. 3,000 a month. Finally, an officer of the capacity and special experience required for this important post will usually be found to possess a standing and prospects for which the pay at present sanctioned is hardly a sufficient equivalent.

6 We should also prefer, on a reconsideration of our previous proposals, to allow the same pay to an incumbent drawn from the Accounts Department. It will be obvious that the arguments in favour of a higher rate apply with hardly less force in this case, and any officer of the Accounts Department appointed to the post is sure to be of high standing and of quite exceptional merit.

7. The pay of the Comptroller and Auditor-General himself was fixed by Your Lordship at Rs. 5,000 a month on our recommendation, and with reference to our previous proposals as to the distribution of work. We have now proposed that he should be relieved of an important portion of the work which it was previously proposed to assign to him. We think that this consideration justifies a somewhat lower rate of pay, and we suggest for Your Lordship's consideration the rate of Rs. 4 500 a month. We would add that while the Comptroller-General will also be a touring officer, he will have a permanent headquarters at Delhi and will thus be to a large extent free from the heavy social obligations and other expenses usually attaching to the highest paid appointments in India.

8. We have also found it necessary to re-examine in detail, and from a practical standpoint, the question of the establishments to be allotted to the Comptroller and Auditor-General and the Controller of Currency, respectively, in consultation with the present Comptroller-General, whose conclusions are embodied in the memorandum * which forms an appendix to this despatch. We regret to find that the previous proposals were unduly sanguine in respect of the staff and establishments required. Even under the old system, the work was growing at a rate which it was unlikely that the then existing staff could cope with, and, with the creation of the new Currency appointment and the greater attention that will now be given to Currency and connected matters, the work must inevitably grow. We are satisfied that the revised proposals, which Mr. Gauntlett has worked out in considerable detail and with great care, and after consulting the Controller of Currency in so far as the latter is concerned, have been framed as economically as possible, and we commend them to Your Lordship's approval. They may be summarised as follows, the comparison being made with the staff and establishment which existed when the proposals made in our despatch No. 186, dated the 11th July 1912, were placed before Your Lordship :—

* Not printed.

9. If the foregoing proposals be accepted the total cost of the re-organisation scheme will be Rs. 5,672$\frac{7}{12}$ a month, as shown below :—

	Rs.
Increase of pay of Comptroller and Auditor-General from Rs. 3,500—100—4,000 to Rs. 4,500 a month	666$\frac{2}{3}$
Increased cost of establishment (as shown in paragraph 8 above)	1,539$\frac{1}{4}$
Pay of Controller of Currency (average)	3,366$\frac{3}{4}$
Local allowance to Assistant Controller of Currency	100
Total	5,672$\frac{7}{12}$

10. It is probable that, on taking over the full-budget work from the Comptroller-General, the Controller of Currency will require, during the first year or two, the assistance of an expert officer of the Accounts Department during the greater part of the cold weather. We propose to provide for this by placing an officer of the existing cadre on special duty, from time to time, as may be necessary.

11. In conclusion we desire to advert to certain general aspects of the important change which is about to be introduced. The foregoing proposals, so far as they affect the functions of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, will relieve him of duties not strictly connected with audit and accounts in the discharge of which he would have been subject to the control and criticism of the Government of India. They are thus, we think, entirely in the spirit of Your Lordship's previous decisions, the aim of which is to guarantee his independence and enhance his prestige. We accept these decisions cordially and with every desire to secure from them the maximum of administrative advantage; and, from this point of view, we think it would be beneficial if, at the outset of the new arrangements, Your Lordship would formulate some general pronouncement as to the manner in which the Auditor-General's functions are to be performed under the new conditions. We are reluctant to assume that nothing further is contemplated than a scale of pay and a relationship to the Secretary of State such as will serve to dispel any vague—and as we believe unfounded—idea that the Auditor-General is exposed to undue influence from the executive authorities in this country. This, in our view, would be a very narrow interpretation of the spirit of the new departure. Some indication of the attitude which we should like to see adopted has already been given in our recent proposals,* to which you have assented, for the grant of larger powers to audit officers in regard to objections on trifling matters, and also for the grant of authority to the Auditor-General to waive petty references to the Secretary of State in certain classes of cases. Underlying all the strictness which is admittedly necessary to the due performance of audit functions, there should, we think, be a constant appreciation on the part of the audit officer himself of the fact that efficient audit is only valuable as an instrument of efficient and economical administration, and that methods of interpretation and procedure, which may convert audit into an actual impediment to administration, should either be relaxed in the exercise of such discretion as Your Lordship may be prepared in the future to confer upon the Auditor-General, or be brought to notice with a view to the introduction, under proper sanction, of a better practice. Audit, again, should not confine itself to externals, but should bring to light those defects and possibilities of improvement which are beyond the scope of mechanical rules. On such lines, the rulings of the Auditor-General, as the final appellate authority on audit matters, and his right of addressing Your Lordship freely in his annual appropriation reports may well become the means of working gradually to a broader practice and tradition than now prevail; and in order to secure Your Lordship's full knowledge and concurrence at every stage, we propose, when the new appointment has been created, to transmit half-yearly a complete printed record of the Auditor-General's rulings in the preceding six months.

Despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 60-Financial, dated the 15th May 1914.

12. As regards his relationship to ourselves, the Comptroller and Auditor-General will now, in the capacity of an Audit officer, be an independent authority, and will check and bring to notice all real irregularities, and, in particular, all matters in which the sanction of the Secretary of State is required. We shall welcome any added protection which may be obtained from increased efficiency in this direction, though at the same time we should deprecate the adoption of a captious and critical attitude, which would lead to trouble and irritation outweighing the advantages to be expected from the new arrangements. As an officer of account, the Comptroller and Auditor-General remains an officer of the Government of India, and it will be his duty as hitherto, to give the utmost possible assistance in this direction. As the administrative head of a large department, the duties of which are not solely confined to audit, he will recognize that his department is still subject to the ultimate and on occasion the detailed control of the Government of India in regard to all matters of personnel, postings, discipline, and so forth. We, on our part, shall recognize the weight which must be attached to his position as the head of the department and as the officer responsible for audit efficiency.

13. We must explain, however, that, in making these remarks, we have no intention of reflecting on the present Comptroller and Auditor-General, whose action has not been in any way open to criticisms and apprehensions of the kind indicated above. But we think it advisable, on the initiation of the new system, to have clear understanding which will tend to prevent in the future an undue and exaggerated formalism which would not be in the ultimate public interest.

14. We shall address Your Lordship later, with reference to paragraph 9 of your despatch of the 28th November 1913, in regard to the definite selection of an officer for the Comptroller and Auditor-Generalship (Mr. Gauntlett who now holds the post is at present substantive pro tem. only) and shall at the same time communicate His Excellency the Viceroy's views as to the relative precedence to be assigned to him.

Copy of a despatch from the Secretary of State for India, No. 82-Financial dated the 31st July 1914.

Pay, status and duties of the Comptroller and Auditor-General and the Controller of Currency.

I have considered in Council your letter in the Finance Department, No. 210, dated the 25th June 1914, regarding the pay, status, and duties to be attached to the post of Comptroller and Auditor-General and Controller of Currency.

2. On further consideration you have come to the conclusion that it will be necessary to assign to the latter appointment a larger share of the duties hitherto discharged by the Comptroller-General and Head Commissioner of Currency than was at first contemplated, especially as regards budget work, and you accordingly recommend for the Controller of Currency a higher salary and for the Comptroller and Auditor-General a somewhat lower one than you proposed in your Finance despatch No. 186 of the 11th July 1912.

3. I recognise the force of the reasons given for these modifications of your original proposals, and sanction a salary of Rs. 4,500 a month, without exchange compensation allowance, for the Comptroller and Auditor-General and one of Rs. 3,000—125—3,500, without exchange compensation allowance, for the Controller of Currency, to be drawn by that officer whether he be a member of the Indian Civil Service or an officer of the Accounts Department.

4. I may remark that in view of the many subjects to be dealt with by the latter officer besides Currency, including matter so little akin to it as budget work, the title of Controller of Currency seems hardly to express adequately the scope of his duties. You may perhaps think it worthwhile to devise a more comprehensive designation.

5 In paragraph 11 of your letter you ask me to formulate some general pronouncement as to the manner in which the Auditor-General's functions are to be performed under the new conditions. The objects to which you attach importance are, as I understand, first, that discussion arising out of audit objections in petty cases should be as far as practicable avoided, and in any event not unduly prolonged; secondly, that the work of the Auditor-General and his department should not be confined to raising objections to expenditure or financial procedure on the ground that they are not covered by, or at variance with, the sanctions, or rules that should have been observed, but should also be directed, within suitable limits, to making suggestions tending towards economy in the expenditure of public money. I am in sympathy with both objects.

6. With a view to attaining the first, what is necessary appears to be the grant under proper regulations of discretion to the Auditor-General and officers under him to refrain from raising, or to withdraw, objections which might be sustained to particular items of expenditure on the ground of insufficient sanction or minor irregularity. I appreciate the value of the reduction that can in this way be made in the number of references on unimportant cases to myself, the Government of India, or Local Governments; and, as you remind me, I willingly agreed in two recent decisions to the grant of discretionary powers intended to have this effect in particular classes of cases. I have no doubt that it will be found from time to time that further reduction of petty references can be advantageously effected by enlargement either of the sanctioning powers of administrative authorities or of the discretionary powers of the Auditor-General and other Audit officers. I shall always be prepared to give careful consideration to recommendations made by you for action in this direction ; and I regard it as within the functions of the Auditor-General to submit, for your consideration, suggestions, based on his experience, that appear likely to be of use to you in formulating such recommendations.

7. The second object that you have in mind is connected with duties falling outside the scope of audit work in its narrower sense. It has been authoritatively recognised in this country that such duties should not be excluded from the province of the Chief Officer of Audit.* It has also been recognised that their discharge requires very great discretion since there is a risk that, in bringing to light what you appropriately describe as "defects and possibilities of improvement which are beyond the scope of mechanical rules," an Audit Officer may trench on the province of administrative authorities. With regard to India, I have come to the conclusion that I cannot with advantage say more at the present stage than that I regard the Chief Officer of Audit as at liberty to go beyond the sphere of audit work in its narrower sense when by doing so he can call the attention of the Government of India or the Secretary of State to the possibility of economy or financial regularity in the disbursement of public money, and that I rely on him, when doing so, to exercise the judgment needed to avoid the risk mentioned above. From your letter under reply, I anticipate that the Government of India will not desire that his discretion should be too closely fettered ; but, if in any case they hold that he has allowed himself too wide a scope, it will be open to them to represent their views to the Secretary of State, for his comments and decision.

*See "Epitome of the Reports from the Committees of Public Accounts, etc." Ordered by the House of Commons to be printed 9th February 1911, page 2[illegible]7 ; and Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Public Expenditure, 1903, page v.

8. If, in your opinion, the above statement gives sufficient and suitable guidance regarding the matter to which it relates, you are at liberty to communicate it to the Auditor-General. Otherwise, you will doubtless consult me further on the subject.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Monday, the 18th March, 1918.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble SIR GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C.S.I., K.C., Vice-President, presiding, and 59 Members, of whom 54 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Stoppage by the Coal Controller of wagons to certain collieries.

1. " (a) Is it a fact that the Coal Controller stopped the supply of wagons to a number of collieries on and from the 1st January, 1918, and that the ground for such non-supply of wagons is alleged to be the refusal in each case of the officer in charge of the colliery concerned to supply information verbally asked for from him by the State Railway Coal Superintendent or his Assistants ?

(b) Did the Coal Controller ask for, or take any step to obtain, any information about any colliery from its proprietor or its managing agents, as the case may be, before he issued orders stopping supply of wagons to the collieries ?

(c) Is it not a fact that there is a general order issued by colliery proprietors and the managing agents to their colliery managers and officers in charge of collieries, prohibiting them to supply any information regarding the colliery to anybody without their permission, and that the colliery proprietors and managing agents of some of the collieries referred to in (a) have submitted to the Coal Controller that such information was never wanted from the officer in charge of the colliery by either the Coal Superintendent or his Assistants ?

(d) Do Government support the action of the Coal Controller ?

[Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay ; Sir George Barnes.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

(e) Do Government propose to compensate the collieries concerned for any loss occasioned by the order of the Coal Controller stopping the supply of wagons to them ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" (a) Yes.

(b) A request was sent to the collieries concerned to supply the information withheld.

(c) The Coal Controller reports that he is not aware of any such order, and the Government of India have no information on the subject.

(d) Yes.

(e) No."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Restriction of the output and despatch of coal from certain collieries.

2. " (a) Is it a fact that the output and despatch of coal from a number of collieries were restricted by the order of the Coal Controller on and from 1st January, 1918 ?

(b) Will Government state the reasons for such order ?

(c) Are Government aware :—

(i) that some of the collieries on which the order was imposed were under contract with the Bengal-Nagpur Railway to supply coal to them ;

(ii) that the raisings and despatch of coal from these collieries have been restricted to so low a figure that they are not in a position to fulfil their contracts with the Bengal-Nagpur Railway ;

(iii) that, in consequence, the Bengal-Nagpur Railway ran so short of coal that they intercepted public coal in transit.

(d) Is it a fact that one of the reasons for the restriction of the output and despatch of coal from some collieries was to increase the output of superior coal by restricting and reducing the labour supply of the collieries working comparatively inferior coal ?

(e) Was the restriction imposed on the basis of the quality of coal raised in the several collieries ? If so, will Government lay on the table a statement showing the comparative value of coal raised from all the different collieries in the Jharia and Raneegunge fields ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" (a) Yes.

(b) The reason for the order was to ensure as large an output as possible of the better quality of coals, so that such tonnage of coal as could be transported by railways should be of the best economic value obtainable and thus go further as a steam raiser than the inferior quality coals.

(c)

(i) The answer is 'yes.'

(ii) & (iii) The restriction in the case of many collieries including the collieries mentioned by the Hon'ble Member has been modified, and I may add that their contracts with the Bengal-Nagpur Railway were so small that such restrictions as there were had nothing to do with the shortage of coal on that Railway.

(d) The answer is 'yes.'

(e) The answer to the first part of the question is 'yes'; the answer to the second part is that Government has no such statement available."

[18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay; Sir George Barnes.]

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Statement showing the collieries whose output was restricted.

3. "Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the collieries on which orders of restriction of output and despatch was imposed, and the maximum quantities of coal which each of such collieries was allowed respectively to raise and despatch on and from 1st January 1918, and also any modifications that might have been subsequently made in the order of restriction?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"A printed book* is laid on the table containing the list of collieries with restrictions modified up to date."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Conference at Calcutta re the coal trade.

4. "(a) On the 26th July 1916, did the Hon'ble Member for Commerce and Industry hold a Conference in Calcutta of the representatives of the coal trade and of important consumers of coal and of Railways?

(b) Is it a fact that serious apprehension was then entertained by Government that the supply of coal would fall short of the demand?

(c) At the Conference did the Hon'ble Member for Commerce and Industry urge the desirability of increasing the output of all kinds of coal?

(d) Are Government aware that since the Conference, and as a result of it, several collieries working second-class coal have been opened and new developments have been made in the existing second-class collieries at considerable expense?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"I am afraid that the Hon'ble Member has not read the minutes, or referred to any report of the Conference held on the 26th July 1916, to which he refers in his question. The Conference was held to discuss measures which could be adopted to prevent congestion on the Railways, and whether coal would be available in the months when Railway traffic was expected to be slack. The general opinion expressed was that there would be sufficient coal for all purposes.

The answer to (a) is 'yes,' to (b) and (c) 'no,' and (d) consequently does not arise."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Losses sustained by collieries.

5. "Have Government inquired into, and made an estimate of, the loss which will be occasioned to the collieries concerned on account of the order of restriction of output and despatch imposed on them, and do Government propose to compensate such loss? If so, when and how?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"I think that the Hon'ble Member is under an entirely wrong impression as to the action of the Coal Controller under his powers. As the Hon'ble Member is aware, the object of the Government throughout has been to prevent the diversion of labour from collieries producing the better class coals to new concerns which could only produce third class coals. When the powers of the Coal Controller came into being, a certain amount of diversion had already taken place. The Coal Controller has limited the exercise of his powers to preventing an increase of the diversion of labour which had already taken place. The pits or quarries producing the lower class coals were limited in their output to what they had been producing before the Coal Controller was appointed. Thus there have been no losses incurred except of possible and prospective profit, which of course cannot be taken into account. I would draw the Hon'ble Member's attention to the book which I laid on the table in answer to one of his previous questions. The details contained in that book will show the Hon'ble Member the care with which the Coal Controller has done his work and the consideration which has been shown to all, even to the concerns which were producing coal of a quality which it was not to the public interest to produce. Subject to these remarks, the answer to all three parts of the Hon'ble Member's question is in the negative."

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[Sir George Barnes; Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Soft coke.

6. " Is it a fact that some collieries have been restricted to despatch only soft coke ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" The answer is 'yes.' "

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Invidious treatment of certain collieries.

7. " Is it a fact that there are instances in which the output and raising of a colliery has been stopped, but its neighbouring collieries working the same seam and same quality of coal have been left unrestricted ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reason for this differentiation ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" The answer is 'no' so far as the Government are aware."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

"Commerce" on the restrictions placed on the output and despatch of coal.

8. " (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the comment made on the action of the Coal Controller in paragraph 1st, column 3rd, page 4, of the Calcutta Journal 'Commerce' of 3rd January, 1918 ?

(b) Are Government aware that there is a strong feeling prevailing amongst a section of the coal trade that the restriction of output and despatch has not been imposed on an equitable basis ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" The answer to (a) is 'yes.' Government do not believe that there is any such feeling prevailing, as suggested by the part of the question marked (b), and they feel sure that if any such feeling exists, it is not well-founded. They believe that the Coal Controller has performed his very difficult duties with fairness to all concerned. "

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Mining Board to assist the Coal Controller.

9. " (a) Is it a fact that the Indian Mining Federation in a Special General Meeting held on the 4th December, 1917, adopted and submitted to the consideration of the Hon'ble Member for Commerce and Industry a resolution that—

'This meeting desires to express its regret that, in spite of the appeal to the Government to the contrary, the Coal Committee dissolved itself on the appointment of the Coal Controller, and most deeply and strongly feels the imperative necessity of assisting the Coal Controller with a Board consisting of the representatives of the Indian Mining Association, of the Indian Mining Federation and the several representative Chambers of Commerce of the different Provinces, the Agents of the East Indian Railway and Bengal-Nagpur Railway and the Mining Engineer to the Railway Board. Without the active co-operation of such an organisation it would be extremely difficult for the Coal Controller to discharge, unaided by the experience of the trade, the onerous duties of his post. The meeting, therefore, in view of the gravity of the present situation, venture to suggest to the Government to form a Board on the lines suggested above with the Coal Controller as its head, to requisition and make purchases of coal for Government and Railway purposes, and to control and regulate the supply of coal, with further powers to initiate measures with the object of increasing the output of coal.'

(b) Is it a fact that at a Conference held by the Hon'ble Member for Commerce and Industry on the 15th January last in Calcutta, with the representatives of the Indian Mining Association, the Indian Mining Federation and the Coal Controller, Mr. L. Edwards, as spokesman of the representatives of the coal trade, submitted to the Hon'ble Member that the entire trade was unanimously of opinion that it was necessary that the restrictions imposed by the Coal Controller should all be withdrawn, and that the function of distribution of coal and of fixing the pit-mouth price of all coal, from time to time, should be undertaken by the Government in consultation with the coal trade?

(c) What action, if any, do Government propose to take with regard to the proposal made by the Indian Mining Federation in their above-mentioned resolution and the submission made by Mr. L. Edwards in the aforesaid Conference?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) A copy of the Resolution referred to was forwarded to Government.

(b) and (c) At the meeting referred to Mr. L. Edwards, the Chairman, stated at the outset that certain proposals had been agreed to at a meeting of the representatives of the Indian Mining Association and of the Indian Mining Federation prior to the meeting with myself. After full discussion with the representatives of both the Association and the Federation, it was unanimously agreed that the Coal Controller's scheme should be given a more extended trial, and that any question of the Government taking over the distribution of coal could not be considered until more knowledge had been gained from experience of the working of the Coal Controller's scheme."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Moslem representation on the Madras University.

10. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to (i) the resolution passed at the last annual meeting at Madras of the Madras Presidency Moslem League, regarding the reservation of a fourth of the elected seats in the Senate of the Madras University for Muhammadans, and (ii) the resolution passed at the District Moslem Educational Conference at Vellore (Madras) on the 17th February, regarding the desirability of amending the Indian Universities Act, VIII of 1904, so as to create a separate electorate of registered Moslem graduates for electing their own representatives to the University Senate?

(b) If so, do Government propose to consider the advisability of introducing any such change at an early date in the Universities Act?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) The Government has seen the latter but not the former of these resolutions.

(b) It is not proposed to make any amendments in the law regarding the constitution of University Senates pending receipt of the report of the Calcutta University Commission."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Railway survey between Yerragudipad and Atmakur.

11. "Will Government be pleased to state :—

(a) the result of the railway (metre gauge) survey between Yerragudipad and Atmakur in the Madras Presidency; and

(b) whether the survey line passes through or near the Banganapalle State, and if so, at what point?"

[Sir Robert Gillan; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur; Sir William Meyer; Sir Claude Hill.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

" (a) The Yerragudipad-Atmakur Railway was surveyed in the years 1908 and 1909. The cost of the section from Yerragudipad to Nandyal, 71½ miles in length, was estimated at Rs. 40·85 lakhs, and the return on capital outlay at 2·08 per cent. The cost of the section from Nandyal to Atmakur, 30 miles in length, was estimated at Rs. 14·87 lakhs and the return on capital at 2·9 per cent.

(b) The line as surveyed runs for about ¾ of a mile of its length through the Banganapalle State near Cottapalle village."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

The Super-tax Act.

12. " (a) Was the following letter dated 25th August, 1917, sent by the Government of India in the Finance Department to the Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces :—

'In reply to your letter No. 647, dated the 6th August, 1917, I am directed to say that, in determining the assessment to super-tax of the income of a Hindu undivided family, the expenditure on the maintenance of the family should be taken against income which is exempt from super-tax in so far as it can be covered by such income.'

(b) Is Government aware that lawyers having been consulted have expressed the opinion that the method of assessment suggested in the letter is ultra vires and contravenes the provision of section 2, sub-clause (b) of the Super-tax Act, which enjoins that 'in the case of a Hindu undivided family, so much of the joint income of such family as has been actually expended or paid for the maintenance or other expenses of any member of such family or paid or finally allotted to any such member' should be deducted from the total assessable income accruing to the family from all sources ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to consider the question of withdrawing the letter ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) If a Hindu undivided family possessing income which is exempt from super-tax were permitted to charge the expenditure on the maintenance of the family not against that income but against income liable to the tax, it would obtain a double benefit which it was not the intention of the Super-tax Act to give. The Government of India do not therefore propose to withdraw their letter."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

The Imperial Agricultural Service.

13. " Will Government be pleased to state (a) how many Indians have been promoted to officiate in the Imperial Agricultural Service in the different Provinces during the last two years ; and

(b) whether any posts in that Service are still vacant, and, if so, why ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a) A statement* is laid on the table giving the information asked for in part (a) of the question.

(b) There are at present several vacancies in the Imperial Agricultural Service, but the majority of these posts have been sanctioned by the Secretary of State, on the understanding that no steps will be taken to fill them until financial conditions materially improve, and until the necessary budget provision has been made and admitted. The Hon'ble Member's attention is also invited to my reply* to a similar question asked by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul on the 6th February regarding the difficulties which have been experienced in securing suitable candidates during the war."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Case of Babu Probodh Chandra Banerjea.

14. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a paragraph in the 'Bengalee' of the 6th October, 1917, disclosing certain inaccuracies in the reply given by the Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan to my question asked in this Council on the 19th September last regarding the treatment accorded to Babu Probodh Chandra Banerjee by Mr. B. F. Higman of the East Indian Railway on the 30th June last?

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the statement in the said paragraph that an attempt was made by the Traffic authorities of the East Indian Railway to have Probodh Babu pronounced unfit for further service by suggesting to the Railway Company's Doctor that he was a victim to epileptic fits?

(c) If so, do Government propose to make an inquiry into the allegations contained in the said paragraph?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"(a) Yes.

(b) I am assured that no attempt was made by the railway authorities to influence the opinion of the Doctor.

(c) The Government do not propose to make any further inquiry into the matter I may mention that three months' sick leave was sanctioned from 1st July 1917 and subsequently extended to seven months, and an additional five months has since been sanctioned on medical certificate."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Case of assault committed by Lieutenant Widdicombe.

15. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the case of assault committed by Lieutenant Widdicombe upon Rai Bahadur Sultan Singh of Delhi?

(b) Is it the case that upon the Rai Bahadur inquiring of Lieutenant Widdicombe regarding an assault committed upon his servant, Lieutenant Widdicombe struck him on the eye, smashing his eye glass?

(c) Is it the case that Lieutenant Widdicombe was convicted and fined Rs. 25 by the trying Magistrate for the offence committed by him?

(d) Do the authorities, Civil and Military propose to take any further action in this connection?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a), (b), (c) A copy of the judgment† of the Magistrate who tried the case is laid upon the table, together with a copy of the orders passed by the Sessions Judge.

(d) Legal advice has been taken as to the propriety of making an application for revision to the Chief Court but is not favourable. Disciplinary action has been taken by the military authorities. I may add that Rai Bahadur Sultan Singh, who was informed of the action that was being taken, deprecated an application being made to the Chief Court."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Modification of the Universities Act, 1904.

16. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the recent Resolution of the Bombay University recommending to the Government of India certain changes in its constitution?

* Vide page 455 of Council Proceedings of 6th February, 1918.
† Not included in these Proceedings.

[Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Sir George Barnes; Sir William Vincent.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

(b) Is it the intention of Government to modify the Universities Act of 1904 so as to liberalise the constitutions of the Indian Universities ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) The Government of India do not propose to undertake any alteration in the existing constitutions of the Indian Universities pending the receipt of the report of the Calcutta University Commission."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Cotton gambling.

17. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following passage in a telegram that appeared in the Englishman of the 22nd February last purporting to be a message from the Associated Press;

'Bombay, February 20.

There is a general consensus of opinion that Government should take some action to check gambling in cotton, without which it will not be possible to reduce or control the prices of Indian cloth which is generally used by the poor masses in India. A contemporary states that the recent decision of the railway authorities, especially the Great Indian Peninsula administration, has greatly affected the local cotton market. Rumours of heavy speculation and gambling of all sorts is reported to be rife and an extraordinary state of things is said to have come into existence. Bulls and bears are operating fiercely A clique of the former is understood to have taken full advantage of the railways' decision and creating a difficult position because within a short time after the railway decision the market went from R50 to R80, while there was very little chance in overseas markets. Several people sold their cotton against holdings up-country, but as they were not able to get the same to Bombay, they were obliged to pay differences according to prices fixed for settlement purpose.'

(b) If what is stated above is substantially correct, do Government propose to take some action to check gambling in cotton, and will Government indicate what action, if any, they propose to take ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The answer is 'yes'.

With regard to (b) the matter has received and is receiving the anxious consideration of the Government of India. They have consulted the Bombay Government and have decided to appoint a strong Committee of persons interested in the trade in cotton cloth and in raw cotton from whom they hope to get both advice and assistance. As the Hon'ble Member will remember I gave the names of this Committee to Council a few days ago."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Shooting affair in a train at Wazirabad station.

18. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the reports which have been published in the newspapers regarding a shooting affair in a railway train at Wazirabad station on the 13th February last as a consequence of which a man lost his life ?

(b) In view of the public attention which this case has attracted, do Government propose to make an inquiry into it and place the facts of the case before the Council ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"I would draw the attention of the Hon'ble Member to the communiqué* issued by the Government of the Punjab, a copy of which is laid upon the table."

*Not included in these Proceedings.

[18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir George Barnes.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Rise in the price of Hessians.

19. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the steady rise in the price of hessian and has the price risen approximately from R10 per 100 yards in July last to R50 in February?

(b) Is it a fact that hessian is used for packing articles and for various domestic purposes?

(c) Do Government propose to take measures to restrict the rise in the price of hessian?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"With regard to (a) a statement* is laid on the table giving market reports of actual sales during July, 1917 and February, 1918. The figures represent the prices of 40" 10½ oz. cloth, which is the standard hessian cloth. It will be seen that the prices for ready delivery were never so low as R10, but varied from R17-12-0 to R19-8-0 during July 1917 and from R49 to R58 during February 1918, and that the prices for forward delivery were considerably lower. The reason for the high prices paid for ready as compared with forward delivery is partly the keenness of the Overseas trade demand, accentuated by the extent of Government orders which absorb about 25 per cent of the Mills' output; partly the scarcity of freight space which has frequently to be filled at short notice with the result that purchases have to be made immediately on the allotment of shipping orders. The rate fixed for British Government orders is approximately R14 expressed in terms of this cloth.

(b) Hessian cloth is used principally for manufacture into bags for carrying produce, apart from its use for manufacture into sandbags for military purposes.

(c) In reply to the third part of the question the Government have no present intention of controlling the price of hessians."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

State prisoners confined under Regulation III of 1818.

20. "(a) Is it enjoined under Bengal Regulation III of 1818 that due attention should be paid to the health of every State prisoner confined under the said Regulation, and suitable provision made for his support according to his rank in life and to his own wants and those of his family?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing Province by Province—

(i) the number of State prisoners detained under the Regulation since 4th August, 1914;

(ii) the places of their detention;

(iii) any variations in the prisoner's weight since detention in each case;

(iv) any instances in which symptoms of any constitutional diseases or mental derangement may have been developed during detention;

(v) age, occupation and earnings previous to detention in each case."

Reports on the conduct, health and comfort of State prisoners.

21. "(a) Does section 3 of Bengal Regulation III of 1818 require officers in whose custody State prisoners may be placed to submit reports on the conduct, health and comfort of such prisoners on the 1st January and the 1st of July of each year?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table all such reports received since August 1914, together with all orders of the Governor General in Council thereon?"

Appointment of visitors to State prisoners.

22. "(a) Is it a fact that appointments have been made of visitors of State prisoners under Bengal Regulation III of 1818?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to make a statement showing, Province by Province, the names of such visitors, their professions, the places for which they have been appointed, their respective dates of appointment and

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir William Vincent.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

the number of visits paid by each visitor to each individual State prisoner, and the purport of the reports made by each regarding the health of the prisoner visited and his treatment under the Regulation?"

Reports under Section 6 of Regulation III of 1818.

23. "(a) Have the Government received any reports under section 6 of Bengal Regulation III of 1818, or have any such reports been called for from any officer in whose custody State prisoners may have been placed, as to whether the degree of confinement to which any individual State prisoner was subjected appeared liable to injure his health, and as to whether the allowance fixed for his support was adequate to the supply of his own wants and those of his family?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table all such reports as may have been received since August 1914.

(c) In how many instances since August 1914 in each Province have State prisoners been kept in solitary confinement, and for what portion of the total days of confinement up to date?"

Treatment of State Prisoners.

24. "(a) Have the Government of India or any Local Government received any representations from any State prisoners relating to their treatment, health and comfort and the insufficiency of the allowance received by them?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state the purport of all such representations since August 1914 and the orders passed thereon?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"I propose to answer this and the following four questions by the Hon'ble Member together. He has stated with substantial accuracy the provisions of Regulation III of 1818. A full history of every individual concerned is submitted to, and carefully considered by, the Government of India before a warrant is issued. After the issue of a warrant the Local Government submits two further reports. The first is the report, whether the degree of confinement to which the prisoner is subjected appears liable to injure his health. These reports have, with one exception, been in the negative sense. In that case orders were subsequently issued for the release of the individual in question.

The second report deals with the question of the allowances for the support of the prisoner and his family. As the wants of the prisoners are supplied by Government, no allowances have been granted for their personal maintenance. A large proportion of them were absconders or dependant upon their families for their maintenance; but allowances for their families have been granted in 37 cases From time to time representations have been received as to the adequacy of the allowances granted in particular cases, and these have formed the subject of further correspondence with Local Governments and revision when necessary. The further reports required by law are duly received by Government, and where any omission in this respect comes to the notice of the Government of India, the attention of the Local Government is drawn to the matter. In practically all cases the District Magistrates are the public officers appointed by Government to visit the prisoners at stated periods and to submit a report to Government regarding their health and treatment. These visits are paid monthly and any complaints are either dealt with on the spot or under the orders of the Local Government or, when necessary, under the orders of the Government of India.

The number of persons detained under the Regulation since August 1914, is 125. In the case of 10 the warrants have since been cancelled and orders have recently issued cancelling the warrants in 4 other cases.

The ages of the prisoners at the time their detention was ordered ranged from 19 to 43, the average being 26. Besides the complaints dealt with in the reports submitted by the appointed visitor already referred to, 9 petitions have been received from the prisoners themselves and one from a relation of a prisoner. In these cases due inquiry has been made through the Local Government and such orders passed as were deemed proper.

[18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent; Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Sir Robert Gillan.]

A copy of the rules* in force regarding the nature of detention and other matters relating to these prisoners is laid upon the table: and attention is also drawn to the answer given by Sir R. Craddock to Mr. Basu in this Council on 16th February 1917 dealing with the character of their confinement.

These rules have recently been considerably relaxed particularly in the matter of the association and opportunities for exercise permissible to both classes of detenus. Further relaxations will be made where found desirable and compatible with the safe custody of the prisoners.

As regards instances in which the prisoners have appeared to have developed symptoms of constitutional disease or mental derangement, apart from trivial or temporary ailments which have yielded to treatment, the following cases have occurred. One prisoner developed tubercular trouble. He was thereupon transferred to another jail where he could have the benefit of a good hospital with a tubercular ward, and has since gained in weight. Symptoms of jaundice and biliary colic were detected in another prisoner and he was subsequently released from jail. Another prisoner showed slight symptoms of asthma. He was admitted to hospital and is reported to be doing well. A fourth prisoner suffered from dysentery and as it was thought a change would do him good he was transferred to another district. A fifth case of a prisoner who had suffered from asthma from childhood was recently reported to be in good health having completely recovered from his disease. In a sixth case a prisoner complained of shortsightedness. His eyes were tested by an optician and spectacles were supplied to him. In three cases symptoms of mental derangement were noticed. In two of these cases the men have been released from jail and in the third case the prisoner has been placed under treatment and observation in a Lunatic Asylum.

Government do not propose to lay upon the table copies of the various reports and complaints received or information as to the places of detention or other details asked for regarding the prisoners, as they do not think it is in the general interest to advertise them publicly. The compilation also of a statement regarding their weight, occupation and earnings would involve a disproportionate amount of correspondence, time and labour, but if the Hon'ble Member requires particular information about any individual, I shall be happy to supply it for his personal information. He is doubtless aware that these prisoners are at liberty to communicate with their relations.

The information I have given has involved the examination of an enormous volume of papers, and the investigations necessary could not in some cases be extended to the period since January 1st of this year."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

" May I point out that the Hon'ble Member has not answered that part of my question which refers to solitary confinement ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" I would refer the Hon'ble Member to the copy* of the rules which I am laying on the table."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Earnings of railways.

25. " (a) Is it true or partially true that the railways exclusively managed by the State earn a less revenue compared to the earnings of the railways owned by the State but managed by Companies ?

(b) If the answer to (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the principal reason or reasons for this difference in the earnings ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

" It is a fact that the railway systems worked by the State give in the aggregate a smaller return on capital expended than the systems worked by Companies. I deprecate, however, any comparison being based on figures of this kind, because of the very varied conditions obtaining on different systems in respect of density of traffic, cost of coal, gradients and other factors, which would make any inference drawn from them entirely untrustworthy."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Profits earned by companies which manage State Railways.

26. "Will Government be pleased to state what has been the share of the profits earned by each of the companies which have managed the railways owned by the State from 1910-11 to 1916-17?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"It is understood that the question refers to the railways worked by what are generally known as the 'Guaranteed Companies.' These companies work railways which have been financed mainly by Government but towards the capital of which the companies have themselves contributed. The amounts paid to such companies as their share of profits during the period 1910-11 to 1916-17 are shown in the statement* which is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Purchase of Stores.

27. "Will Government be pleased to state the value and nature of stores purchased from each individual or firm, specifying the name, in India, England and elsewhere, say for each of the six years commencing with 1911-12 and ending with 1916-17?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member's inquiry is, I presume, intended to refer only to purchases of stores for the Government of India; but even so it would be impossible to answer the question without the expenditure of a large amount of time and labour in the various departments concerned throughout India and the India Office. The research involved would probably be found to necessitate the employment of a special staff, and, in any case, the expenditure of the time and labour would not, in the opinion of the Government, be justified."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

Re-organisation of the Educational Services.

28. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether replies have been received from Local Governments to the letter issued by the Education Department regarding the re-organisation of the Educational services? Will Government be pleased to place on the table such replies?

(b) Is it proposed to appoint some Indians to the Indian Educational Service in class 1 in the near future, and, if so, in what Provinces?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member's attention is drawn to the reply given on the 1st March 1918 to a similar question by the Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri. Since then the reply of the United Provinces Government has been received, and copies are placed on the table. Replies from the Governments of Bengal and Madras and the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces have not yet been received.

(b) The Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the reply† given to the Hon'ble Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri on the 5th March 1918, regarding the proposals, which are under consideration, for appointing Indians to the existing permanent vacancies in the Indian Educational Service."

INDIAN DEFENCE FORCE BILL.

11-25 A.M.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—"Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—"Sir, it will be in the recollection of Council that last year the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma moved a Resolution in which he advocated the extension of the period within which candidates might offer themselves for enrolment under clause 12 (1) of the Indian Defence Force Act. In reply, it was explained that the maximum strength of the Indian portion of the Indian Defence Force was fixed with reference to the number that could be trained, armed and equipped, having regard to our commitments in the various theatres of war. As it was then anticipated that the numbers would be more than we could train and equip, the Government of India decided not to extend the statutory period. A promise, however, was made to re-examine the question this year when the training of the first batch of those who offered themselves for enrolment was completed, and further experience was thus gained to guide us in the way in which a force of this character could best be developed.

"As I remarked last year, the Government of India are fully in sympathy with those whose avocations prevent them from joining the regular army, but who are desirous of receiving some military training through the medium of the Indian Defence Force. I, therefore, watched the progress of the Force with great interest, and have done my best to assist and encourage its development. Results, as might have been expected, have been somewhat unequal. The numbers actually enrolled were a good deal less than anticipated, while the numbers rejected on medical grounds were higher, in spite of a considerable reduction of physical standards. Nevertheless, the results obtained have, in my opinion, been sufficiently encouraging to justify our going on with the scheme. We have actually in training, or which have completed their training, Indian units of the Defence Force in Calcutta, Madras, Poona, Lahore and Burma. As far as University corps are concerned, we have now got four units under training, namely, one in Bombay, one in Calcutta and Dacca combined and one in Allahabad. We thus have the nuclei of one mounted and several infantry organizations which should, in course of time, prove of considerable value, as the young men of which they are composed are quick to learn and ready to serve. Minor difficulties have arisen from time to time in the application of administrative details connected with the Force, and it is not always easy for us to adjust training conditions in University Corps so as to secure a reasonable standard of efficiency without interfering with studies and examinations. I am glad to say, however, that these difficulties, which must be always expected at the inception of a scheme of this sort, have been overcome, and by next year I hope to be able to report that the Force has been established on sound foundations and is making steady progress both in numbers and efficiency. The scope of the Bill which I am introducing is clearly stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and calls for no additional remarks. The Bill will have the effect of removing existing restrictions on enlistment, and so enables us to obtain, and if necessary to extend, the Indian units of the force as suitable men offer themselves for service and as the military situation may demand.

"I now, Sir, beg to introduce the Bill."

11-30 A.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah:—"Sir, I am sure...."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I understand that His Excellency will move to suspend the Rules of Business in order to allow the Bill to be taken into consideration. Perhaps it would be more convenient for the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, to make any remarks he wishes to make then. At present the Bill has only been introduced. I do not wish to prevent anyone who wishes to speak from doing so. I only suggest that the later stage will be more convenient."

11-31 A.M. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief :—" I beg to move that the Rules of Business be suspended to admit of the Bill being taken into consideration."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" I suspend the Rules of Business."

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief :—" I beg, Sir, to move that the Bill be now taken into consideration."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief :—" I beg, Sir, to move that the Bill be passed."

11-32 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—" Sir, I am sure that the Council will welcome the decision of the Government to extend the period, as is intended by this Bill. I may say also—and I am sure that it will be endorsed by the public—that we rejoice very much indeed that the bar which hitherto existed against Indians holding the King's Commission has been removed.

" Sir, there are certain grievances and complaints which still exist, in connection with the formation of Indian units under the Act, but I have no doubt that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will, as we go on, put them right. I only wish to strike this note to-day—and I am sure that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief knows better and perhaps is more alive to it than anybody else—that it is absolutely essential that the Government and the military authorities should recognise that we should have a citizen army as soon as possible, because India must recognise that there are possibilities of external as well as internal danger."

11-33 A.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Sir, I am extremely thankful to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief for having introduced a Bill to-day extending the period, in accordance with the promise which he held out when I moved a Resolution last year on the subject. My earnest hope is that the country will take advantage of the facilities now granted by the Government, and will join the Indian Defence Force in large numbers. I only wish to suggest, Sir, that the Government and His Excellency should, on the other hand, also see that adequate encouragement is given to the young men who wish to join the Defence Force by giving them facilities for training in the higher branches of military art, so that, if they should befit themselves for the task, they may be entrusted with the higher commands in the Indian Defence Force."

11-34 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" I wish to add just one observation to those which have fallen from my Hon'ble friends. I would like to state, for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, that in some of the provinces the full complement has been made up—I think Bengal is in that position—and it is possible to get more men for the Defence Force from these provinces. Speaking of Bengal, I know that there is considerable enthusiasm among our young men, especially in the colleges, to enlist in this Force Would it not be possible for His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to add to the number allowed to Bengal and Provinces similarly situated? I think our number is 1,000 for Bengal, Bihar and Orissa put together. This seems to me to be a very small number for three provinces. Would it not be possible, in view of the extension of time that has been granted, to raise the number, say, to 2,000. I throw out this suggestion for the consideration of His Excellency, in order that full advantage may be taken of the enthusiasm which exists in this connection."

11-35 A.M.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief :—" In reference to the observations which fell from the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, he can rest assured that I shall carefully consider the recommendations which he has made. I am in agreement with him that we want, as far as is possible, to ensure that our young men shall receive some form of training which will qualify them for service in a citizen army. He can also rest assured that, as far as I am able in my position as Commander-in-Chief, I will always give his suggestions my close attention.

" In respect of the higher training which is recommended by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, we have that in view of course. But we have to follow the main principle that you must learn to walk before you can run, and when we have established a good basis of training in the more elementary subjects, we shall certainly proceed to the higher training of those who have perfected themselves in the more elementary portions of their duties.

" In respect of the suggestions kindly offered to us by the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea, I should explain that in the equipping and raising of this Force we have always to consider what we can spare after providing for the needs of various theatres of war, more especially in respect of the essential requirements of a new organization, namely, instructors, equipment and other details of that kind, which are of the utmost importance. His suggestions will receive full attention, and, as far as we are able to comply with them, we shall do so."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION RE PENSION FOR CIVIL OFFICERS.

11-37 A.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" Sir, I move that—

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that a representation be made to the Secretary of State for India that the maximum pension limits fixed for Civil officers should not be increased.'

This Resolution does not deal with the Indian Civil Service whose annuities the Council had under its consideration in the last Simla Session. With regard to the other services the present rule is that whatever the salaries drawn by officers and however long they might have served, their pensions should in no case exceed Rs. 5,000 a year. The Public Services Commission recommend that this maximum limit of Rs. 5,000 be raised to Rs. 6,000, with an alteration of an important nature that, instead of the extra thousand being paid all at once, it should be paid by increments in the case of officers who retire after the twenty-fifth year of service, but who complete one or more years of service. In the case of officers who complete one year of service after the twenty-fifth, they recommend an additional pension of Rs 200 a year; in the case of officers who retire after two years, Rs. 400, and so on up to the end of the thirtieth year of service when the new maximum of Rs. 6,000 will be earned. This provision is estimated to cost about 9½ lakhs of rupees.

" There is also another recommendation which the Commission have made, and that is, with regard to a class of pensions called special additional pensions amounting to Rs. 1,000 a year extra paid in the case of officers who retire after having done to the State service in certain scheduled appointments which are of a high character as regards their responsibility. When in this class of post an officer has done three years of work and shown special energy and efficiency, he is given an additional pension of Rs. 1,000 a year. The Commission recommend in the first place that the schedule of such offices of responsibility be increased considerably.

"In the second place, they recommend that instead of Rs. 1,000 per year this additional pension should be increased to Rs. 1,500 a year—with an alteration in this case as in the former of an important nature. For each year an officer of this class is to receive an additional pension of Rs. 300 a year; so that if in one of these appointments carrying high responsibility an officer puts in one additional year of service he gets for all the rest of his life an additional pension of Rs. 300 a year. This Rs. 300 is to be increased at the rate of Rs. 300 a year for five years until the maximum of Rs. 1,500 might be earned. This provision is estimated to cost 2 lakhs and three-quarters; so that these two provisions together will cost 12 lakhs a year to the State.

"Now, I submit, Sir, that there is no sufficient cause shown for the enhancement of these pensions. I have more than once before drawn attention to the need of great economy in the management of India's finances. An increase in the non-effective charges must be explained by very good reasons indeed. I am unable to read in the report any such weighty reasons. Twelve lakhs a year is a very considerable sum to spend merely on pensions. I have no doubt that every officer concerned would be able to make out what he would call a satisfactory case; but there is no country in the world which can afford to squander its money—not even the richest. When we consider further that for the part of these pensions which is paid out of India in gold-using countries, payment is at the rate of 1*s*-9*d*. a rupee—that is a privileged rate though the exchange value is 1*s*.-4*d*.—we have every reason to be careful as to the way in which these pensions ought to be added to.

"It may be said that there are inequalities in these pensions, that there are anomalies in the pension system which have got to be rectified. But in my opinion the rectification of anomalies and inequalities is something like the formation of a scientific frontier of which we used to hear sometime ago. Inequalities and anomalies may be rectified to-day, but they have a knack of turning up again to-morrow, probably in a worse form. Every time that we allow claims of this kind to be registered for favourable consideration, I am afraid the demands upon the State will grow. One suggestion that is made is, that the recruitment of officers of the stamp we require will be facilitated if we offer higher rates of pension. Not having been a Government servant myself, I am not able to say how far a young man wishing to enter a service—where even the service terms are very good—takes into calculation the amount of pension that he will earn at the end of his service, and whether the difference between Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 6,000 a year is so great that it would really improve the class of recruits that we are going to draw. I cannot resist the temptation of describing this as a luxury—an unjustifiable expenditure of money—that the Commission has recommended. Therefore, I move the Resolution which stands in my name."

11-46 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid:—"Sir, I rise to oppose this motion, but I hope the Council will understand that I do not do so as a representative of the Government of Bombay or acting under instructions in any way from that Government. I rise simply to oppose this Resolution as a private Member anxious to defend, so far as I can, the interest of those services which are affected by it.

"Now what are the facts of the case. In the year 1855, the Government of India, which was then the East India Company, fixed the pensions of their uncovenanted officers—a very convenient term which although it does not exist now I shall ask the leave of the Council to use during the course of my few remarks. They fixed the pensions of these uncovenanted officers at half the pay which they enjoyed before retirement, subject to a maximum of Rs. 5,000 a year, but in certain special cases where officers held highly placed appointments, they raised the maximum to Rs. 6,000. At the time these pensions were fixed, the value of the rupee was from 2*s*-2*d*. to 2*s*-6*d*. The price of commodities was low, the standard of living was far lower than it is now, and the number of large incomes both in India and in England was far smaller than it is at present. An uncovenanted officer was then able to save—a thing he can never do now—during his service in India, and it was not unreasonable for him to look forward to putting by enough money to give him an income of Rs. 2,500 in addition to the Rs. 5,000 pension. In view of the prices then existing of commodities and the standard of living then prevailing in England, I think I may say without fear of contradiction that a man who drew an income of Rs. 7,500 a year in 1855 was able to occupy a social standing quite equal to that occupied now by a man who has £2,000 a year.

"Since 1855, this rate of pension has never altered, but I am sorry to say the exchange value of the rupee has altered very considerably. In the eighties came the fall in the price of silver and the rupee went down to 1*s.* 1*d.* In the early nineties the Government of India fixed the exchange value of the rupee at 1*s.* 4*d.*, and as an alleviation of the inconveniences to which the uncovenanted services were exposed, they fixed the rate of pension at 1*s.* 9*d.* But still when you come to think of it, it was a very different prospect which they actually had to face from what they had looked forward to. Instead of getting £500 they were only getting £437. Ever since then, Sir, the price of commodities has gone on rising, the standard of living has gone on rising, and the number of small incomes both in India and in England has risen enormously. If we read the evidence given by the various gentlemen, both English and Indian, who gave evidence before the Public Services Commission in 1913, we find the burden of their song to be this: 'Whatever else you do for us, raise our pensions—they are too small; after living in India and serving India for 30 years, we cannot when we go home keep up the standard of living to which we are accustomed.' This was the gist both of the evidence given by Mr. Dutt, an Indian speaking on behalf of the Finance Department, and of the evidence given by British officers speaking on behalf of other departments. This evidence so influenced the Public Services Commission that they made certain recommendations—in the opinion of the Hon'ble Mover, they were exaggerated recommendations, in my humble opinion they are extremely modest recommendations. The first was that an officer after 25 years' service should be entitled to draw $\frac{25}{60}$ths of the pay he was getting at the time of retirement. The second recommendation was that the maximum for ordinary pensions should be raised from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 6,000; and in the case of privileged pensions the Rs. 1,000 addition should be increased by another Rs. 500.

"Now, if we examine the first concession we see, Sir, that it is really no concession at all. As a matter of fact at present a man, if he gets a medical certificate can retire after 25 years' service on $\frac{25}{60}$ths of the salary he is actually drawing, and if he is not ill enough to get such a certificate, the $\frac{25}{60}$ths pension is so ridiculously small that he will make every effort to hang on if he possibly can for five more years so as to get his full pension. The Hon'ble Mover went into the details of the second and third recommendations, but broadly speaking they come to this, that a man instead of retiring on Rs. 5,000 after 30 years' service will retire on Rs. 6,000, and that an officer who has held a higher office instead of retiring on Rs. 6,000 will retire on Rs. 7,500. The Hon'ble Mover said that those are very big figures and that no Government can afford not to be economical in its disbursements. Well, that is a general proposition to which we all agree. But the real question is, whether the proposed pensions are excessive or not. A good test is afforded by a comparison with the pensions obtaining in the Home Civil Service. The Home Civil servant lives in his own beautiful country; he has not got to incur expensive trips across seven thousand miles to recruit his own health or that of his wife; he has not got to send his children away for education; he has not to make enormous remittances home at a ruinous rate of exchange; he has to undergo none of the partings, none of the separations, none of the miseries which have introduced such a lot of unhappiness into the lives of Anglo-Indians. Now, Sir, you would have thought that an officer who had done his service under such exceptional conditions would, when the time came for pension, be worse off than his Anglo-Indian brother. This Council will be surprised to hear that the exact contrary is the case. The Home Civil servant when he retires gets half of the pay he was getting when he retired, subject to no maximum whatever. He also gets under the Annuation Act of 1909, $\frac{1}{30}$th of his salary which he was drawing for every year of his service paid to him as a lump sum; that, Sir, is a valuable concession, because whether he lives or dies it forms a provision for his wife and children. Now, a concrete instance will make my meaning clear. Supposing your home civil servant was getting a salary of £2,000 a year. After 30 years' service he will get a pension of £1,000 a year; he will also get $\frac{30}{30}$ths of his pay as a lump sum that is to say, £2,000. Compare with this his unfortunate Anglo-Indian brother who is getting £2,000; he will get Rs. 6,000 paid at 1*s.* 9*d.* rate or £500, or half of what the Englishman gets, and he will get no lump sum whatever. So that if he dies the day after he gets his pension, his wife and children, so far as their claims against Government are concerned, are left absolutely destitute.

"Now, Sir, I have approached this subject from the Englishman's point of view. But the Indian's point of view is exactly the same when you come to think of it. The Indian in the superior ranks of the service has probably adopted English methods of living, English methods of housing; he wishes probably to send his sons to England for their education, and above all he does not get his pension paid at an exchange rate of 1*s.* 9*d.*; he only gets Rs. 5,000 a year at the current rate of exchange. I submit, therefore, that there is a very good case from the Indian point of view for increasing their pensions also. I have only dealt with the situation as existing up to 1913, the time when the Commission took their evidence. If the Council will excuse my introducing a personal experience into this debate, I was in England the whole of 1916, part of 1915 and part of 1917; and I can assure the Council that the unfortunate conditions which I referred to have been seriously aggravated by the existence of the war. I was drawing a nominal furlough allowance of £1,000 a year. Owing to the Income-tax which is 4 annas in the rupee and not one anna in the rupee as in India, I was actually paid by the Government only £680. Of course some of the deduction was due to cuttings for family pension, funds. But other men have to provide for their wives and children also. I can assure this Council that owing to the rise in the prices of commodities, the increase in the prices of travel and the difficulty of getting anything you wanted, I found it extremely difficult to make both ends meet; and if I, with a nominal salary, of £1,000 a year found it very difficult to live, what must be the difficulties of the unfortunate gentlemen who have to live on a nominal salary of £437 a year? Well, Sir, it may be said (I expected the Hon'ble Mover to suggest it and though he has not done so yet, he may do so in his reply) 'Oh, yes, that is all very well; possibly it may be right to increase the pensions of the civil servants; but there are in this country an enormous number of ill-paid subordinates whose pay at present is almost at starvation point and whose pay ought to be raised.' Well, Sir, I am also in agreement with this point; but I have a few figures which I shall show to this Council. If the 12 lakhs referred to by the Hon'ble Member as the cost at which these improvements of pensions of civil servants have been estimated, be devoted to enhancing the pay of such subordinates, it will produce little or no result. When I say ill-paid subordinates, I include specially the rank and file of the police, the most faithful, the most loyal and the most enduring body of men in the service of the Government of India to-day. I have not got the figures for the Government of India, but I have been able to get some figures from the Government of Bombay; at present there are in the rank and file (I exclude officers) of the Bombay district police, 23,000 men; if you add to that figure those in the Bombay city police, and those in the excise, preventive and salt and in the offices of the judicial and of the executive, that number comes to about double or 46,000. There are 10 administrations in India, some bigger, some smaller than my own presidency; and multiplying the figure by 10 we get 460,000; and dividing 12 lakhs by this figure you get a little under Rs. 4 per man; that means to say that if you devote these 12 lakhs to raising the pay of these subordinate employés, of the [18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Kincaid; Sir, James DuBoulay.]

Government of India, each man will get a little less than Rs 3—a perfectly negligible amount—a year or about 4 annas per month. Well, Sir, I have always heard that it is an unsound policy to rob Peter to pay Paul, but to rob Peter to pay Paul and then find yourself unable to pay Paul strikes me as verging on the idiotic. It was only two or three days ago that the Hon'ble Mover urged on this Council, with the eloquence to which we are accustomed, that we should raise the age of candidates into the Police Service. He said he wanted no immature lads, half educated, only fit to pass the school-leaving examination; for his part he wanted India to have lads of the highest education, of the highest capacity, of the highest intelligence. Well, Sir, those are very excellent sentiments with which I do not suppose anybody will quarrel; but I would suggest to the Hon'ble Mover and some of his friends that lads of the highest education capacity and intelligence are after all only human beings; and when they hear that the Hon'ble Mover and his friends are constantly bringing forward in this Council Resolutions with the object of thwarting their interests and keeping their pensions down, as much as they possibly can, it is not very likely that they will respond to his amiable invitation. I will, therefore, for these reasons, ask the Council to reject this Resolution, and I would, in this appeal, specially include those gentlemen who represent the landowning interests, for whom many of us voted the other day. I would ask them to do so, to throw out this Resolution, not only because I consider it a bad or ill-judged Resolution, but as a tribute of confidence in those services which are affected by this Resolution, to the members of those services, men who have given their youth, their intelligence, their capacity, their industry, not half-heartedly, not grudgingly, but whole-heartedly, ungrudgingly and with both hands in the service of this country."

12 P. M.

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay:—"Sir, the present Secretary of State when he was introducing the subject of the Public Services Commission to the notice of the House of Commons said that it was necessary to have a European element in most of the services. European officers must be given pay and prospects sufficient to induce them to join these services, and when good men have been trained and induced to join, they must be placed in positions of responsibility adequate to their merits. He said of the services, other than the civil service, that each of them had their grievances. In the following year talking on the same subject he said 'I do not want to say one word which would prejudge the conclusions, but I do want to say that we cannot go on governing India with a dissatisfied public service, and there is evidence that the recruiting sergeant is hampered by the evil reports which are brought home from India at this moment.' We had these allegations of dissatisfaction in the public services and suggestions that this dissatisfaction was interfering with recruitment. The Public Services Commission had to investigate the point. I submit, there was a far better course than for Government to take up such questions in a haphazard way according as each service became more vocal in the expression of its grievances. That procedure would, I think, have probably led to remedies of a very unequal character, and have probably involved Government in far greater expenditure than has been suggested by the Commission. Nobody can charge the Commission with haste or lack of diligence. They went to and fro in the country, they recorded reams of evidence, and their report is the result of long investigation and deliberation. I should like to read something they said about this subject, it comes under the head of 'Salary,' but I maintain that pension is only deferred salary. They went into the question of a rise in prices and put that on one side with these remarks:—

'Nor is it necessary that such calculations should be made, as they depend ultimately on the assumption that salaries should be kept at the same level for all time irrespective of the operation of the law of supply and demand. Such a position is untenable. The only safe criterion is that Government should pay so much and so much only to their employés as is necessary to obtain recruits of the right stamp, and to maintain them in such a degree of comfort and dignity as will shield them from temptation and keep them efficient for the term of their service. Whilst therefore we have noted the rise in prices that has taken place, we have not based on this any general recommendation.'

[Sir James DuBoulay.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

" Then they say about pensions.

'What affects us more is the consideration of the amount needed to make Government service reasonably attractive to recruits. In so far as the main body of officers is concerned, we see no reason to doubt that the present terms of pension are adequate. It is only in the case of highly placed officers that we see ground for reasonable complaint. Under Table A the maximum limits are operative against all officers who have less than 25 years' service, whose average emoluments are in excess of Rs. 1,000 a month at the time of retirement, and against all officers with 25 years' service or over whose average emoluments at the time of retirement exceed Rs. 833⅓ a month. Hence it follows that the higher an officer's rank in the service, the greater becomes the difference between his actual pension, as determined by the maximum limit, and the pension he would have received if it had been determined in accordance with the scale of 60ths without any maximum limit. Apart from this general consideration, we are impressed by the strong feeling of dissatisfaction with the present limit which is everywhere prevalent, and we are satisfied that, from the point of view of recruitment, some improvement of the existing conditions is needed.'

" The Hon'ble Mover of the Resolution has stated briefly what the actual recommendations of the Public Services Commission were, and I need not repeat them. But though the Commission proposed to enhance the maximum limits they also recommended that officers in several services should work longer before they earned their pensions, and they proposed to introduce certain other restrictions calculated to operate in favour of the general public. Their scheme really hangs together, and it is only fair to consider the rough with the smooth in it. This applies especially to their recommendations in regard to the special additional pensions for officers holding high appointments. I mean that though the maximum pay may be enhanced as I have pointed out, it will take longer to earn it. I would remind the Council too that it is not so long since in certain services officers of Government were entitled to earn an additional pension of Rs. 2,000; in fact, there are many officers still in the service who will be entitled to that amount if they are fortunate enough to attain to qualifying appointments. I therefore think that the recommendations of the Commission are not such an extraordinarily liberal advance on the pensionary arrangements which we have known as the Resolution before us would lead this Council to suppose. Government have not yet come to any conclusion on these proposals, and they have not considered the additions which the Commission proposed to the appointments in which special pensions can be earned. But I do think Council will recognise that there is some force in the contention which was so constantly reiterated before the Commission that it is unreasonable that men who have served Government in high appointments on high salaries should not receive on retirement some recognition of the more meritorious nature of their services. This contention, as the Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid said, was not confined to European officers. We had in it the evidence of Mr. Dutt, a high official in the Indian Finance Department and as time goes on and the Indianisation of the Services increases the number of Indians who will be affected in this matter will also increase. I consider that the existing system of pensions is a cheap one for Government, and as you have heard from the Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid it appears that in England the pension rules are much more liberal and there are there no maxima. It does not seem unreasonable to take a few more appointments of special responsibility and allow the incumbents the privilege of enjoying a small addition to their pensions over and above what can be attained by the average man. Last September in dealing with the question of the pension of the Indian Civil Service, the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution referred to the serpent in the gardens of the daughters of Hesperus, who was the guardian of the golden apples that Juno gave to Jupiter. He may remember that it was one of the labours of Hercules to procure some of these apples, and I sometimes feel that the departments of the Government of India are in the position of Hercules. But there is one little point in which he fell into an inaccuracy, the guardian was not a serpent but a monstrous dragon. There is a good deal of historical dispute as to whether he had one head or a hundred. Hitherto, speaking for the Home Department, I have felt that in dealing with the dragon we have had only one head to deal with, and I have recognised in it the benevolent countenance of the Hon'ble the Finance Member. It fights fiercely when we try to get one of the golden apples, sometimes we get one, sometimes we fail. But I am afraid it is growing more heads and among others I recognise the kindly features of the Hon'ble Mover of the Resolution, sometimes the flashing eyes of my old friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha or the fiery tongue of the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea. I feel and I think those Hon'ble Members who have in their youth stolen apples will recognise that the departments of the Government of India have a much more difficult task than they had. Fortunately some of these heads sometimes bite one another, as for instance when the other day I heard the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea talking on some subject in which he was personally interested, and he referred to the question of £ s. d. as paltry, or when the Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali the other day attacked increased expenditure on the police, an expenditure which is devoted almost entirely to the improving of the pay and prospects of the subordinate ranks, a subject which the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution has made his own . . . . "

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" I said it was paltry in connection with the military expenditure at a grave crisis of the Empire."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—" I forgot that it was applied in that sense.

" I cannot believe that the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution will contend that there is anything unreasonable or extravagant in the proposals per se of the Public Services Commission. He has himself on a previous occasion admitted the truth of the ancient maxim that the labourer is worthy of his hire; he will hardly deny the increasingly high level of service rendered by these labourers to his country, but he must not judge them by his own high standard,—they do not as a class labour for the love of labour; they labour very hard, but they expect an adequate reward. Sir Mahadeo Chaubal put the position in a nutshell when he wrote 'the representatives of all the services inquired into put forth grievances about their hard and strenuous work (as one witness put it, 'burning the midnight oil the whole day long') and clamoured for better prospects.' I do not believe that the Hon'ble Mover would set up his judgment against that of the Commission, indeed, the other day when he was heckled for quoting Mr. Abdur Rahim as a man of authority because he sat on the Commission and then quoting the majority report, he rapidly took cover under the shelter of them both, but there is no such shelter for him here, for on this topic the Commission are almost unanimous in opposition to his views, and though Mr. Abdur Rahim saw no justification for granting any additional concessions in the minor point of special pensions, he was willing to go a long way with his colleagues on the general question of enhanced maxima.

" I think the Hon'ble Member in Simla argued strongly in favour of the subordinate services. He said money should not be spent on the superior services, but only on the rank and file; the Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid has put before you one aspect of that question. But I do feel that the Hon'ble Mover rather overlooks the enormous care and attention which is given to that matter by the Government of India. I do not wish to dwell on it at any great length, because the Hon'ble Member has not referred to it to-day, but he referred to it on a different occasion. We are constantly increasing the pay of the lower ranks of the various services. The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes mentioned in answer to a question the other day that Government have spent nine lakhs in the last four years in improving the pay of clerks, postmen and menials in the Postal Department, and again he told us that the approximate increase of pay in the large offices during the past fifteen years has been 32 per cent. in the case of clerks, and 57 per cent. in the case of postmen. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent pointed out on Wednesday last that for 1912-13 the Government of India had spent Rs. 140 lakhs in improving the pay of the subordinate police-inspectors, sub-inspectors, head constables and constables,—and in the five years from 1912-13 to 1916-17 the expenditure on these classes had increased by another 41½ lakhs. I could go on quoting instances to show that in every province there have been similar increases not only in the police but in most other services.

"Then, Sir, the Hon'ble Member has said that he regards this question of improved pensions as a question of luxury. I think it is begging the question to talk about luxuries. It is all a question of degree; and the difference of degree suggested by the Commission is a very small one. He recently told us that he objected to the cast iron organization of services whereby the servants of Governments acquire established rights, but he will recognise that the public must treat its servants well. They will not serve if they are liable to dismissal at the mere caprice of their employers; they will not serve unless they have some security of service; they will not serve if after years of labour they are not guaranteed the means of ending their days free from the sordid worries of penury and able to give their families the same start in life which they have themselves enjoyed. If they do not have prospects of that sort, the better men will boycott Government service, and that means that the whole tone of Government service will degenerate. I am sure that the Hon'ble Mover would not regard such a result with equanimity, and if that is the view of the Hon'ble Mover, I would ask this Council to dissociate themselves from it.

"That, Sir, is all I have to say. I have argued the case as if Government were about to accept the recommendations of the Commission. Whether they will do so or not, I cannot say. There are other recommendations of the report which will command their prior attention, but the Hon'ble Mover would have us set metes and bounds to this question of emoluments—and pension is nothing but a form of emoluments—and I maintain that that is trying to interfere with the laws of supply and demand. We cannot do it any more than King Canute could control the tides. Government have so far suspended their judgment upon the precise recommendations which the Commission have put forward, and I would ask this Council to do the same. Indeed, I almost hope that the Hon'ble Mover will not, now that he has ventilated the subject, wish to press his Resolution to a division."

12-18 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, it would be a very ungracious task on the part of any Hon'ble Member to ask the Government to pause before it accepts the recommendations of a responsible body with regard to the increase in the pensions paid to the Civil Servants, especially when it is urged that this demand comes not from one section of the service but from several sections, both Indian as well as European. It is also somewhat difficult to resist the argument that is generally advanced that the efficiency of the services would suffer unless the services are properly treated. But in calculating and relying upon these general considerations, it seems to me, Sir, that there is great danger that both the Government as well as the officials interested might over-step the bounds of economy and arrive at conclusions with regard to the increase of emoluments, for salaries and pensions are, as is rightly put, one branch of the subject of emoluments, ending in the division of any increase of revenue between the services.

"There seems also to be a desire on the part of several official members to bid for a combination amongst the rich somewhat to the detriment of the humble and poor taxpayer, and I can freely sympathise with the Finance Member's statement on a previous occasion that the only result of the appointment of Commissions would be an increase in expenditure all round. Well, the substantial question that has been raised is as to whether, under the circumstances of this country, a case has been so clearly made out for an increase in pensionary charges, having regard to the enormous growth in expenditure during the past few years, as to make it impossible for the Government to resist this recommendation of the Public Services Commission. I can understand that if there were reasonable proposals that the number of officers that are to be recruited are to be considerably limited, and that it is only the best and highest talent procurable in the United Kingdom that will be recruited for these various services here, I can understand in those circumstances an increase being possibly allowed in the emoluments, having regard to the decrease in numbers. But no such proposals seem to be forthcoming in regard to the more important services, and we are face to face with this problem as to whether we can allow the pensionary charges to grow from time to time in the manner suggested. Hon'ble Members will note that the superannuation allowance and pensionary charges were in 1903-04 £2,822,000 as against £3,571,000 in 1918-19, or there has been an increase of 110 lakhs, or 25 per cent. within a space of 15 years, and we are asked to accept increases in various branches under various heads, the sum total of which would be really very formidable. In the case of the civil departments also the growth has been enormous. It has risen from £10 millions to £22 millions, and even excluding the increased charges on agriculture, medicine and education, amounting to about £5 millions, the increase in salaries paid to these various departments has also been very large. Under those circumstances, Sir, there is no use of making generalisations and stating that we cannot get the right type of material from England, if we are doubtful ourselves as to the efficacy of this value. One argument that has been advanced is that the recent change in the pensionary rules in the United Kingdom makes it possible for an Englishman to realise in his own country a somewhat higher scale of emolument than is possible in India. Well, I am somewhat doubtful about the matter. From 1-60th the scale has been reduced to 1-80th and half pension can be earned only after 40 years' service, and we have not also been told what is the average salary that is received by an Englishman in the various services corresponding to the services we are now considering. Even in first class services the emoluments do not exceed £1,000, and the pension charges cannot be much more than the pension charges that are paid to the higher officers in India. I will just quote a sentence from Dr. Heath's book on the British Services. Speaking of the provision made for British services and referring to the General Provident Fund he says :—

"This general Provident Fund, it will be seen, corresponds very favourably with the home pensionary system established by . . . ."

"So a comparison of the figures obtaining in England and in India, I think, does not warrant the assumption that the officers in India, when on retirement in England, will receive much less than what is being received by their comrades, who entered similar services at the same time, are receiving. And the argument based upon various charges incurred by officers in India in sending their families home, etc., seems to have no application in the case of pensions, for in the case of pensions, the gentlemen will be residing permanently in England with their families, and consequently their expenses would not be any greater than what their brother British officers would have to incur. And the rise of prices would only affect the lower scale. Anyhow, Sir, all that I urge is that, in the matter of increasing these emoluments, we shall have to wait till the war is over to see what the after-war values will be, and then only determine as to whether, consistently with the economic conditions of the country, we can increase the total salary and pension charges and as to whether, if we are compelled to increase the pension charges or emoluments, we should not at the same time reduce the number so that the net result may from the financial point of view not be prejudicial to India.

"I can understand the chagrin that various Members may feel at remarks which we Hon'ble Members are forced to make against our own wishes in the matter. But stern duty requires it, and we shall have to face the odium whether it is from our own men or from Britishers, and in whatever shape that dislike may be demonstrated either here or elsewhere."

12-28 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray :—"Sir, I should like to suggest that a discussion on this point is really almost futile. Here we are, with everybody else all over the world, putting up salaries, wasting our time discussing cutting them down. It is, as the Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay rightly remarks, bidding the advancing waves retire. I think 60 per cent. or more of business concerns and banks have found that they have had to increase employés' salaries, and sometimes also pensions. I have recently myself within the last few weeks formed one of a special Committee to consider the emoluments of one of the services in this country. Originally the emoluments of that service were based more or less on the lines of the Indian Civil Service, but slightly less attractive, as that was considered enough, but now we have had to increase the pay of almost every post and create fresh highly paid posts, so that that service is now probably more attractive than that of the Civil Service, except in the matter of pensions which we could not. deal with because it needed an Actuary's report before we could deal with it But if the report admits of it pensions will very likely be increased also. While we are discussing this sort of thing everybody else is sweeping the market of the best men available and paying almost anything to get them."

12.29 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. S. Sastri:—"There are only two or three remarks that I wish to make. The Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid said in reference to a possible objection that might be taken on behalf of the inferior services, that the 12 lakhs to which this Resolution refers will not go very far towards ameliorating their condition. That may be so. But when we consider the condition of the inferior ranks of the services, the problem is, from the financial point of view, very large. That only means that we must husband our resources with extreme care, that we must incur no expenditure that can possibly be avoided, and it strikes me, Sir, notwithstanding all that has been said, that this present item is one that may be avoided without serious loss.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid also observed by way of contrasting the Home Civil Servant with the Civil Servant out here that the question of expenditure when he goes home, the cost of the passages and the education of children and the hardships of a life in a climate like that of India with its incidental privations, sorrows and separations and so on, has got to be taken into consideration. I understood always that in fixing the salaries, emoluments, leave allowances and pensions of officers employed here, these were the very matters that were taken into consideration, and that is why a great disparity is now observable between the rates at which these services are paid in India and the rates at which the kindred services are paid anywhere else in the world, not excluding the United Kingdom. To bring them up again and again is to ask that we should give compensation in the shape of rupees for the domestic sorrows, privations and separation griefs, and so on. These are matters which are incommensurable, and I do hope that nobody will seriously advance the view that these things can be assuaged by the mere enhancement of pensions or other things of that kind.

"With regard to the question of Indians in the service, whose pensions also come under my Resolution, I would say this, that that does not deter me at all. The case of Indians seems to me to be absolutely without any title to consideration in this matter. Rupees 5,000 is quite good enough, I think, for retired officers in India. I know I shall incur their serious displeasure by saying this. But it is not only with regard to their pensions, but also with regard to their salaries that I hold the same unorthodox doctrine. It appears to me, Sir, the truth is that the Indians in these public services are setting up a standard more or less in imitation of the standards of the European employés of Government. It is not the natural standard that India would set up if we had no Europeans in our services. It is because Europeans coming out to India and occupying the higher ranks of the services have set up a very, very high scale of salaries that Indian officers also, coming more or less into line with them, desire that their salaries, their pensions and their furlough and leave allowances should all be settled on a similarly high level. That, I submit, is one of the evils to which the constant recurrence of these questions exposes the Indian Treasury. Every time an advantage is sought in the conditions of the European services, a similar advantage is sought in the conditions of the Indian services, and not always with equally good reasons; and it is found impossible to resist them. European officers themselves who advance their own claims find it difficult to set up a different standard for their Indian colleagues, and they naturally are not backward in seconding them. But, I think, in the interests of the Indian taxpayer both claims must be resisted, and we must make no difference whatever.

"With regard to the exchange difficulty to which the Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid referred, I will dispose of it by merely reading what the Commission themselves have said in regard to the matter. It runs: 'As in the case, however, of salaries, we attach little importance to arguments founded on a comparison between present and past conditions.' If the Commission did not see fit to pay any attention to that consideration I do not think this Council need.

"There is only one remark which fell from the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray to which I would refer before I resume my seat, and that is, the question of whether it is possible to resist these claims. I do not think I am wasting the time of this Council. I think these and other Resolutions of a similar character which we have discussed have enabled us to state the Indian taxpayer's point of view. I know that as yet the Indian taxpayer's point of view cannot prevail, and that the views of those who think that these claims are absolutely justified and well founded are more likely to prevail. We cannot, nevertheless, adopt the opinion which has been advanced by the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray that these were useless discussions. To him, foreseeing the result clearly, it does appear useless. To us, looking at the matter from our point of view, the debates do not seem to be useless because, although we know they cannot bear the fruit that we desire, they will at least enable us to have the satisfaction that we have stated the Indian taxpayer's point of view, and that we have not allowed the Government of India and its superior officers to be under any misapprehension whatsoever in regard to this matter."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay:—" I have only got a very few remarks to make, Sir. As regards what fell just this moment from the Hon'ble Mover about the constantly recurring frequency with which these matters are considered, I think I am right in saying that those questions have not been touched since 1855. They do not therefore seem to me to be of very frequent occurrence. 12-37 P.M.

" There was just one thing I wished to point out in regard to what the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma said. I looked at the figures of the revenues of India and the figures of the increase in pensionary charges, and I find that in the last 20 years the revenues of India have increased by 48 millions, or rather more than 76 per cent., and the pensionary charges in India have increased by rather over 100 per cent. These in England however have increased by only 5 per cent., and the total result is an increase of 35 per cent. That is to say, roughly, that the steady increase in the pensionary charges is not so great as the steady increase in the general revenues. And when we consider that it is the number of extra establishments which we constantly employ as the administration develops which has really increased the pensionary charges and not any increase in the pensions themselves, I do not think this criticism of that increase should influence our view that these proposals of the Public Services Commission are not fairly reasonable."

The motion was put and negatived.

RESOLUTION RE CADRE OF THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE NOT TO BE INCREASED.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"This Resolution reads:— 12-39 P.M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Government of India do represent to the Secretary of State for India, that the cadre of the Indian Civil Service be not increased as recommended by the Public Services Commission.'

[Mr. Sastri.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Sir, the cadre of the Indian Civil Service is calculated on the strength of superior officers required to fill what are known as the superior appointments. The superior appointments are those that involve a high degree of responsibility, or what the Commissioners call posts involving major responsibility. For these posts of course a certain number of additional officers are required.

"The young recruits require to be trained first and go through a cycle of small appointments involving minor responsibility before they can be put into charges of major responsibility. Then there is provision to be made for giving leave to officers and replacing them when abroad, and then also there are fresh recruits who have to be put into inferior appointments and undergo a period of training which is two years or so.

"Now, on account of these various necessities it is found that for every 100 superior appointments, 194·5 posts have to be reserved for the Indian Civil Service; that is, very nearly every officer who has to hold a superior post has to have an under-study for himself. It has also been calculated that the rate of decrement is 4·17, which is accordingly taken to regulate the recruitment of every year. Now, since superior appointments are the basic figure with regard to which our adjustments have got to be made, care must be taken to find out what a superior appointment is. Now a superior appointment has been defined to be an appointment which carries major responsibility. For practical purposes the Government of India have gone on the footing that a superior appointment is one which carries a salary of Rs. 1,000 and over. Now, there are many appointments—Justice Abdur Rahim puts the figure at 83—many appointments which carry a salary of Rs. 1,000 and over, but which cannot be correctly described as appointments of a superior nature involving major responsibility. The figure, therefore, has to be cut down by 83 or such other figure as the Government may arrive at as really affording the proper deduction on account of an improper grouping of appointments as superior which really are not superior. Then there is a four per cent. added to the list of superior appointments for the reason that there are some appointments which are only temporary, and that officers from the Indian Civil Service have got to be sent on deputation for other purposes. Now deputation for other purposes seems to be a very common thing in this service. The Commission say about them 'Vacancies of this last named character (that is, on deputation) are constantly recurring in the ordinary course of the administration, as when a census is held or a colonisation scheme is on foot or arrears have accumulated and have to be cleared off or a special inquiry is in progress, or the loan of an officer is made to a Ruling Chief.' Now, I do not say that such deputation is unnecessary. Some of these causes mentioned are of a grave nature and require that when officers are lent they should be officers from the best service we have got; and I am willing therefore that that provision should stand. But the Commission themselves have reported that 4 per cent. might be considered excessive, and it is worth while inquiring whether in the different provinces the deputation calculation is altogether correct.

"Then it would appear that the percentages already mentioned—for example, the 15·5 per cent. mentioned for the training reserve—are not strictly interpreted. There is a tendency to strain the meaning of these things in order to provide for a larger number of officers, especially of a junior grade. In Madras and in Bombay, such things have been done, and the result is an over-recruitment in some years, and when there is an over-recruitment, there is a block in the flow of promotion. When that is the case, Government have to pay extra allowances to officers whose expectations, although not founded in law, have been disappointed. Now, so far from there being a necessity for increasing the cadre of this service, some of us, looking at the matter from the non-expert's point of view, might think there was a good case made out for decreasing the cadre. For instance, in the evidence before the Public Services Commission, there came up two very important points. One of them was that we were appointing to the judicial posts in the country members of the Indian Civil Service without there being an adequate justification for the practice. In other countries in England, for example, upon whose polity our polity is mostly modelled, no appointment of a merely judicial character would be given to a member of the Civil Service. All judicial appointments are there recruited from the open Bar; and as the Bar here confessedly has developed to a high level of efficiency, there is apparently no reason why all the judicial posts now reserved for the Indian Civil Service should not be taken out of the schedule and recruited from the open profession of the law. In this matter the Commission themselves have gone a certain length. They propose that in the future 40 posts for the whole of India should be taken out from the Indian Civil Service cadre and recruited from the Bar. Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Sir Mahadeo Chaubal go a little further Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim specially recommended that a third only of these appointments should continue to be filled by members of the Civil Service, and the rest recruited from the Bar. I am, however, an exponent of public opinion, and as the Hon'ble Sir James Du Boulay pointed out in the case of pensions, I am one of those who think that even Justice Abdur Rahim's recommendation in this respect was a little halting. I would recommend that in India the whole of the judicial appointments should be recruited hereafter from the Bar.

"The Commission themselves have, in the second instance, recommended that the Indian Civil Service need not henceforth go out of their proper sphere and seek to control the other services which hitherto they have been doing. They have controlled, for example, the Police; they have controlled the Agricultural service; they have controlled the Post Office; they are controlling to-day the Salt service everywhere, and the Land Records Department in Burma, Registration in some provinces, Co-operation everywhere. These are all now controlled by officers of the Indian Civil Service, and our contention is that it is not necessary. The Commission themselves have recommended that it is no longer necessary to bear on the cadre of the Indian Civil Service the Inspector-Generalship of Police. They make a similar recommendation with regard to the Directorship of Agriculture. But the effect of this they take away by recommending the creation of new posts, called Rural Commissioners, which seem to us, on the contrary, to be absolutely unnecessary. In the case of the other services, the Commission recommend the present practice mostly to continue; but we on the contrary are of opinion that it is not necessary to continue this practice as regards the other services. Those other services which I have mentioned are also well developed, and they could produce officers competent to be at their head. We, therefore, think that it is no longer necessary for these considerations to recruit the Indian Civil Service on nearly the same scale as hitherto. The Commission on the contrary have taken the complaints made that the work of the Civil Service officer has greatly increased, and they have attached very considerable importance to it—I fear, far too great importance—, and the result is that they are overwhelmed by the fear that the Indian Civil Service is over-worked on account of their increasing duties and we must afford them relief by cutting up their jurisdiction, introducing smaller districts and relieving the officers by creating others of equal grade. I will read to the Council the few sentences in which the Commission set forth this view.

'Additional officers should be appointed to keep pace with the increasing volume of litigation and they should be appointed promptly; at present the tendency is not to require relief until serious congestion has arisen; on the executive side there is greater difficulty. The troubles which are now experienced are confined mainly to the larger districts, and it is they which have as a rule the most historical associations. The process of dividing them is thus complicated and open to criticism. We think, however, that serious steps should be taken to grapple with the evil. Pending division, or if division is found to be impossible, extra district officers with full powers should be appointed, and additions should be made to the cadre of the Collectors with this object.'

"Now, it is the fear that that recommendation may be acted upon and large additions made to the cadre of the Indian Civil Service that has inspired the Resolution which I am just moving. There is considerable force in the argument that the work of the Civil Service officer in the districts is getting to be more and more difficult, to be more and more various, and that it taxes him more and more. It may, therefore, be necessary to give these officers considerable relief. But what is to be the nature of the relief? Is it by the creation of officers of equal grade, is it by the cutting up of our large districts into two or more districts, and appointing separate Collectors and separate Judges to each? I venture to think that that is not the only possible way of meeting the difficulty. I have no official experience unfortunately, and cannot therefores speak with any amount of detailed knowledge; but I would just hazard the proposition, because I have heard it supported by those who can speak with inside official knowledge—your higher civil service officer is occupied not altogether with work of a very high nature, that there is a large percentage of his work, which I cannot calculate to any nicety, which is of an inferior nature, and which he need not therefore personally trouble himself about, and which he can transfer to an officer of somewhat inferior grade, working under his personal supervision. The relief to an officer need not necessarily be given by cutting up his jurisdiction; it may, I think, with equal efficacy and with greater economy, be given by affording assistance to these officers in the shape of personal assistants, chosen from, say, the Provincial Civil Service. I think that recommendation, wherever it might be found necessary to give it effect, would be found as efficacious a method as increasing the cadre of the Indian Civil Service. That, briefly stated, Sir, is the reason why I put forward this Resolution.

"But, Sir, having disposed of this Resolution, I will now ask leave of the Council to draw their attention to the circumstance that this is the last Resolution of the series which have dealt with the services. We have not brought them forward out of wanton disregard for the valuable time of official Members; we have brought them forward at grave risk of misconstruction merely for the purpose of enabling Government to know what our precise point of view is, as we know they are dealing with this important subject We have moved, Sir, a large number of Resolutions of a more or less detailed character appertaining to all these services. One Resolution had the good fortune of being accepted by the Council; two others were withdrawn; one Resolution which I intended to bring forward, the one on education, I have refrained from bringing forward, because I feel that the educational services are in the hands of one to whom my feeble hands cannot bring additional strength. Our object I have already explained in moving these Resolutions. Our motives, I think, have been consistent with the preservation of the interests of the tax-payer and at the same time of the efficiency and high character of the services. Much has been said on both sides which may have caused misconstruction and a certain amount of annoyance; that has been to a large extent inseparable from the character of the subjects with which we have been dealing; but let me assure the Council that for my part there has been no ill-will, that nothing that has been said has hurt my feelings or induced me to believe that we have unnecessarily been considering thorny matters and accentuated racial feeling. I will only ask the officers of Government to consider that the question of the services is second only in importance to the question of constitutional reforms. They should take long views in these matters, and they should speed up the disposal of the very important detailed considerations that have arisen. I would ask them to consider the matter in a broad and in a liberal spirit, try to lay aside some of the hesitation and distrust which they usually feel, and take a bold and courageous view of affairs so as to meet in large measure the views that we have put forward. I venture to think, Sir, that we have not wasted the time of the Council, as some one said, in bringing forward these Resolutions."

12-59 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I should like to begin by stating my entire agreement with the Hon'ble Member as to the present being an opportune time for bringing forward these Resolutions. In fact, if they had not been brought forward during the last Session or this Session, the Government might have been unfortunately obliged to decide many of these questions without having the views of this Council before them. For this reason I welcome these Resolutions as affording Hon'ble Members an opportunity of putting forward their views.

"I gather that the Hon'ble Member considers that in his opinion the question of these Indian services is second only in importance to the question of constitutional reforms. I would remind him however that there is too another aspect. I agree in great measure with what he said; but the Council has to consider this also, that the very time when constitutional reforms are proposed is the last moment at which the administrative machinery should be weakened. Government may possibly afford to take risks in one direction, but not in many directions at the same time. That is a consideration which I would put forward for Members of this Council.

"Turning to the Resolution before Council, it would be impossible for me to deal adequately with the whole question of the cadre of the Civil Service without detaining the Council for an unreasonably long time. But, as I agree with a great deal of what has been said by the Hon'ble Member it will be the less necessary for me to do so. I will attempt to take up the points which he has taken up one by one. I will begin with the question of a Temporary Deputation Reserve of 4 per cent; this percentage was introduced in 1900 and was calculated on actual experience. I have the Despatch here which contains the materials upon which a decision was reached. I am quite prepared, however, to have these figures re-examined with a view to ascertaining whether, in fact, they are excessive.

"I proceed now to consider the question of special appointments. The Hon'ble Member has pointed out that the posts of Inspector-General of Police and that of Director of Agriculture will, if these recommendations of the Commission are approved, be removed from the cadre of the Indian Civil Service. As to the first of these appointments I may say that personally I am entirely in favour of the recommendation of the Commission, although I cannot pledge Government at this moment to accept it, because it is a matter on which we must hear the views of Provincial Governments. I may say, however, that at present in three provinces, the appointment of Inspector-General is held by a Police officer. In Burma, where the conditions are special, it is held by a military officer. The question of reserving that appointment for the Civil Service in other provinces will be examined. Wherever there is a capable officer to take up the position of Inspector-General, I have no doubt that Local Governments will be glad enough to appoint an officer of the Police service to the post. As to the post of Director of Agriculture, I feel I am in some difficulty. This is an office with which the Home Department is not directly concerned, and I cannot say what views the Revenue Department may have about it, but I can assure the Council that the question and the well considered views of the Commission will not be lost sight of. As regards the remaining appointments, those of the Director of Land Records and the Commissioner of Excise to which Mr. Justice Rahim referred, none of these are directly under the Home Department. I am aware that Mr. Justice Rahim suggested that another department to which the principle should be extended was the Northern India Salt Revenue, but in regard to the Land Records (Burma), Excise and the Survey (Madras) Departments, all he proposed was that the principle should be kept in view. He was not recommending, as I understand it, that Indian Civil Service officers should be excluded from these appointments. There remains the office of Inspector-General of Registration. In two provinces in which the work of this appointment is not combined with that of other departments the office is not held by a civilian, but in other provinces in some of which the Inspector-General does other work as well it is found convenient to employ civilians.

"The next point to which I should like to advert is the division of superior and inferior appointments. The Hon'ble Member was perfectly correct in his statement as to the method in which the service is recruited. Certain percentages for leave, reserve, training and deputation are added to the total of superior posts, the total cadre being 194 per cent. of the number of superior posts. One of the difficult questions that the Government of India will have to examine is whether the list of superior appointments is not at present calculated properly. On page 543 of the Public Services Commission's Report, Hon'ble Members will find 83 posts put down as superior posts which, in the opinion of Mr. Rahim, might well have been classified as inferior. Here, again, I cannot commit the Government of India because many of these appointments are provincial appointments. But I am prepared to say for myself that I think there is considerable force in the arguments put forward by Mr. Rahim that some of these superior posts might without detriment be transferred to the category of inferior posts, in which case there would be a proportional reduction in the cadre. I myself was also impressed with the remarks of Mr. Rahim as to the proper method of calculating what really is a superior post. He dwells chiefly on the point of independent responsibility, and in particular, refers to officers of the status of district judges and collectors as giving a fair test for ascertaining whether the post should be calculated as a superior post or not. I agree also with him that this Rs. 1,000 pay rule is an arbitrary one, and I am prepared to agree that the whole question will have to be re-examined. But, as I have said before, these are my personal opinions and I cannot give any undertaking that they will be accepted by Government.

"There is another way, however, in which, I think, something might be done to meet the views of the Hon'be Member, and that is in the direction of increasing the listed posts. The Hon'ble Member is aware that the Public Services Commission have recommended the reduction of the listed posts from 65, which is the present figure down to, I think, 41. Now I am one of those who view this with great misgiving recognising as I do that the present system of awarding promotion to officers in the provincial services is the only adequate way of rewarding those who have done us good service, that it leads to the recruitment of good officers, and, lastly, that it affords Government an opportunity of employing men of exceptional talent or ability in posts in which these talents can be fully utilised. But as I have said before these are personal views and I cannot promise that they will be accepted. I would remind the Council, however, that if the number of listed posts is increased pro tanto the cadre of the Indian Civil Service will be reduced.

"There is one point left and that is, that of District and Sessions Judges. Mr. Justice Rahim has devoted a large portion of his separate minute to the discussion of the relative value of Civilian and Barrister or Pleader Judges. I do not wish, unless I am forced to do so, to put forward the arguments which appear to me cogent in favour of the system which now prevails I have been for many years a Civilian Judge myself and have some knowledge of the advantages and disadvantages of that position. However, whatever my views may be on the subject, I am quite prepared to say, speaking again for myself and not committing the Government of India that the time has come for the recruitment of a substantial percentage of Judges from the Bar. As the experiment is tried, if it proves successful, the Government, if it accept this policy, will no doubt proceed with it further. Here again, however, the conditions of the different provinces will have to be considered. It has not been suggested, I am glad to say, by my Hon'ble friend that Civilian Judges have performed their duties inadequately or improperly, and I, therefore, need not defend them though, if there is any necessity of doing so, I should be quite prepared to undertake the task. I hope that the Hon'ble Member will realise, as I have done, that in expressing these opinions, I have shown at any rate the earnest desire of Government to examine these matters carefully, and that we are not approaching these recommendations in any unreasonable spirit. If, however, he presses to a division, I shall be compelled to oppose him."

1-12 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"Sir, I desire to congratulate the Hon'ble the Home Member on the sympathetic speech to which we have just listened. If the Hon'ble the Home Member has his own way in the Councils of the Government,—and I hope and trust he is masterful enough for that purpose—then I have not the slightest doubt in my mind that we ought to accept the Resolution of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri, because the effect of carrying out the views of the Hon'ble the Home Member would be to reduce the cadre of the Civil Service. Let me take one of his points, perhaps the main point that he has urged with so much emphasis, namely, that the number of listed appointments should be increased. The Public Services Commission recommended that they should be decreased from 63 to 41,—I think those are the figures. The Hon'ble the Home Member is in favour of raising the number of listed posts. What does that mean? It means that so many more appointments are to be withdrawn from the Civil Service, and the cadre is to be reduced. Then my Hon'ble friend has observed that he is distinctly in favour of the view that a substantial portion of the appointments of District Judges should be made from the Bar. I congratulate him on that statement. The only difference between my Hon'ble friend and ourselves is this, we want the whole loaf, and he gives us about ¾ths of it...."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Nothing of the sort."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"Or half. If we cannot get ¾ths we shall be content with half. Well, if there is to be a substantial percentage of recruitment for District Judgeships from the Bar, that means a substantial reduction of the cadre of the Civil Service in the judicial branch of that service. I hope, therefore, having regard to these circumstances, the outlook seems to me to be hopeful. Sir, it appears to me that the time is fast coming, if it has not already come, when the Civil Service must be content to occupy the position of a supervising agency, and that the real work of the administration must be carried out by that service which is now known as the Provincial Service, manned chiefly by Indians Really, the Provincial Service has not been dealt with in the way that it should be. The real brunt of the work, judicial and administrative, in many branches, falls to the lot of the Provincial Civil Service. In the judicial branch the Provincial Service, I am talking of Bengal,—fills nearly 90 per cent. of the appointments, and I think I am not guilty of the slightest exaggeration when I say that in respect of ability, in respect of integrity, in respect of high conscientiousness in the discharge of its responsible duties, the Provincial Judicial Service will compare favourably with any other service of the same kind in the civilized world. I think I am able to refer to a statement made by Lord Selborne, who was better known as Sir Roundell Palmer, and who from his high place as a Member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council bore testimony to the high integrity and capacity of the Provincial Judicial Service. I desire to say to the rulers of India try us, and you will see that we are not wanting. You have tried us whole-heartedly perhaps in the Provincial Judicial Civil Service, and we have vindicated the qualities that we possess in the discharge of the duties belonging to that service. You have tried us slowly, inch by inch, and bit by bit, in the executive service, and there again we are showing our capacity. Take the case of Bengal. My friend has referred to the Inspectors General of Registration. It is now an appointment made over to the Provincial Civil Service. Now you know it as a matter of fact that the Inspectors General of Registration in Bengal have for some time been Indians, men who have shown the highest capacity and integrity in the discharge of their duties. Therefore, it seems to me that if the Provincial Civil Service is to be raised to the status to which it deserves to be raised, if it is to bear, as it ought to bear, the brunt of administration, judicial and executive in the times to come, and if the Civil Service is to be exalted—and not reduced, if it is to be exalted to the position of a supervising agency—I think we can do nothing better than accept my friend's Resolution, namely, that the cadre should be reduced, and I think having regard to the observations made by my Hon'ble friend, there ought to be practical unanimity about this Resolution. I do not know............"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"May I explain, Sir? The Hon'ble Member says there will be practical unanimity on this Resolution."

[Mr. S. N. Bannerjea; Mr. Sastri; Sir William Vincent; The Vice-President.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea :—" No, Sir, I did not say that at all. I said there ought to be practical unanimity. I think the two things are very different. One is an actual fact and the other is an aspiration to which I referred.

" I say that my Hon'ble friend did not permit me to finish my sentence. What I was going to say was this. I was expressing the hope that, if the Government had given the same permission to-day in respect of this Resolution which they did in respect of my friend's amendment on clause 4 of the Income-tax Bill, Hon'ble Members, after what my friend has said and released from official restrictions, would be in a position to vote as they thought best. That is my hope, that the restriction imposed on the Government benches would be withdrawn on this occasion in view of the expression of opinion which the Hon'ble the Home Member has placed before this Council. If that is done, I think, I may say with some little confidence, having regard to the great traditions of the Civil Service, that they will accept a reasonable view of the situation and vote in favour of my Hon'ble friend's Resolution."

1-19 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri.—" Sir, the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent said that it would not be fair to saddle the Government at the present moment with too many big things. I quite agree. When I said that the question of the Public Services Commission and its recommendations is of importance next only to those of the constitutional reforms, what I meant was that the question of constitutional reforms, whatever solution it reaches, cannot be satisfactorily solved except by this additional matter being also solved. The reforms that may be brought into existence will all require that the services in India should be more considerably Indianised than they are, and that there should be greater economy in the administration, if possible.

" I consider therefore that the two are interrelated, that in order that the reforms may have their fullest effect, it is necessary also to Indianise the services as rapidly as may be compatible with the safety and efficiency of the services. But when I have said this, I have exhausted what I wish to say. The Hon'ble the Home Member has made a speech after which I do not think, I should be justified in inviting the judgment of the Council on this Resolution. If the Council is so good, I will ask leave to withdraw the Resolution."

1-21 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I do not know whether granting the Hon'ble Member leave to withdraw the Resolution will prevent me from having an opportunity of replying to the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea, or whether I may have your permission to reply before this question is put."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" I think the position is that the motion before the Council being that leave be given to withdraw the Resolution, no speech can be made except by leave. If leave to withdraw is not given, the Hon'ble Home Member will have an opportunity of replying in the ordinary course."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, may I put it that the Hon'ble Member was allowed to reply to me and I am not allowed an opportunity of replying to him."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" That is one of the difficulties of our procedure. The motion before the Council at present is that leave be given to withdraw the Resolution. If the Council would like to hear the Hon'ble Member I shall be happy to grant him the indulgence of speaking."

1-22 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" If it will make procedure regular, I am willing to withdraw my motion for leave to withdraw my resolution."

[18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent; Mr S N. Bannerjea; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I only seek to answer one or two points which have been raised in the course of the debate; the first is the suggestion by the Hon'ble Mr Bannerjea that I should withdraw the restriction which is placed on officials to vote with the Government. Well, I doubt whether, if I did so, it would do the cause which he has at heart much good, but I may say that I could not personally undertake the responsibility for such a course. 1-23 P.M.

"I think also that, in his zeal, the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea put more into my words than I ever said or intended. For instance, he suggested that when I said a substantial proportion or fraction of judges should be recruited from the Bar I had contemplated 75 per cent., or 50 per cent. being so appointed. Now that is, if I may say so, a travesty of what I said. It is quite obvious that an experiment of this kind even if it is accepted by Government must be begun gradually. And I tried to make it clear that if it proved a success then it might be increased. But I ought to make it clear to the Council that I never suggested the figure, or anything approaching the figure, which the Hon'ble Member suggests, and I should be guilty of a grave omission if I allow any such misapprehension to exist in the Hon'ble Member's mind The Hon'ble Member also said that the Home Member has given up any idea of an increase in the cadre ..."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"I did not put it in that way. I rise to correct. I said, in view of the speech of the Hon'ble Home Member, and the effect of that speech would be a reduction of the cadre, that is all." 1-24 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"There would be very likely a reduction of cadre, if these proposals were adopted in some ways, but there will probably be a corresponding increase for the reasons given by the Public Services Commission. In dealing with that question of increases, I attempted to meet the points raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. By error I confess, I overlooked entirely this question of increased staff necessary in the event of new districts or new judgeships being created. I cannot give the Council any undertaking that, where necessary, districts will not be sub-divided or new judgeships created, and indeed, wherever there is an increase in the work, it follows necessarily that you must have more officers to do it. It is particularly in connection with the Province of Bengal, I believe, that this question of cutting up or dividing districts into two will arise, and I anticipate that the Local Government will, where they have not already done so, approach the Government of India on the subject, and that we shall have to give the necessary sanction for increasing the number of districts. Further, in those districts where the interests of the services render such a course essential, an increase in the cadre of the Civil Service will undoubtedly be necessary, but what I did suggest was that it may be possible to meet the Hon'ble Member by a certain amount of reduction in the particular direction to which he has referred." 1-25 P.M.

The motion was put and negatived.

The Council adjourned for Lunch till 2-30 P.M.

RESOLUTION RE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY'S CONTRACT.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Mr Vice-President, I beg to move the Resolution that stands against my name:— 2-31 P.M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the contract with the East Indian Railway Company be determined by the 31st of December, 1919, and that the State do take over the management of that Railway system on and from that date.'

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

"I am thankful to you, Sir, for the opportunity afforded to me to bring to the notice of the Council a subject of the highest immediate practical importance and to seek the opinion of the Council with a view to influence the ultimate decision of the Government on the subject. We miss in this Council the genial presence of Sir Ibrahim Rahimtullah. Every one knows that he was interesting himself in this subject, and it was partly at his instance that the Government were pleased to give notice to the railway company. It was understood that he was to have moved a Resolution on lines somewhat similar to the one on the Agenda, if he had continued to be a Member of this Council. Our loss is Bombay's gain and we congratulate that Presidency upon the elevation of Sir Ibrahim to the exalted office of Member of Council, and we should have been reconciled more easily to the translation of his activities to another sphere if he had handled this delicate and important subject in his customary perfect manner before he left the Council.

"I am painfully aware of my own imperfect knowledge of the subject I am dealing with, and I hope that the Council will be indulgent to me and not press the weakness of any arguments that I may advance against the soundness of my proposals.

"I ask the Council to recommend to the Government that they should cancel the contract with the East Indian Railway Company on the 31st of December, 1919, and I feel sure that when all the advantages resulting from such a course are weighed in the balance, it will be found that the Government has really no alternative but to take over the management of this railway from that date. I ask the Council to make this recommendation on several grounds, on the ground of financial economy, on the ground that it would be conducive to improving the general and industrial resources of the country, and on the ground that we shall make railway management really more effective and economical and beneficial to the general taxpayer, and I hope to be able to show that the arguments that are generally advanced in favour of Company management do not at any rate hold good in the case of management on the lines which prevail in India. But before I develop my argument, I may be permitted to state to the Council shortly how the position stands.

"The lines owned by the late East Indian Railway Company were purchased by the State in 1879, and all the contracts then subsisting between the Secretary of State and the Company, except those relating to debentures or debenture stock, were determined. The purchase price was £32,750,000 and it was provided that this should be paid in the form of a terminable annuity of the amount of £1,473,750, payable from the 1st of January 1880 to the 14th of February 1953. One-fifth of the annuity was deferred, and the holders of this portion, representing a capital sum of £6,550,000, constitute the present East India Company. Since the purchase certain State and Company branches were incorporated in the undertaking. The Government guaranteed interest in sterling at 4 per cent. per annum on the capital of £6,000,000 and the principal and interest on the debentures and debenture stock issued by the Company. The surplus profits in each half-year remaining after payment of interest and annuity charges and the contributions to the provident fund are divided between the Government and the Company in certain proportions. On the determination of the contract a portion of the annuity that has been determined will become payable for the period remaining up to the 14th February 1953. The Hon'ble Members will notice that there never has been a year since 1880 when the Company has not received surplus profits, and the total amount of such profits has amounted to about 709 lakhs up to the end of September 1907. The last dividend paid for the half year ending September last amounted to Rs. 15,69,000, or roughly Rs. 31 lakhs a year. The amount of profits received by the Company, if added to the interest at 4 per cent. which it might have earned, would amount to nearly 15½ crores. The whole 6½ million capital debt might thus have been wiped off several years ago, and a profit of over 6 crores would have remained for the benefit of the tax-payer if the Government had assumed the management, taking it that they could have managed it as efficiently as the Company. It may be noted in this connection that the surplus profits paid to the Companies generally throughout India were 115 lakhs in 1916-17, and the Budget figure for 1918-19 is a crore and sixty lakhs of rupees. It is open to Government to determine the contract on the 31st of December, 1919. As I have said, if the East Indian Railway Company is taken over in 1919, the Government will have to pay an annual sum of £294,750, equivalent to Rs. 44 lakhs and odd, till the year 1953. They are at present paying the interest charges amounting to £262,000 plus the share of the surplus profits, which, looking to the last three years' figures, are not below 24 lakhs, which means a total of 63 lakhs per annum. The Government will thus be saving 19 lakhs every year, and they will be able to wipe out the debt. If the latest figures were taken into consideration the saving would amount to 26 lakhs a year. The financial savings which would thus be effected afford a conclusive argument in favour of immediate assumption. Then the Government have also given, without being perhaps aware of it, one very strong reason in favour of State management being assumed in the immediate future, and that is this. They have considered for a very long time as to whether the statistical data which were furnished by the returns of the various companies would enable them to decide one way or the other as to whether State management or Company management is the more economical and beneficial course.

"And the Government in their circular letter, dated 27th June, confess that 'it is impossible to pass any definite finding upon statistical results. They have decided therefore to pursue the matter by an inquiry into the practical side of railway working founded upon every-day experience of those commercially interested in railways, in order to determine whether State or Company-managed lines have rendered the better service to the public.'

"Thus the only sure ground upon which rational conclusions could be arrived at does not help us in this matter, and, when we look at the immense financial gain to the State, I must humbly submit that the onus of proving that the continuance of the present state of things is beneficial to the country lies upon those who wish for such continuance.

"Hon'ble Members will also see that there is a wide difference between the so-called Company management which obtains in Europe and the Company management which obtains in India. In the United Kingdom, as well as in America, the railways are owned by Companies and managed by them. On the Continent of Europe there are several railways owned by the State. At one time they were managed by Companies, but it was found not profitable to do so, and they were taken over by the State for management purposes. One writer thus sums up the results of this management. He says:—

'It has been clearly demonstrated that in Continental Europe State railways, as a rule, furnish better transportation facilities and charge lower rates than do private Companies; that in connection with the State railway managements examined there exists practically nothing in the nature of a 'spoils system' to prevent them from securing efficient officials and employés; that graft and corruption are much less frequent in connection with State railways than with private ones; that travel is much safer on Government roads than on private lines; and lastly, that State railways, instead of being troubled with deficits which have to be made up from the hard-earned shekels of the tax-payer, in a large majority of cases, have made an entirely satisfactory financial showing, and in some cases, notably that of Prussia, have lightened the burden of the tax-payer enormously.'

"But we need not go to Continental countries for an example when we realise the position of these Companies in India. The Company runs no risk whatsoever. Private interest might induce Companies generally to exert themselves more than any State official would on behalf of the Government of the country; but here we find that the Government guarantees interest, furnishes the capital necessary for all improvements, supplies supervision and audit establishment in a large proportion, and on the Board of Directors they have their own man—an expert—who can veto the proceedings of the Board, fix the maxima and minima, the minima guaranteeing against any loss being sustained; and thus the Company system differs in very wide particulars from the system which is generally known as Company system in Europe.

"Further, there is this point to be said in favour of State management, that if a person who is a partner to the extent of 9-10ths or 14-15ths cannot efficiently manage a thing it cannot be said that a person who is only a partner to the extent of 1-15ths can do so.

"Then, again, we find that these Companies are really being managed by officials—retired Government officials who have lent their services to these Companies. It is curious to note that on an analysis it will be found that almost every railway system managed by Companies is being run by retired Government servants. You find on the present Board of Directors of the East Indian Railway Company three or four Government officials out of the seven Directors. The Chairman, Colonel Richard Gardiner, is a retired Royal Engineer, the Deputy Chairman, Sir David Barber, K.C.S.I., is a retired Finance Member, Sir Frederick Upcott, a Director of this Railway, who is also the Chairman of the Directors of the Assam-Bengal Railway, was in the past President of the Railway Board. It is noteworthy that the Managing Director of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, Sir T. R. Wynne, the Chairmen of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India, Great Indian Peninsula, Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways, Assam-Bengal Railway, Burma Railway and the South Indian Railways were, in 1916-17, all retired Government servants receiving pensions from the Indian treasury. I would respectfully ask whether it would not have been possible for the Government, at a much cheaper cost, to have provided a managing agency if it was necessary to run these railway systems, on such a basis, and whether it is necessary to forego such a huge share of the railway profits for the benefit of these Companies which, I contend, do very little effective work in the shape of management. To quote the words of the Mackaye Commission in connection with the debenture railway companies about which they were speaking: 'the chief duties they perform consist in receiving the earnings of the line from Government and distributing them to the shareholders.'

"Then I would ask whether the work of purchasing stores and of finding employés cannot be better managed by the State than by the Railway Companies. I have already alluded to the fact that the East Indian Railway is really a monopolist railway. There are no parallel lines competing with this railway, and consequently some of the advantages which are associated with Company management, the chief of which is that emulation and competition leads to efficiency and low rates, do not obtain here. The argument derived from the advantages which must flow from a keen competition between rival companies and the reasoning based upon the personal enthusiasm and zeal of company officers in canvassing traffic, except perhaps in objectionable forms, do not avail us here; for the question with us, on this as well as on other lines, is how to meet the demands of a growing goods and passenger traffic. The overcrowding of trains and goods awaiting wagons needs not to be emphasised. There is no need to canvass traffic; the traffic is at the door of the railway companies.

"With regard to the facilities which companies afford for raising the required capital it has to be noted that the capital of the Company is only about 16½ million pounds expected to earn a profit of 160 lakhs besides receiving the interest thereon. With regard to the stock capital raised it only amounts to 26 millions out of an aggregate capital of 260 in the one case and 346 in the other, and the interest on this is guaranteed by Government. I will quote a few remarks from the Mackaye Commission's report pertinent to the subject.

'Direct Government borrowing is unquestionably the cheapest method of raising money, and if sufficient can be thus obtained without materially lowering the price of stock there is little reason to look to other methods.'

"Short term debentures are condemned, as it is stated that the raising of capital by debenture stock is more expensive than by the issue of Indian stock, because the debenture stock is less popular. An argument that is generally advanced is that companies are useful in the way of assisting Government in raising capital. I may say that there is little prospect after the war of getting large funds from investors in England, and we shall have to rely on the Indian investor more and more. Consequently this argument does not help those who advocate Company management.

"Then the argument based on political pressure does not apply in the case of a country governed like India, and I do not think it is necessary to say anything more on this subject which occupies many pages in books dealing with democratic countries. Of course, a little healthy pressure is needed in the interests of the tax-payer for the economic development of the country, and the companies are an insuperable obstacle.

"It is assumed in favour of Company management that there is some antagonism between the commercial principle upon which it is said that railways would be run in the one case and the methods which would be employed under State management. The management of the three State railways—Eastern Bengal, Oudh and Rohilkhand, and the North-Western—refute such a theory. The Bengal Government, the United Provinces Government, and the Punjab Government all with one voice show their satisfaction with the management of these railway systems under State management. Then the increase in the mileage of the Eastern Bengal and the North-Western seems to me to be smaller than in the case of the East Indian, being about 22 and 14 per cent. as against 25 per cent. in the case of the East Indian Railway. But in regard to the passenger traffic the State railways are in no way behind Company management in promoting passenger traffic or goods traffic. The passenger traffic of the Eastern Bengal Railway has doubled between 1905 and 1913-14, having increased from 18 millions to 36 millions. The same was the case in the North-Western Railway, the increase being from 30 to 61 millions, and in the Oudh and Rohilkhand from 10·7 to 21 millions; whereas in the East Indian Railway it was 25 to 41 millions, or an increase of 64 per cent. only. The percentage of goods traffic is similar in the case of State management; in the Eastern Bengal it was 81 per cent., in the Oudh and Rohilkhand 50 per cent., in the North-Western 70 per cent., whereas in the East Indian it was only 40 per cent. I am not going to push these figures very far, but such as they are they at any rate do support my theory that State management is not less efficient than Company management, and that the State does not abandon the commerical principle as soon as it takes over the management.

"Then, there is one strong point in favour of my proposal, and that is, that if the East Indian Railway be taken up the whole of Upper India from Peshawar to the Eastern border with a population of 150 millions would be under one single railway system with the tariff rate improved and simplified, and that is a very considerable and decided advantage in favour of the adoption of such a policy. The Mackaye Commission state: 'The railways in 1906-07, it is alleged, failed to deal satisfactorily with the traffic offering and we are satisfied that this was the case. The chief complaint has been regarding the inadequacy of the rolling stock. Some witnesses have suggested that the existing rolling stock is not worked with the greatest efficiency. There may be room for improvement in this respect.' And I believe the experience of Government in this war when they have placed the whole railway system under one management shows that wagons can be made to do more work than was possible under the different systems in pre-war days. This is what the Indian Mining Association says: 'One of the greatest difficulties in the system of Company management is the barrier it raises between different provinces of India a railway system preventing the economical handling of rolling stock and traffic.' Then I have said already that complicated tariffs would be simplified and there would be no rigidity in the rates. The general economic development can also be fostered, at any rate in the present state of the industrial development of the country, under State management more efficaciously than under Company management. Sir T. R. Wynne, speaking on behalf of Government on a previous motion of Sir

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

Vithaldas Thackersey said that they had no power to alter the rates for the benefit of trade or industries. The Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, says that good will result if it is brought home to the Railway Companies that rate wars are exasperating to the public and are frequently obnoxious to trade. As regards disputes about spheres of influence and about short circuits by the construction of new lines it is clearly essential that the Government of India should have a final say in the decision of such questions. Similar remarks are made (I shall not read them) by the United Provinces Government and by the Madras Government and by the Bombay Government also with regard to the need for very much greater control than obtains at present. If the Government are going to have greater control and provide the funds and have a board of directors presided over by their own men practically I fail to see where the difference is between the Company management system and the State management system except in the parting unnecessarily with a certain proportion of profits.

"Then, Sir, the powers of the Traffic Manager are enormous. Sir Frederick Lely says:—'The traffic manager wields an irresponsible power over the country commanded by his railway which should not be entrusted to any man, and least of all to one who, rightly from his own point of view, regards nothing but his master's dividend and certain wide limits set down by Government. By a slight re-adjustment of rates he can, and sometimes does, break down a flourishing trade or transfer it to another part of the country; he can, and sometimes does, crush a rising home manufacture in favour of a foreign customer. An amended Code of Civil Procedure occupies for days and months the wisest of the land, but is of less practical consequence to the people of a district than a new edition of their local goods traffic book.' And he cites various instances as to how the Bombay Government felt themselves absolutely helpless in assisting indigenous match factories and other factories in their growth against the obstruction of the Companies who felt legitimately perhaps that their interest was jeopardised. I may draw the attention of Hon'ble Members to the example quoted at page 97 of the book.

"Then another argument that is advanced is that Company management is more economical. If we turn to page 104 in Volume XIX you will find that the higher officers of Companies are paid very much higher salaries than the State pays similar officers, and the evidence also shows that in regard to the rest of the staff the pay is very nearly the same; again the Companies cannot manage to obtain the same efficient staff of engineers and other servants as the State does because the State has got certain advantages in the market which the Companies do not possess. Thus you find a less efficient staff, but more highly paid in controlling Company-managed railways. It is also clear that one of the arguments which were advanced against the employment of Indians in the higher ranks in the State railways was that in the Companies' service there was hardly any Indian in the higher ranks. It was stated in the evidence that in the Bengal and North-Western Railway there was one engineer out of 66, in the East Indian one out of 45, in the Bombay, Baroda and Central India 3 out of 58, and in the Great Indian Peninsula 4 out of 91, all these being Assistant Engineers and some of them only temporary engineers, whereas in the Eastern Bengal Railway the Chief Engineer was an Indian trained man, one of the deputies was also an Indian Engineer. I do not say the position is satisfactory on State railways, but it may be said clearly that the position is nearly hopeless with regard to Companies, although perhaps under the pressure of the approaching revision of contracts railway companies seem to appear to be a little more reasonable at present than they were in the past. Sir, therefore, from the point of view of the employment of Indians, from the point of economy, from the point of view of the industrial development of the country, you find that Company management is in no way superior but in many respects inferior to State management. That being so, the financial position clearly shifts the onus completely on to the other side, and it would be impossible, I think, under the circumstances for any one to contend that Government or the people would suffer by the East Indian Railway Company, being taken over for management purposes by the Government. I may also advance another argument in support of my contention and that is that we shall acquire experience over a system which is homogenous and spreading over a wide area; and in length the Company and State lines would be about two-thirds and one-third, and there would be an opportunity of testing on a large scale the methods which at present prevail in India. What the future may bring forth it is difficult to say, but experience may show that changes are absolutely necessary in the methods of management. It may be said that there would be over-centralisation and that Government would not be able to cope with the increased work, but even now they have to make provision for supervision and Local Governments which at present are absolutely helpless in the matter may be utilised. It might be possible for this purpose to utilise the services of district boards or newly constituted paid boards. Surely there is enough mercantile talent available for the purpose. I hope, therefore, that the Council will unanimously adopt the suggestion I have made that the State should take over the management."

[18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir George Barnes.]

3-1 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes :—"I think, Sir, that it would be well that I should rise at once and tell the Council what the position of the Government is in regard to this matter. As the Hon'ble Member has just told us, this Resolution was originally put down by the Hon'ble Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola for the September Session in Simla. The Resolution as it then stood, and as it now stands, was divided into two parts. The first part is that the Council recommends to the Governor-General in Council that the contract of the East Indian Railway be determined by the 31st December, 1919. The latter part of the Resolution is that the State do take over the management of that railway system from that date. Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola said that he was quite willing to put down only the first part of the Resolution for the Simla Session. As regards the second part, he agreed that it should stand over and be dealt with in the Delhi Session. The first part accordingly was put down and disposed of. I promised Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola in Simla that notice would be given to determine the contract, and notice was duly given in October, and the contract will be determined on the 31st December, 1919. Now the reason why I asked Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola to postpone the second part of the Resolution was that the Government had in September last only just sent forward their recommendations in the previous month. As a matter of fact our Despatch was dated 17th August. Consequently the Despatch had probably not reached England, certainly there had been no time to consider it. In view of the remaining part of the Resolution which had been postponed until the Delhi Session, the Government telegraphed at the end of last year to the India Office inquiring what answer could be given to the pending Resolution in the Legislative Council, and inquiring whether they could give us an answer to our Despatch of August. The reply to our telegram was :—

'Your telegram dated December 6th. I am afraid that reply to your despatch dated August 17th cannot be promised by date named.'

I think that date named was the beginning of February. It went on—'It requires very careful consideration and must await Mr. Montagu's consideration on his return.' Well, the position to-day is that consideration of the whole question must stand over in England until the Secretary of State has returned to England. This seems to me not an unsatisfactory position so far as the Members of this Council are concerned as no decision has been arrived at, and no decision will be arrived at without hearing the views of everybody who wishes to express his views. The report of the debate to-day will of course be printed, and I can promise Members that it will be sent home and laid before the Secretary of State. Now, in these circumstances, there is really nothing that I can say to the Council except to point out exactly what the alternatives seem to be. There seem to be three alternative methods of dealing with the East Indian Railway, and each alternative has special advantages attaching to it. There is first the alternative that the Hon'ble Member has put before the Council, namely, State management, the second alternative is the continuance of the present state of things, that is to say, management by a Company domiciled in England but subject to a large decrease in the share of profits taken by the annuitants. The third alternative is one which I do not think has been touched upon by the Hon'ble Mover of the Resolution, is management by a commercial Company domiciled in India with Rupee capital and a mixed Board of Europeans and Indians. Now, I do not propose to set up an argument, on one side or the other. I propose to leave that for members who feel strongly in favour of any one of these three alternatives. I hope that the Hon'ble Member will feel when this debate comes to a close that if it has elicited the opinions of members of the Council that result will have served his purpose, and I hope that he will not press the Resolution to a division but will ask the leave of the Council to withdraw it."

8-7 P.M. The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandy of Kassimbazar :—" Sir, the East Indian Railway is one of the oldest and largest lines of railways in all Upper India. The first sod of this line was turned in 1852, during the time of Lord Dalhousie, and the first section, from Howrah to Pandua, was opened two years later. The line was constructed by a Company under a system of State guarantee, and though purchased by the Government by payment of annuities to shareholders, it is still being managed by a Company whose period of lease will terminate in December, 1919. Sir, the East Indian Railway Company has under its control nearly 3,000 miles of Railways, and its resources are vaster than even those of some of the minor Kingdoms and principalities of Europe. Nearly 72 crores of rupees have been invested in it, not an inconsiderable portion of which has gone to swell our national debt. Its net income comes to nearly six crores and a half a year, but it does not pay to the State more than two crores and a quarter annually. Sir, I beg to submit in the first instance that if the management of the Company were transferred to the State, the State certainly would make a much larger profit out of its working than the Company chooses to spare for it above its guaranteed interest. That would mean, Sir, additional prosperity of the people. In the second instance, the East Indian Railway Company is managed from London by a number of directors who very seldom come in touch with real public opinion of the Indian section of the community.

" Sir, if governing India from the Indian hill tops be so bad as described in the report of the Mesopotamian Commission, how much worse must the administration of a Company be whose headquarters are located in London ? Sir, in consequence of this isolation, the grievances of the Indian community, which are many and varied, including ill-treatment of Indian officers and passengers, do not reach the Board of Directors in London, and in consequence we are made to shift for ourselves as best as we may. I have got, Sir, a third submission to make. The East Indian Railway Company has an Agent in India, who has under him a Traffic Manager, a Chief Engineer, a Locomotive Superintendent, a Store-keeper and an Auditor, none of which offices has ever been filled, or is likely to be filled in the near future, by an Indian. But one of our main grievances in connection with the management of this Railway is not that no Indian has ever been able to reach the top of any department of the service of this Company, but that there are so few of them in its service enjoying a salary of even more than Rs. 300 a month. Sir, it is evidently a great slur on Indian intelligence : and if qualified Indians can now sit along with His Excellency the Viceroy in the highest Executive Council of the Empire, I really do not see why a large number of them should not be allowed to man the higher rungs of the services of this Company. Sir, I have no doubt that as soon as the management of the Company passes into the hands of the State, this grievance of the Indian people would vanish in no time. Taking all the above points together, I have no hesitation, Sir, in supporting the Resolution now under discussion. In conclusion, I would like to remind the Council of the dictum laid down by John Stuart Mill more than half a century ago that 'in the particular circumstances of a given age or nation, there is scarcely anything really important to the general interest which it may not be desirable or even necessary, that the Government should take upon itself, not because private individuals cannot effectually perform it, but because they will not.'"

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur :—"Sir, I rise to support the Resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma. The Hon'ble Mover has put his case so well before the Council that I do not think it necessary to detain the Council any longer by repeating the same arguments. As the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Department has expressed a wish to know the views of the Members, I beg to say that I am one of the supporters of this Resolution. I hope the Member in charge will place the proceedings of the debate before the Secretary of State with his favourable endorsement, for his acceptance." 3-12 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—"This Resolution has my whole-hearted support. In my opinion the interests of the people and the agricultural and industrial development of the country should be the highest objective and the guiding principle of the railway administration in this country. It is not possible to attain this high ideal so long as the railway administration continues to be under the management of the Companies. They are not amenable to Indian public opinion. 3-13 P.M.

"They are generally indifferent to the convenience and comforts of the great bulk of their travellers, namely, the 3rd class passengers, who contribute more than 88 per cent. of their yearly profits. The Government have already been managing nearly 8,000 miles of the railway lines under their direct control and the addition of a few more thousand miles, I do not think, will mean any particular inconvenience to the State. Rather the great advantage would be that the Government will have more money available, which, at present, goes to shareholders, in the shape of dividends, and the same could be more profitably utilized in the way of providing greater facilities for education and sanitation, which are the prime needs of the country at present and the progress of which has been greatly hampered owing to lack of funds Then there is a further and a great advantage, namely, the ill-treated passengers will have better opportunities to have their complaints heard and grievances redressed in a more effective manner and with greater promptitude than they at present have. For these reasons, Sir, I beg to support this Resolution."

The Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh :—"Mr. Vice-President, it is not without some diffidence that I rise to make a few observations in support of the Resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma. The question is of too technical a nature to enable me to form an independent opinion of my own. The opinions on the subject that I have come across are also of so conflicting a nature that no definite conclusion can be arrived at by a layman like myself. Therefore I venture to express my opinion on the matter only from a common sense point of view. The State is the owner of the line in question, but its management is in the hands of the East India Company under certain conditions. In accordance with those conditions the State has to provide expenditure needed for improvements, repairs etc. The East India Company gets a share of the net profits besides guaranteed interest on the deferred annuity amounting to £6,550,000 held by them. This share is a little above Rs. 28,00,000 in the year 1916-1917. Even if the question of determining the contract be simply decided on a consideration of £ s. d., I would unhesitatingly say that the State ought to take 3-15 P.M.

[Raja Sir Rampal Singh; Sir Hugh Bray.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

over the management under direct control. There is no doubt the State exercises very great control over the management under the present conditions, but why should not the full net earnings come to the State instead of a portion going to add to the dividends of the shareholders of the Company. The State is already managing certain lines, and I desire that this department of the State should get developed and gradually all lines at present owned by the State but managed by Companies on its behalf may come under its direct management. Such management will be more amenable to public opinion and the people will have a potent voice in it. Besides that, I have reasons to believe that State management will more readily accommodate itself to the commercial and industrial requirements of the country than that of a Company which has other demands to satisfy. With these few words I beg to support the motion."

3-17 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray :—"Sir, I think that I am not alone, although I seem to be alone so far in this Council, in thinking that the management of the East Indian Railway is the most efficient in India, and the State will do well to retain it or at the very worst, to retain it for the period of the war and one year afterwards pending further consideration of the subject. It is difficult to discuss the Resolution now before us without launching out into the sea, that very wide sea, of a discussion on the merits and demerits of State ownership and management of railways. In India, we have arrived at a compromise, and I think a happy compromise, of which the East Indian Railway is a favourable example. Personally I am in favour of Company management and Company ownership, because I believe it to be the most efficient, and I place efficiency first. But if we must have State ownership and State control, let it be limited on the lines very much for instance of the present arrangement with the East Indian Railway Company. What does my Hon'ble friend hope to achieve as the result of his proposal? Does he expect greater efficiency? He has told us that he expects financial economy, greater development and greater efficiency. Now, Sir, I look upon all these as pious but unjustified hopes. Any way he has attacked what is in my belief the best managed railway in India, and I do not think he will effect greater efficiency or greater development if he puts the management in the hands of the State. My Hon'ble friend has quoted a lot of figures by which he makes out that Government would have had tremendous funds to spend if it had undertaken the management of the East Indian Railway, but I submit with all deference that it is a very hypothetical argument. It does not follow that there would have been these profits if the State had managed the Railway.

"Then he says that the onus of proof lies on the people who want to continue the existing state of affairs. That does not seem to me quite fair. Surely, if anybody wishes to make a change it is for him to prove that the existing state of affairs is bad.

"Another point that he referred to was the striking fact that so many retired officials figured on the Boards of Railway Companies. Well, I submit that after they have retired they are quite independent and they have got there full scope and freedom as they are no longer under State control. Perhaps that is why the success of the Company is assured.

"There is one other possible argument put forward to support the claim of State management, and that relates to military reasons, but I do not think my friend referred to it. I dispute his efficiency, I dispute his economy and I dispute his contention that Government would have made profits which the Companies have made. So there remains, I think, only one object or result, and that is the political one. Now with the entry of politics into railway management, out goes efficiency and down goes revenue.

"The world is full of instances which prove this. If a railway belongs wholly or partially to the State or the people, it does not follow that the management of it for the State or for the people is best done by the State or by the people, and experience elsewhere has shown that Parliamentary interference in the running of the railways has been not for the benefit of the people at large, but to satisfy local or sectional or even personal interests. There are duties to be performed by the State which are unsuited for popular interference. One is the judicial, and I maintain another is the management of railways, and the best way of guarding it from detrimental popular interference is to place the management under an independent body under sufficient control, with, if possible, an interest in the results. That I suggest is exactly what we have in the case of the East Indian Railway, and I find no reason for disturbing an arrangement that is working satisfactorily for all parties. I will, Sir, without undertaking a dissertation on the subject of State versus Company ownership and management quote a few of the, I think, accepted arguments in favour of the latter. They are disputed, I know, by my friend, but there are two sides to every question.

"Private enterprise is bolder, Companies are more flexible, more ready to take risks and, try experiments in new methods. A Company will raise money more easily, and, even if it should pay more for it, will, as a rule, make it go further. Railway management is essentially a commercial business requiring commercial aptitude and training. A railway man must keep abreast of his work and work at all hours. If he fails, that is under a company, a better man takes his place, whereas in a State system it is too often the case that seniority counts for more than merit or special qualification. There is no room, Sir, for the dilatory methods of a bureaucracy in railway management. Private Companies lead and have always taken the lead in inventions and improvements. It would be difficult to point to a single important invention or improvement, the introduction of which the world owes to a State railway. The Germans have written many books on railways, some of them valuable, but in practical operation they have taught the world nothing. Is it only a coincidence that they are State Railway officials? But I think most Members of this Council know the case for Company ownership and management fairly well. There has been a great deal written on the subject, and I will not weary them with more of it. On the other hand, what are the arguments against? I think my Hon'ble friend has mentioned a good many, but I do not find anything that is not, I think, answered and met by the control that is exercised by Government in this country as in the case of the East Indian Railway.

"I may perhaps suggest that this Resolution seems to me to come a little oddly from my Hon'ble friend from Madras. We in Bengal I think, rather look upon the East Indian Railway as ours, and we have it and the Eastern Bengal State Railway constantly before our eyes, and though comparisons are odious, and I intend no reflection on the officials of the Eastern Bengal State Railway, who are victims of a system, I think there are few of us who have any doubt whatever as to which railway is the best managed, few of us who would wish to see the present management of the East Indian Railway terminated and taken over by the State."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea:—"Sir, I come from Bengal, and I regret to have to say that I entirely dissent from the view which has been put forward by my friend to my left. In comparing the East Indian Railway with the Eastern Bengal State Railway I am prepared to give the preference to the Eastern Bengal State Railway, and for the reason that I know it best. I am a daily passenger and I know the management of the Eastern Bengal State Railway has, and I will say this, it is excellent. But, on the other hand, when I have travelled by the East Indian Railway I have found that I am sometimes put to serious inconvenience, very serious inconvenience, and that is not only my complaint, but the complaint of other Indian passengers who travel by the same railway. Therefore our experiences differ in this matter, and if the experience of the Indian community were to be pitted against the experience of the European community (both of us are more or less representative men), I think it may be said that the experience of the great body of people who take advantage of the railways is against the management of the

3-25 P.M.

[Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

East Indian Railway by a Company. Again, it has been said by my friend that when politics enter a railway down goes the railway. I do not know that politics ever enter into railways. If you say that when Government control railways the revenue goes down, then I challenge the statement. Is it a fact that on the assumption of the administration of the Eastern Bengal Railway by the Government the revenues of that Railway have suffered? I think my Hon'ble friend the President of the Railway Board will be in a position to give me an answer in regard to that matter. But if there had been any serious decline of revenue I am quite sure the Government would not have continued the management of the line in its present condition. I am sure a change would have followed. I am sure Government would not quietly and silently have accepted a steady diminution of revenue. Therefore, I think that position is untenable—at any rate, it is not a proposition which can be proved by a reference to one or two facts. But there are these broad facts which I think support the Resolution of my Hon'ble friend. The profits of Company-managed railways must go into the pockets of the Company. The profits of Government-managed railways must go into the pockets of the tax-payer. Which is preferable, let the Council answer. I think that the profits of railways which have been financed by the State ought to find their way into our pockets, into the pockets of the State, swell the revenues of the State rather than those of the Companies

"Then, Sir, there is another very important fact which has to be borne in mind. The Government is daily becoming more and more amenable to the control of public opinion. Companies do not stand in that position. Therefore the more Government-managed railways we have the greater will be the control of public opinion over those managements, and that is already seen in the manner in which Government-managed railways are controlled For instance, one of the great inconveniences of the East Indian Railway Company—and all my friends must be in a position to testify to that fact—is that there is no adequate arrangement for providing refreshment for Hindu passengers. They are left to shift for themselves. Take the North-Western Railway, which is a State Railway, they have been able to make provision for that purpose. Why should not the East Indian Railway be able to make similar arrangements? They do not care to do it; public opinion has not sufficient control over them. If public opinion had the control, it would have been done long ago.

"Then, again, take the employment of Indians in the higher ranks of the East Indian Railway administration. Sir, I find it stated that there are (I have got the figures with me) only about a dozen Indians on the East Indian Railway drawing salaries ranging from Rs. 300 to Rs. 650 and none above Rs. 650. That is not the case with the Eastern Bengal State Railway, which runs for only about 200 miles. The Chief Engineer was an Indian, as my friend has pointed out, and some of the higher officials are Indians. You do not find that on the East Indian Railway line for no other reason than that public opinion has no control over it. Therefore, Sir, having regard to these circumstances I think the Resolution of my Hon'ble friend ought to be accepted.

"There is another consideration of the gravest importance. World-forces are all pointing to the nationalisation of every branch of the administration. The railways must be nationalised, and the first step towards nationalisation is the assumption of control by the Government and, as the Government will, I hope, be nationalised within a measurable distance of time, Indian opinion insists upon the management of railways being taken over by the Government, because it is the first definite step towards that nationalisation of railways to which we all aspire, and that in the best interests of the country."

3-31 P.M. The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—"Sir, I do not propose to make any speech. I will content myself by expressing my entire concurrence with my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma."

[18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Sastri; Mr. K. K. Chanda; Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"Sir, I likewise support the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution." 3-31 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"Sir, I wish to do the same, and will not detain the Council with any remarks." 3-32 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"I am not prepared on this subject to support the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution. It may be a very good one, or it may be a very unuseful one; but I entirely agree with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member for Commerce and Industry that the present is rather a premature time to discuss this question, when the whole Despatch which was sent some time ago to the Secretary of State is now before the India Council, and when some time must elapse before they are able to consider the whole question and give us the benefit of their own views. I know that Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoollah was very keen on this question, and that he had pressed this Council to accept his views. I know also, as a matter of fact, that the majority of my countrymen are in favour of State-managed railways. That is true, but apart from the prematurity of this Resolution, to me it seems to be a kind of what you would call a 'far cry.' There are very many cries taken up by my countrymen which, when analysed, broadly speaking, come to nothing. A variety of shibboleths are from time to time pronounced, political shibboleths, commercial shibboleths, industrial shibboleths, which when examined and analysed in all their multiplicity of details will be found to be hollow. They resolve themselves into dew. 3-33 P.M.

"Now, Sir, I do not pretend to any special expert knowledge of railways, but I may say that, like finance, I have studied railway literature for many years past—in fact, for the past 40 years. I have read also many great authorities on the one side and on the other. The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has quoted some extracts from an authority, whose name he has not given, but I have also read a great many railway books by well-known authorities on the one side and on the other bearing on the railway administration of Germany, of Russia, of France, of the United States, and of England. There are books and books; there are also what you call interests and interests. There are class interests everywhere, in Europe, in the United States, and here. But a question of this character has to be considered on its own independent merits free from all class interests. We must, in the first place, have a very broad ground on which to stand and soar above all class interests and class biases, and the second thing necessary for us is to go upon a sure foundation, the foundation of facts. Those facts are of a very elaborate character, and, if we examine the merits and demerits of the question, we shall find that there is nothing special to choose between the one method of management and the other. I have tried to fathom these merits and demerits for a long time, and I have come to the conclusion that the millenium will not arrive nor will any of those advantages to which the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea has referred accrue if your railways are to be managed in future entirely by the State. I deny that the happy millenium will arrive. There are no miracles to follow. The State will manage just as the Companies manage. It is said that the State should manage the railways because it is right and that public opinion is backing them. If so, I should like to ask the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea whether the hammering away in this place yesterday and to-day, and even to-morrow, on the Public Services Commission has brought any good? Public opinion is there, but what have you been able to do . . . ?"

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"May I rise to correct a point. I did not say that I am right because public opinion is right I said I am right because I know it to be right. I am a daily passenger myself, and I have seen these things and felt them; I speak from personal experience."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"The Hon'ble Member's personal opinion is one thing. The question as to how far State-managed railways are better or how far Company-managed railways are better is a very large and complex one and cannot be decided by the personal experience of a single man It is a very difficult and complicated question in my opinion, and it is no use discussing it in the light-hearted fashion that has been done here to-day.

"With very many of the points which the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray has brought to the notice of the Council I agree, because as a business man he fully knows many intricate matters connected with railways, and I think, therefore, that most business men will be able to agree more or less with Sir Hugh Bray, whatever the opinion of my ignorant countrymen may be to the contrary. If, Mr. Vice-President, my countrymen will study the history of railways better they will find that for years together the East Indian Railway was the mainstay of the Government when it was even managed by itself Of course, they do not know that, even after 1880, when the Government acquired the railway but leased it for managements. Why was this? Because it is the most efficiently-managed railway, and its efficiency can be decided in one way only, and that is by the results. There was the North-Western Railway which for years together was called the Cinderella of State Railways. The Railway owns many miles of lines and has a capital of something like 80 crores (the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes will correct me if I am wrong, I am speaking from memory) Take any Railway Administration Report. What will you find? For years together this the largest State Railway incurred losses after losses by lakhs It was State-managed without any interference from anybody; Government alone was the authority, and this is what happened. Well, Sir, other railways, even guaranteed railway companies, also made losses for years and years together. And who supported the Government and tried to diminish the burden of taxation? The East Indian Railway, and in a smaller degree the Rajputana-Malwa Railway. That is all up to 1904-05. These two railways gave you the bulk of the profits. Had these railways also been losing concerns, why the revenue would have suffered and you would have had to bear the burden of larger taxation than at present That is the point. If you read the history of each of the railways from the very beginning—they are given in the Railway Administration Reports and those who run may read—you will find that there is not much to choose between a State-managed railway and a Company-managed railway. Of course, there is the big cry about the discomfort to passengers and many other small things. I do not deny them. Those must be remedied. But what are these small things compared to the larger and statesman-like question that has been raised? I do admit that there is a cry about the passenger service. But can any one with confidence say that the passenger service on State-managed lines was not equally complained of? Both railways are the same in this respect. I do not think, Sir, that, unless there is a very thorough independent investigation by independent men, they can come to any decisive conclusion whether a State-managed railway is better or a Company-managed railway is better. Possibly they will be equipoised. But, situated as we are in India, and situated as the Government is with so many burdens and the demands made upon them for a variety of objects, specially Education and Sanitation, it will be far better for the Government, for a time at least, to let these two classes of railways go on working side by side and find out in that way which is more advantageous for the public. It is not a question of mere figures or statistics or of personal opinion. It is something more than that. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma quoted so many per cent. of the East Indian Railway's profits. True. He has been quoting these figures for the last three years. But they are war figures, and when the war is ended you will find that all this revenue will collapse . . . ."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"I quoted pre-war figures."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"Very well, you may take the pre-war figures; but even then you will find that all the years are not regular. Sometimes a famine occurs, and famine brings more railway revenue than ordinary trade, because of the larger quantity of grain that has to be carried. Then, export trade is sometimes very heavy and at other times very small. When export trade is not very brisk railways suffer, while when export trade is large the railways do well. Even in recent years there had been railway deficits. All these are considerations which have to be taken into account. There are very many economic factors which have to be considered very seriously before we can come to any conclusion on this subject. I think, Sir, without taking up more of the time of Council that it would be wiser on the part of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma if he postponed his Resolution till, as the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes wisely said, this Despatch from the Secretary of State arrives and we know as a matter of fact what is the situation. If my personal opinion were taken, I do say that after studying this question very minutely, after studying the American, British, German and French railway systems, I say emphatically that Company management is the better of the two."

3-42 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—" Sir, I am very sorry to say that I do not agree with the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha in what he said, namely, that we should postpone an expression of opinion in this Council until the Government of India's Despatch has been dealt with by the Secretary of State for India. It is quite obvious that, whatever Despatch the Government of India have sent Home, they have made certain recommendations—certain definite recommendations. Those recommendations have gone to the Secretary of State for India for his decision; and they are under consideration. Surely after his decision is given it would be futile for us to discuss the subject in this Council and to express our opinion. Therefore it seems to me obvious that those who are competent to express an opinion on this question—which is a highly technical one—should express their opinion now.

"Now, Sir, I was very much amused and also instructed by two speeches to which I listened to-day on this Resolution, the one coming from the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray and the other from my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea. The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray made out an excellent case for Company management on the ground that the Government is incompetent, that it is a bureaucratic Government and unable to manage railways. As I listened to him I really thought that, though it was his voice, the sentiments and views were those of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea. And when I listened to the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea, although I recognised his voice, the sentiments he expressed were Sir Hugh Bray's sentiments; because the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea contended that the Government was fair, that it managed everything efficiently, and that it listened to public opinion. But Mr. Bannerjea can bear personal testimony because he is a frequent traveller and passenger on the East Indian Railway...."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" Daily."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—" Daily; and the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray also is competent to express an opinion as a merchant, and a prominent commercial figure. It seems to me that there is a great deal to be said on both sides, namely, for the advocacy which favours State management and for the advocacy which favours Company management. Now all that I can say is this, that we know this, that public opinion in India, as far as one is able to ascertain, is certainly more in favour of State management than Company management; and what strikes me is this that if it is going to be Company management, and not State management, as a man of commonsense I should say that the Company should at least be domiciled in India and not in Great Britain. Therefore public opinion favours State management as best; but the next-best thing to that as it strikes me, although I am not competent to say whether State management is better, or Company management is better, is that if it is going to be Company management, it should be by a Company domiciled in India."

[Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

3-46 P.M. The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" Sir, I am sorry and surprised that after having listened to the speech of the Hon'ble the Member for Commerce and Industry the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha should have disputed the propriety of the discussion which has been raised on the Resolution before the Council. I fear my Hon'ble friend has been exhibiting a little too much impatience over some of the recent discussions in this Council, and I regret to think that he has not been quite fair to his Colleagues who have raised these questions in dealing with them in the manner he has done. But I would not say anything more about that. My Hon'ble friend admits that the majority of our fellow-countrymen want State management; but he says they are cries of ignorance, as 'shibboleths' and so on. With all my respect for my Hon'ble friend I must say that he is mistaken in this view. Both he and the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray, whose views he endorsed, gave reasons for being in favour of the management of railways by Companies as against that by the State. But there was one outstanding point which neither of them answered, and that is that the State, i.e., the public has to sacrifice a large revenue under Company management. The Company which is managing the East Indian Railway at present, under a lease from the Government, is receiving between 20 and 25 lakhs every year as its share of the surplus profits. After the Government has paid the interest which has been guaranteed on the Company's debentures, after it has paid all the working expenses, including the salaries of the Company's officers, and the expenses of its London Board, in addition to all these charges incurred in India and in England, the Company receives between 20 and 25 lakhs a year from Government for the mere management of the Railway. The total amount of the share of the surplus profits earned annually by the various Companies which are managing our State railways is over six times as much, and it has been steadily growing. In 1909-10 it was 48 lakhs; in 1916-17 it stood at 115 lakhs a year; in 1918-19 it has been budgetted at 160 lakhs a year. The surplus share of profits which we have been paying to the Companies is, therefore, a very considerable item. Now, we urge that the State should take up the management of State railways. There is no question here of the ownership of these railways. The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray is rather late in the day in saying that Companies should own railways in India. The State is the owner of all the trunk lines. Our whole contention is that as the State manages some of the railways which it owns, it should take the others also under its own direct management. This would result in 160 lakhs being saved on the basis of the present revenue. In the course of time this amount will steadily increase, and we desire that this increasing income should be secured to the people. If companies manage the railways the surplus share of profits is taken away from the people and the Government. We want that whatever profits are earned by railways, being contributed by the people, should go to the State exchequer and be available to the people through the State exchequer. That is the one argument which stands out above all others in the discussion. No reason has been suggested as to why we should continue to make this tremendous sacrifice of revenue.

"There is another point. The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray did not discuss military reasons, but they are important enough not to have escaped his attention. One disadvantage of the present system of Company management has been exhibited this year. As we know the Government thought it fit during the year to enhance railway fares. The revenue from this source has been very considerable, and a considerable sum of the profits has gone to the Companies. This has been a matter of serious complaint. If the people felt that at a time of war enhancements were made for the purposes of the war and went to the State exchequer, there would have been much less complaint than there has been now when people know that part of the profits which have been made in the interests of the State and in the public interest are to be shared by companies.

[18TH MARCH, 1918.] [Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

"The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray has stated it as his opinion that the East Indian Railway is the best-managed, the most efficiently-managed Railway in India. I am sorry to say, Sir, that I cannot agree in that view. I have travelled a good deal in this country over the North-Western Railway, the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, the Eastern Bengal State Railway, and a greater deal over the East Indian Railway. I am sorry to say, but it has to be said, that if the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray inquires he will find that there is among Indian gentlemen, passengers from the 1st to the 3rd class, much complaint against the management of the East Indian Railway.

"The management of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway is immensely more popular. The management of the North-Western Railway is also much more popular. It attends better to the comforts and conveniences of Indian passengers, both Hindus and Muhammadans, and it treats them much better. In the Eastern Bengal State Railway also we have found that attention has been paid to the comfort of Indian passengers. But in the case of the East Indian Railway the complaints of the Indian public receive a poor response.

"My Hon'ble friend then dealt, Sir, with the three points which he said should be considered as determining for or against the one or the other kind of management. The first of these was efficiency. He thought it had not been proved that the State would be able to manage its railways more efficiently than they are managed by Companies. Well, we have got three instances to judge from, that of the North-Western, the Oudh and Rohilkhand and the Eastern Bengal State Railway. Has anything been said against the management of these railways? I do not know. The second point was economy. It has been shown by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, and it cannot be disputed, that the management of the Companies is more expensive than that of the State railways. I will give a few instances. The Agent of the East Indian Railway draws Rs. 3,500 a month; the Agent of the North-Western Railway, which is a State railway, draws Rs. 3,000 a month. The Traffic Manager of the East Indian Railway draws Rs. 2,500 a month; the Traffic Manager of the North-Western Railway, draws Rs. 2,000 a month. The Carriage and Wagon Superintendent draws Rs. 2,500 a month on the East Indian Railway, whereas he draws Rs. 2,000 a month on the North-Western Railway. I might mention that the open mileage of the East Indian Railway is only 2,813 miles, whereas that of the North-Western Railway is 5,434 miles. So in the matter of economy the management of the Company-managed railways has not been shown to be economical. On the contrary, I have shown that, in addition to all the working expenses and other charges, the surplus profits which are paid to Companies clearly make their management uneconomical. The third point urged by my Hon'ble friend was where is the guarantee that you will earn the same profits? And this argument was repeated by Sir Dinshaw Wacha. Well I ask where is the reason to apprehend that you will not earn the same profits? I submit there is every reason to think that we shall earn greater profits. If I may briefly refer, Sir, to some disadvantages, I say these block rates which are employed by one railway administration against another in order to divert traffic to its own route, even if the natural route should be by the line of another administration, constitutes the first serious complaint against the present system. The quotation of these block rates has been generally condemned as a hindrance to the natural flow of traffic, and as contrary to the general principle that all State railways should be treated as one concern. This arises simply from the fact that, though the railways belong to the State, their management has been entrusted to different Companies, which are each anxious to secure their own profits and therefore jealous of the sphere of influence of the other. These block rates are entirely anomalous and indefensible. The next disadvantage to which I would refer is the hire system for rolling stock interchanged between different lines. This prevents the utilisation of the surplus stock of one line upon another, and clearly works against economy, especially on occasions of large fairs, etc. If, instead of a separate stock for each State railway, there were a common stock for all State lines of the same gauge, and properly distributed according to actual requirements, there should be large savings in the number of vehicles, reducing the capital cost, and in the empty haulage which is often resorted to in order to avoid the hire.

"Thirdly, the quotation of lower mileage rates to and from the ports than the rates for provincial or inter-provincial traffic. This encourages foreign trade and in many cases withholds necessary aid from indigenous industries.

"Fourthly, the contesting by the companies of claims for compensation for loss or damage to goods, etc., on evasive grounds, which the late General Richard Strachey remarked the Government could not very well do.

"If I may briefly sum up the comparative advantages and disadvantages of State management and Company management I would say : Firstly, the State management is amenable to the Government of India in India which can be influenced by the representatives of the people ; while the Companies' managements are directed by their boards sitting in London which are not in touch with the people, nor can they be influenced by the Government except to the extent to which they are bound by the express terms of their contracts. Secondly, State management naturally works in the interests of the public, while Company management aims at profits only. Thirdly, the treatment of Indian passengers and traders is generally better on State-managed lines than on Company-worked lines. Fourthly, as a matter of fact, State management is cheaper than that of the Companies; for instance, the salaries of higher officials given above are higher on the Company-managed lines than on Government-managed lines. Fifthly, profits made by the State are entirely used for the public benefit or towards the reduction of taxation; while the profits made by the Companies are divided between the Government and the shareholders of the Companies. Sixthly, Government have a larger field and employ a much larger number of expert officials than the individual companies, and are therefore in a position to obtain the best men on better terms than the companies do. As a matter of fact, companies often draw their officers from Government service by offering them higher emoluments. This tends to raise salaries. Seventhly, in the matter of raising funds, Government can obtain loans on cheaper terms than the companies. Eighthly, Government management is impartial in the employment of its servants, while companies' managements are partial to Europeans to the disadvantage of the children of the soil. Ninthly, divided interests created by the employment of different companies for the working of the State railways are responsible for irregularities which involve large sums of extra expenditure and serious inconvenience to the public. Among these I may mention the complicated tariffs of rates and fares which the Government of India have been trying in vain to get simplified for the last 40 years and more. The puzzling tariffs and differences in the general classification of goods on the different railways lead to overcharges and undercharges against the merchants and the general public, resulting in serious delays, annoyance, extra expense and correspondence in the settlement of claims on account thereof. Then the anomalous rates for goods charged in numerous cases are detrimental to the development of Indian industries and to the public generally. Sir William Clark admitted this on the occasion of the previous debate on the subject that this was entirely due to the employment of different companies. Difficulties experienced in the provision of carriage and wagon stock on occasions of large fairs and rushes of goods traffic on one railway while stock might be lying idle on other lines will be avoided; and the longer haulage of goods by circuitous routes created by competition between different railway administrations will also be avoided. Tenthly, frequent unreasonableness of companies and the present arrangement by which Governments in India have to reason with the companies' officers, who can always evade responsibility by an appeal to their Board of Directors, who correspond direct with the Secretary of State in London and use their personal influence with him to the detriment of the public. Attention has been drawn to this point by the Government of the United Provinces in paragraph 5 of their letter. This is a long-standing complaint; it was voiced over half-a-century ago by the Government of India in their Despatch No. 28 of the 22nd March, 1869, in which they wrote that their decisions were not accepted as final in India, but were habitually referred to the Board of Directors in London.

"These, Sir, are some of the disadvantages of the present system. I have already indicated the advantages which will result if the railways will be managed under the direct control of the Government as one concern upon uniform principles instead of in different pieces, under different administrations with divided and conflicting interests. There would be one simple tariff of rates and fares and uniform classification of goods on all State railways, removing all the puzzling complications which nobody seems to understand at present It would remove also the block rates at present quoted by one administration against routes served by other administrations, and tend to greater economical and industrial development of the country, bringing peace, prosperity, and contentment to the people; and, above all, all surplus profits which are taken away by the companies will remain in the State treasury and reduce taxation.

"My Hon'ble friends, Sir Hugh Bray and Sir Dinshaw Wacha, have stated it as their opinion that the State management of railways will not be better than Company management. As against that I would invite the attention of Council to the opinions of General Richard Strachey and Colonel Conway Gordon, which they expressed before the Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1884.

"In answer to the question 'Will you now give the Committee your opinions regarding the disadvantages of having the Indian Railways worked by commercial companies ?' Colonel Conway Gordon said : 'First, that the object of a private company will naturally be to develop a dividend ; that as long as the maximum dividend be secured the company will be indifferent as to whether the dividend is derived from a small traffic at high rates, or a large traffic at low rates; secondly, that it may often be the true interests of a company as a dividend-seeking concern to charge as much high rates as may be sufficient to contract the export trade in some particular article of produce, or such rates for the carriage of coal as may tend to strangle the industries in other provinces; thirdly, that the desire to secure a good dividend on all occasions naturally tends to make the servants of a private company very cautious in trying experiments towards reducing rates and fares; fourthly, that every rupee taken out of the country by an English company in excess of the normal rates of interest on the State debt constitutes practically a direct tax on transit, which must, of course, have its effect on checking the export and import trade, and on the general development of the country; fifthly, that where a company is given a fixed guarantee of interest, as long as the net profits of the line are not in excess of the guaranteed rate of interest, there is no incentive towards economical working. These are all disadvantages.'

"He was then asked to state as a man having great experience of the working of railways, what were the advantages gained to the public by the State working the railways? and he replied: 'I think that the advantages of State working are, first, that it may often be to the advantage of the country as a whole for Government to lower a rate, and to work at the lowest possible margin of profit, thus accepting a slight fall in the railway receipts in order to secure an advantage in some other respect, either to encourage the export trade in some particular staple or to foster some new industry ; secondly, that it is to the advantage of every country, and particularly of India, that the railways should be worked so that they may pay no more than their working expenses, including interest at the normal rate on their capital, all additional profit being nothing more than a direct tax on transit; thirdly, that the Government has a larger selection of officers to choose from all of whom are more or less acquainted with the customs of the country.'

"I fear, Sir, I am exceeding my time, but if you will allow me a little more time . ."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"If the Hon'ble Member wishes to continue he must really speak slower. I have been unable to follow him for the last ten minutes, and the Reporters must be in exactly the same position."

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"Thank your, Sir, I will. I should like to draw attention to the evidence of General Strachey also. He was asked—'Then in point of fact you do not think railways can be worked more economically by companies than by the State?' and he replied: 'No, as a matter of economy I think not. I think our statistical returns give perfectly satisfactory results for State railways.' Another point that was put to him was—'You think the railways would be more likely to be of use to the public if in the hands of the Government than if in the hands of private companies,' and he stated—'I think the balance would be in that direction.' It was further put to him—'You think that the public might obtain greater advantages from the Government than they would be able to do from the companies?' and he replied—'I am sure they would.'

"These, Sir, are the opinions of gentlemen who held the highest positions in the management of Indian railways. I would also like to quote the opinion of Mr. Carl Vrooman from his book published by the Oxford University Press in 1910, from which the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has partly quoted. After having compared the railway systems in Europe he arrived at a conclusion which is worthy of consideration. He says:—

'Thus after a careful survey of the results of government ownership of railways in the leading countries of continental Europe, we are forced irresistibly to the conclusion that these Government roads can boast of having given a better service and lower rates to the travelling and shipping public, and better pay and better conditions of labour to their employés than have the corporation railways of the same countries. In addition to all this, the financial results of these roads have been entirely creditable. In the long run no deficits have been created by any of the Government railway systems under consideration, and profits have been gained which have proven sufficient for all the requirements of the service including the payment of interest on their bonded indebtedness as well as a certain amount each year towards the liquidation of that debt.'

"I have done, Sir, in this matter that the interest of the general public should be the paramount consideration before the Government. The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes has assured us that the matter is going up before the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for his consideration and decision. I hope that the point will receive attention, and that the question will be decided from the point of view of whether there is any justification in the existing state of things for companies to be allowed to take away so large a share of the profits when the Government has guaranteed the interest on their debentures and pays all the working expenses, including the salaries of the officers. I hope with confidence that the recommendation that is contained in the Resolution will be finally accepted by Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay :—"Sir, I rise to support the Resolution. The question of State versus Company management of railways is a technical question. Most of the Members of this Council are not very well qualified to express any expert opinion on it. It is a fact, however, that this question was referred, I do not remember exactly by Local Governments or the Imperial Government, to various bodies and associations in all parts of the country. The opinions of these bodies were entirely in favour of management of railways by the State. In my province there is a notorious example of management of railways by a company, I refer to the Bengal and North-Western Railway. Practically there is no management. There is mismanagement from beginning to end. Sir, the Bengal and North-Western Railway is a bye-word for mismanagement throughout the province. There is, strictly speaking, no fixed time for trains to arrive at, or depart from, any station, there is no consideration shown for the convenience of passengers whether 1st class or 3rd class, there is no accommodation worth the name in any of the stations where gentlemen can rest for any time. The platforms of railway stations are under the sky, and during the rainy season a large number of people remain standing on the platform some time under heavy downpour until some train arrives to carry them. This is, perhaps, an extreme instance of the management of railways by a company. The Bengal and North-Western Railway is, I suppose, an independent company. When a complaint is made as regards any matter connected with the railway it is not heard by anyone ! There is no one to listen to any grievances . . . ."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" I think the Hon'ble Member is travelling outside the terms of the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay :—" Sir, I support the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Sir, the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray and the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha have dealt at some length with the general advantages of the Company system of management, but they have not addressed any remarks on the distinction I have sought to draw between Company system proper and the so-called company system which obtains in India. The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray said 'the East Indian Railway is efficiently managed, why change it.' Assuming that the statement is correct, for it is not acknowledged by all, he does not go into detail to show that other railways are not worked equally satisfactorily. He does not show that on State-managed systems Government have incurred loss which they had to recoup from the general revenues. Assuming that the East Indian Railway manages its affairs efficiently, there is nothing to show that it would suffer under State management. This is what the Punjab Government said with regard to the North-Western Railway : 'The State management system on the whole gives satisfaction to the administration and to the people of the Punjab.' The Punjab Chamber say : 'The management of the Government system endeavours to do its best with the facilities at its disposal.'

4-8 P. M.

" There is the opinion of the commercial public as well as of the Government, I mean the Punjab Government. The United Provinces Government states—

'The State Railway within the Province lies between the two extremes; and the conclusion seems to be that while the very best Company management is superior to Government control, on the other hand, Government control is better than any, except thoroughly good Company management.'

" Then they invite attention to the necessity of ultimate control by the Supreme Government, as the Local Government has absolutely no control when the Company goes wrong. They say that there is absolute necessity for control over block rates, showing clearly that, although at certain times a Company may behave well, still if it does not behave well, even the Government is helpless and powerless in the matter. So if you tighten the control either by legislation or by other expedients it is no longer Company management, but it is State management really masquerading under the guise of Company management.

" Then with regard to the administration of the Eastern Bengal Railway, I do not see any reason why the State should not manage it on up-to-date lines. Then the argument that the revenue might suffer in the hands of the State, that so much profit would not have been earned, has not been substantiated ; while the figures go to show that there has been a progressive rise both in passenger and goods traffic on State-managed railways. The net earnings increased from £665,600 in 1905 to 1·1 million and odd in 1913 and 2·3 million in 1916-17 . . ."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—" Which Railway is it ? "

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur Sarma :—" The Eastern Bengal Railway. The revenue on the North-Western Railway increased from 2·1 millions in 1905 to 2·8 millions in 1913 and 3·4 in 1916-17; and on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway it increased from £431,867 and odd in 1905 to £837,600 in 1913 and 1 million and odd in 1916-17. Therefore, there has been a progressive increase in the net revenue of those railways, and surely no one can say that State management is resulting in any loss to the tax-payer.

"Then with regard to the remarks made by my Hon'ble friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha that in old times the North-Western Railway was a burden to the tax-payer, he seems to forget that a good portion of that North-Western Railway is a strategic railway, that it is a military line, running through waste lands, and that no one ever looked to any profit on that portion of the railway, but the net results in recent times which accrued, taking the line which traverses the populous parts of the province into consideration, are satisfactory. Therefore, Sir, I think there is absolutely no force in the argument that under State management the revenues are likely to suffer.

"Then my Hon'ble friend seems to be assured that Company management of the railways has been satisfactory to the Government, and that nothing more need be done in the matter, whereas almost every Government asks the Government of India to take wider powers of control which, as I have said, would reduce the so-called liberty to a farce. This is what the United Provinces Government says:—

'The necessity for stronger powers of intervention has been brought home in this province in a very emphatic form by the frequent unreasonableness of one Railway administration. Instances of such unreasonableness would probably be materially decreased if the administering companies were domiciled in India. The present arrangements by which a Local Government has to reason with railway officers who can always evade responsibility by an appeal, real or imaginary, to their Board in London, are highly unsatisfactory, both to the Government and the Railway . . . . The present measure of control, for example, which is provided by the scales of maxima and minima rates, is apparently inadequate to regulate such matters as unfair block rates. A strong hand is also required over the competition between private companies for spheres of influence, and more particularly where the interests of great ports compete with those of inland provinces; but as new contracts are given, or existing contracts are revised, a much more efficient power of control ought to be reserved by the Supreme Government as an essential condition to the maintenance or extension of administration by companies.'

That does not seem to be satisfactory so far as Company management is concerned. The Madras Government believes that the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway is the worst offender in the matter of overcrowding of third-class passengers, and if any change in the management is to be made it might be effected there. The Report of the Pilgrim Committee also show how helpless the Madras Government were to cope with the third-class passenger traffic; and recent experience also emphasises the fact that Branch line Companies cannot make any progress owing to the jealousy of the Guaranteed Railway Companies.

"Then the Bombay Government states:—

'There appears to be good ground for the impression that the Railway Companies are not responsive to representations regarding agricultural interests . . . Complaints are heard of the preference given to foreign produce with a long lead over local produce with a short lead and no effective remedy appears to lie elsewhere than in legislation.'

"Then, Sir, one more quotation and I shall have done on this point. Speaking of a factory in Ahmedabad which the Bombay Government tried to promote Sir Frederic Lely says:—

'The State Guaranteed Railway was giving a bounty to the foreign manufacturer equivalent to the whole cost of carriage between Bombay and Ahmedabad It would strain the powers of a Viceroy to do as much for a home trade. It is impossible to imagine his doing it, as the railway does, for a foreigner. On remonstrance by the Commissioner the Traffic Manager of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway assented to some but little modification, but argued that 'any reduction in favour of Ahmedabad will kill our traffic in imported matches from Bombay, much against our interests. Competition with Karachi and Calcutta has forced us to quote lower rates from Bombay. The Bombay Government would give no help beyond the cynical advice to Mr. Munshi to supply his neighbours and not to extend his market.'

"Similarly, a match factory at Pilibhit does not seem to have fared better. Consequently, Sir, from the economic as well as from the point of view of agricultural interests, it seems to be necessary that Government should take much more control over Companies. If Government is going to do that for the Company, pay for its expenses, provide capital for the working lines, to make all the improvements, then why should not the Government do all these things themselves and not take all the profits instead of doing the whole work in the name of a Company adorned by the presence of certain pensioned officers on its staffs and giving it a share of the profits. The present arrangement seems to be absolutely indefensible, both in the interests of the country as well as of efficient administration. The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes asked me as to whether I should not have applied myself to the third alternative, namely, to the formation of another Company in India instead of taking over the East Indian Railway Company. I have deliberately refrained from taking up that question, because at present under rapidly changing conditions the best course is to take over the management of the line and work it, and if after a little experience it is found that there are inconveniences, if it be found that there are Indians and Europeans here forthcoming to take over the management, at not prohibitive cost, then by all means the change may be made. But the Resolution asks the Council to take over the management themselves in 1919, for if they do not do it now they cannot do it for some time longer, and with the increase in railway rates, with the growth of railway revenue, it seems to be indefensible to leave a share to a Company that does so little and can do so little.

"The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha referred to his general experience, but has not addressed himself to the particular question on hand, and I do not think therefore it is necessary to refer at greater length to his criticisms, especially when the Bombay Millowners Association and Indian Chamber of Commerce support my proposals. He relies on State versus Company management, general theories......"

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"I have deliberately refrained from saying anything."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"I am glad that on this particular question Sir Dinshaw Wacha has no particular opinion to express."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"I have already expressed it to the Government."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"Order, order."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir......"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I understood the Hon'ble Member had finished."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"With your permission I may state that, having regard to the remarks of Sir George Barnes and feeling as I do that it is impossible for the Government to take up any other attitude, having sent up their recommendation to the Secretary of State, I must express my gratitude to the Council for permitting an expression of opinion which, I think, is in time. Having regard to the position and attitude of the Government, I beg leave to withdraw the Resolution."

[The Vice-President; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [18TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" Does the Hon'ble Member desire to withdraw his Resolution ? "

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Yes ".

The Resolution was, by leave of the Council, withdrawn.

The Council adjourned to Tuesday, the 19th March at 11 A.M.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915. (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Tuesday, the 19th March, 1918.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble SIR GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C.S.I., K.C., Vice-President, presiding and 56 Members, of whom 52 were Additional Members.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—" Sir, I lay on the table a statement regarding the amounts spent by the various Local Governments on anti-malarial measures during the last ten years, which was promised in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi on the 5th September 1917." 11-6 A. M.

INDIAN SOLDIERS (LITIGATION) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I move that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law to provide for the special protection in respect of civil and revenue litigation of Indian soldiers serving under war conditions be taken into consideration. 11-7 A. M.

" I explained the objects of this Bill as fully as I could when I introduced it. There was then no indication of any disapproval on the part of the Council, and the only amendments that have been received do not in any way suggest that the principle of the Bill is disapproved; they rather seek to enlarge the privileges that are granted to soldiers under this Bill. In these circumstances, I do not think that I need add anything to what I said on the last occasion."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan :—" Sir, I beg to move the following amendment, that after clause 8, the following clause be inserted :— 11-8 A. M.

Postponement of proceedings against Indian soldier on leave.

' 9. When any document is produced before any Court by or on behalf of an Indian soldier who is a party to any proceeding in such Court purporting to be signed by his Commanding Officer and to the effect that such soldier—

[Captain Ajab Khan ; Sir William Vincent ; Mr. M. A. Jinnah ; Mr. K. K. Chanda.] [19TH MARCH, 1918.]

(a) is on leave of absence for a period not exceeding 2 months and is on the expiration of his leave to proceed on service out of India, or the Court shall postpone the proceeding as against such soldier in the manner provided in section 7.'

(b) is on sick leave for a period not exceeding 3 months and is on the expiration of his leave to rejoin his unit with a view to proceeding on service out of India,

" I also beg to move that clauses 9 to 14 be re-numbered 10 to 15, and that in clause 11 for '9 or 10' '10 or 11' be substituted.

" Sir, the reason that prompted me to move these amendments is, that the protection embodied in the Act be extended to the Indian soldiers during their periods of leave which they usually get before proceeding on field service.

" Under the existing rules an Indian soldier usually gets leave for two months or less, as circumstances permit, before proceeding on active service. He similarly gets sick leave for three months or more, when he is invalided back to India, through wound, injury, or ill-health, from any of the overseas theatres of war.

" As the periods of such leave were not covered by any provision in the Act, I know of several instances in which wounded soldiers, who came home on sick leave to recruit their health, and who had a civil suit suspended against them, were immediately visited by that fairly expensive but unavoidable and unwelcome but indispensable guest, the civil court piyadah for service of summons in the suspended suit ; and in consequence of this the wounded soldier who got leave to rest and get fit for service again, had to hang about for days in the civil Courts for his suit.

"I hope, Sir, that in view of the facts, which I have briefly stated, this amendment will be accepted and the Indian soldier will not be harassed when he is on leave at his home before going on field service."

11-10 A. M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, the attitude of Government towards this amendment is that we are prepared to accept the experience of the Hon'ble Mover as proving the necessity for it, provided that there is no indication of disapproval from a substantial body of the Members of this Council.

"The Government see no reason primâ facie to refuse to grant to Indian soldiers the additional privilege which the Hon'ble Member seeks to obtain for them, and I realize that he is in a position to explain with greater accuracy than I can the actual difficulties which soldiers returning from service on leave encounter in this matter."

11-11 A. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—" Sir, I am very pleased indeed to hear the view expressed by the Hon'ble the Home Member. It seems to me, Sir, that it is obvious that the object of this Act is to give protection to soldiers who are on active service, so that they may not be harassed with litigation during the period of the war. The object is stated in the preamble of the Bill, and it is quite clear that, if you are going to give them this protection while they are on active service, you should also see that they are not troubled with litigation when they come back to their district, either wounded or sick for a temporary period on leave with the intention of returning back to active service. I am sure that every non-official Member will support this amendment, and I will only say this that the Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan, as the Hon'ble the Home Member himself said, is more conversant with this matter than anybody else, and therefore this amendment coming from him as it does ought to carry weight."

11-13 A. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" Sir, I wish to support this amendment."

11-14 A. M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" May I inquire, Sir, whether all the amendments have been put as one. The Hon'ble Mover read more than one, I think, in his opening speech ? "

[19TH MARCH, 1918.] [The Vice-President; Captain Ajab Khan; Sir William Vincent; Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"There is only one substantive amendment: the others are merely consequential. If the Council accept the first amendment, the others being merely consequential amendments will follow as a matter of course."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan:—"Sir, the other amendments are only consequential on the first amendment, and I need not deal with them separately as the first amendment has been accepted."

The amendments were accordingly put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I now move that the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION RE INTERNMENTS UNDER THE DEFENCE OF INDIA ACT.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"Sir, I have the honour to move the following Resolution:— 11-15 A. M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Committee with an adequate Indian element thereon be appointed in each Province to inquire into and report upon:—

(1) all cases of internment under the Defence of India Act;

(2) all cases of detentions under Bengal Regulation III of 1818 and cognate Regulations in Madras and Bombay, and

(3) all cases of persons who may hereafter be dealt with under the aforesaid Act and Regulations, the Committee being empowered to make recommendations with regard to the health, allowance, place of detention and other matters relating to the prisoners referred to above.'

"Sir, I am anxious that there should be no misinterpretation as to the scope and purport of this Resolution. My Committee would be an advisory body, the final decision resting, as now, with the Government. What is sought for is to create a machinery that will help the Government in the performance of a delicate and difficult duty without in the smallest degree weakening its authority or impairing its sense of responsibility. Sir, this disposes of an objection which has sometimes been urged in regard to this Resolution, and I am sorry to have to say, by competent official authority, namely, that the effect of the appointment of an advisory body would be to take away from the responsibility of the Government. It will do nothing of the sort, I venture to submit. Sir, we are here in this Council as an advisory body. Do we in any way usurp the functions of Government or displace its authority? Barring our occasional frictions which I think only add to the relish of our debates, I claim that on the whole we perform a very useful and serviceable function. Sir, before I proceed any further, you will permit me to clear my ground and to guard against a misapprehension which this Resolution might give rise to. Sir, I wish it to be distinctly understood—and I trust that my Hon'ble friends on the Government benches will accept the assurance in the spirit in which it is offered—that we do not in the smallest degree desire to embarrass the Government or to handicap it in the performance of what indeed is one of the primary duties of Government, namely, the maintenance of law and order and the preservation of the security of life and property. Indeed, we want to co-operate with the Government, to help it to dissipate the mistrust and suspicion and the gathering clouds of uneasiness and unrest which the administration of the Defence of India Act and of the Regulation, under existing conditions, has created.

[Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.] [19TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Sir, it is useless to disguise the fact that the Government has assumed large and some say extraordinary powers in dealing with the situation which has arisen. Whether the Government was wise in assuming those powers, whether that was expedient or otherwise, that is not the question which confronts us to-day. Here are these powers, perhaps unthinkable under normal conditions but justified by the exigencies of war. These powers involve dispensing with the ordinary safeguards of judicial procedure to which we have been accustomed, which constitute the strongest guarantee of personal liberty and which we, the people of India, regard as being one of the noblest gifts of British rule. Sir, when you lock up a number of people, be they only a handful, without a trial, without confronting them with their witnesses, without giving them the opportunity of testing their credibility, you naturally create suspicion and mistrust. People in their ignorance, not knowing what you are doing, begin to believe that some of them must be innocent. This feeling grows, spreads, infects the whole community, and I am bound to say that among the younger and the more excitable section of the people, it fosters dissatisfaction and discontent. Time elapses, no improvement is perceptible, and the elders begin to participate in the same feeling. Why, Sir, the other day a public meeting was held at the Town Hall of Calcutta in order to appoint a vigilance committee to inquire into these cases; and among those who were present was the Hon'ble Sir B. C. Mitter, late Advocate-General of Bengal, and the venerable Sir Rash Behari Ghose, the prince of Indian jurists, whose public benefactions have made his name a household word in Bengal, lent the weight of his personality to the meeting and allowed himself to be placed on the committee. Young men, for the Act concerns them most, sometimes the hopes of their families, graduates and undergraduates, brilliant students of the Calcutta University, one of them an Ishan scholar, the first man of his year, have been snatched away from their homes without their parents and their guardians knowing the reason why. The mysteriousness of the proceedings adds to the concern, the anxiety and the alarm of those nearest and dearest to them. I have often been approached by Bengali fathers, and even Bengali mothers, begging of me to try to find out the causes of the arrest of their sons. Not long ago, a Bengali lady of the highest respectability, a Kulin Brahmin widow, called on me and besought me to do what I could in order that her son, an M.A. of the Calcutta University, might be sent to Mesopotamia so that he might fight the battles of his King and country, for to her the thought was intolerable that he should pine away and waste his life by inches in a malaria-stricken place in Bengal where he had been interned. Now, Sir, it seems to me that if you appoint an advisory committee consisting of men in whom the public have confidence, and if they are to inquire into these cases and record their verdicts, and if you publish those verdicts with or without a statement of the reasons, that would go a long way to allay the anxiety of parents and guardians, to soothe public feeling and to create a calmer atmosphere than what now prevails. The Government would lose nothing; it would gain a great deal for the administration of the Defence of India Act and of Regulation III would become far less unpopular than what it is at the present moment. Sir, I urge the appointment of the advisory committee not merely because it would produce a better feeling, but on the higher ground of practical expediency. It must not for one moment be supposed that the ordinary judicial safeguards which the law provides are the fads of lawyers and judges. They represent the accumulated wisdom of ages as being necessary in the interests of justice, and in order to guard against the commission of mistakes. No human institution is infallible. An administration is one long-drawn effort to commit as few mistakes as possible, or to avoid them altogether. Have you not been guilty of the gravest mistakes in the administration of the Defence of India Act? I am not talking of the Government of India, but of the Government as a whole, and my remarks are applicable in a special sense to the Government of Bengal. I say that they have been guilty of the gravest mistakes in the administration of this Act. Take the Sindubala case. These were two young women, belonging to the poorer middle class,

[19TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.]

residing at Bankura in the presidency of Bengal. The Criminal Investigation Department in Calcutta, in searching the house of a political suspect, found a scrap of paper, more binding, more sacrosanct apparently than even Charters and Treaties ; the name ' Sindubala ' was written on that bit of paper ; forthwith they sent a wire to the District Superintendent of Police to arrest Sindubala. Unfortunately for that officer there were two Sindubalas. What was he to do ? He was quite equal to the occasion ; he cut the gordian knot, arrested both, knowing perfectly well that one of them must be innocent. But that is not all. These Sindubalas were purdanashin ladies, not accustomed to appear in public ; they were marched through the public streets from their homes to the zemindari cutchery, and again from the Bankura railway station to the Bankura jail. One of them was at the time in the family way. The other had a little child whom she carried to the jail. They were in confinement for a period of 13 or 14 days while the investigation was going on. They were then discharged as being absolutely innocent, without the shadow or a shade of suspicion being found against them. The Government felt itself in a somewhat awkward position. The Government issued a Communiqué ascribing the blunder to an error of judgment—error of judgment forsooth—which deprives respectable young women of their personal liberty and consigns them to the degradation of prison life. Sir, I can scarcely speak without feeling a sense of indignation in a matter like this. The honour of our families in Bengal, and elsewhere all the world over, is bound up with the honour of our women. If our women are discredited, dishonoured in any way, we feel the insult as a personal one ; that is the sentiment of the Bengali community to-day in connection with this Sindubala case. I know not what will happen to these two young women or their families. I know not whether their status or that of their families will suffer. I know not whether they will be degraded and outcasted owing to their having been imprisoned, and if they are, I should like to know who will pay the penalty for re-admission into caste. Sir, this case has produced a sense of consternation throughout the length and breadth of Bengal. If women can be treated in this way, what about the men ? What about the hundreds of young men (there are about 900 of them I learn from the latest figures) who are rotting in their places of internment in different parts of Bengal ? What guarantee is there that some of them have not been interned without any sort of evidence against them as guileless and guiltless as the Sindubalas ? The whole fabric of public confidence in the administration of these internments has been shaken to its foundations. Sir, I would have asked you to repeal the Act. Of course you would not do it, I am certain. But if you are not able to repeal it, the least thing that you can do is to appoint an advisory committee which would be a check upon vagaries of this kind. Let me proceed. I have not come to the end of this dismal story. I observed that the Sindubalas were arrested upon a telegram being sent to the District Superintendent of Police by the Criminal Investigation Department of Calcutta. There was no investigation, no inquiry, no examination of witnesses ; arrest first, and inquiry afterwards, in violation of all law and justice, and even of the canons of propriety and decency. Sir, I do not condemn the high and trusted police officials who have grossly erred in this matter. My feelings are, if anything, those of sympathy with them in their unfortunate position. They are the victims of a system which should be revised. But for that bad system they would not have acted in the way that they did. Trusted, honest, honourable men, anxious to safeguard the rights of personal liberty, they were hurried into a series of blunders by the illimitable and irresponsible powers with which they were vested. Irresponsible power always leads to abuse, and therefore in all earnestness do I appeal to the Hon'ble the Home Member to appoint an advisory committee. Sir, if we had such a committee I am perfectly certain that these unfortunate occurrences would not have happened, and that the Government would not have been put to the humiliating position of confessing to an error of judgment on the part of high and trusted officials in dealing with respectable women. Sir Reginald Craddock, speaking on the Bill almost to a day three years ago, on the 18th March, 1915, said that no loyal or peaceful citizen need be alarmed at the introduction of the measure. We are all loyal and peaceful citizens here; I am one, I claim to be one though I do not know if my claim will be admitted. Sir Rash Bihari Ghose, Sir Benode Chunder Mitter, Rai Debendra Chundra Ghose, there are hosts of Bengalis who are loyal and peaceful citizens, and they have been alarmed, filled with consternation and forced to appoint a Vigilance Committee to inquire into these cases. I do hope, therefore, that my Hon'ble friend will accept the Resolution that I have the honour to move. Sir, in connection with this matter I have got some further cases, but I do not wish to elaborate the point. I should like however to mention the case, of Manindra Nath Sett who died of consumption. His relations had been informed only a few days before his death that he was keeping good health. This fact has been published and nobody, so far as I know, has contradicted it. One Hari Dass Dass committed suicide because he was practically starving. Government admitted that they got his letter a few days after his death. Sarada Charan Maitra died of malaria in the district of Jessore. A few days before his death he wrote to a friend who desired to see him not to come, as the place was malarial. The Committee of the Indian Association inquired into this matter. We have got 70 cases and if my Hon'ble friend wants to have them, I am prepared to place them at his disposal.

"I now pass on to the second part of the Resolution which deals with cases of detentions under Bengal Regulation III of 1818 and cognate Regulations in Madras and Bombay, that is Regulation II of 1819 of Madras and Regulation XXV of 1827 of Bombay, Regulation III is old and in the words of Lord Morley 'a rusty weapon' hung up in the armoury of the Government of India. It was taken down in 1908 to deal with some of our most prominent Swadeshi workers. Lord Morley never liked it, his whole nature revolted against it, and he only succumbed to the pressure of his official environments. Writing on the 4th of December, 1908, to Lord Minto, he says in his 'Recollections :'—

'One thing I do beseech you to avoid a single case of investigation in the absence of the accused. We may argue as much as we like about it and there may be no substantial injustice in it but it has an ugly continental, Austrian, Russian look about it.'

"I should like to ask my Hon'ble friend the Home Member if this part of the instructions of Lord Morley is being carried out in connection with the investigation of cases of prisoners under Regulation III of 1818? I should like to ask the question, but my Hon'ble friend may answer it or not as he pleases. Regulation III of 1818 says 'that due regard shall be paid to the health of prisoners and adequate provision made for the maintenance of themselves and their families in a manner befitting their rank and station.' I am bound to say that in 1908 this part of the Regulation was scrupulously followed except perhaps in the case of my esteemed friend, Baboo Krishna Kumar Mitter, who was confined in the Agra Jail, and whose health broke down in consequence. But since then there has been a change for the worse; possibly it may have arisen owing to the large number of persons dealt with under Regulation III, and to financial considerations arising therefrom. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer keeps a tight hold over our purse strings; and perhaps in consequence of this consideration there has been a change in the manner of treatment of prisoners under Regulation III. But, Sir, there is no complaint, more persistent or more loud-mouthed than that these persons are kept in solitary cells. My Hon'ble friend the Home Member has been good enough to furnish me with the rules relating to the treatment of political prisoners. I find that one of the rules is as follows 'Prisoners shall be confined separately in cells and shall not be allowed to associate or communicate with criminal prisoners nor with each other except as provided below.' In other words, I am sorry to say that these rules sanction solitary confinement. Sir, political prisoners in England and in all parts of the civilised world are treated as first class misdemeanants, which means that they are subject to personal restraint; but all other forms of liberty are accorded to them. Solitary confinement is one of the severest forms of punishment that can be awarded to a prisoner, and the Indian Penal Code provides that solitary confinement shall in no case exceed three months and in no case fourteen days at a time. But here are men kept in solitary confinement for months and months together. No wonder that you have these stories of the breakdown of health, stories of attempts at suicide, stories of nervous prostration. I earnestly appeal to my Hon'ble friend the Home Member to revise this part of the Regulation. Now these prisoners are not allowed access to newspapers. I think the reading of the Bengalee might do them good. But why interdict newspapers, why not take The Times, The Manchester Guardian, The Daily Chronicle, The Daily News, The Illustrated London News, The Graphic, The War News? Pile on books and newspapers so that they may pass a decent and comfortable life in their prison cells. Give them a modicum of books, otherwise a man would go mad in the circumstances in which they are placed. I do most earnestly appeal to my Hon'ble friend in the name of justice and humanity to revise this part of the rules For some little time I was a visitor to the Alipore Jail. Nothing impressed me more than the mercy and humanity that pervaded the British administration of jails. But this rule is in contradiction of the spirit of British administration in the matter of the treatment of prisoners. I do beseech my Hon'ble friend to revise this part of the Rules. I have referred to cases of an absolute breakdown of health ; I hold in my hand a petition addressed on behalf of Jyotish Chunder Ghosh, a lunatic confined in the lunatic asylum of Berhampore. The mother has addressed the petition to the Government of India. May I read one or two extracts. It says 'that after the memorial, dated the 9th February 1918, had been written, your Excellency's humble memorialists's brother Babu B. B. Mitter went to Berhampore on the 10th February last to see her son Jyotish Chunder Ghosh in the lunatic asylum after duly receiving permission from the Government' ; 'that when her brother went there Jyotish was lying straight on his back on a bedstead in the corridor of his cell. His look was vacant, his hair was almost all grown grey, his jaws were firmly closed, he could not speak, h's legs were stiff and crooked, most likely paralysed, he could not walk, he could not move his limbs, Jyotish could not recognise your Excellency's memorialist's brother, nor did he respond when called aloud by name. Babu B. B. Mitter tried to attract the sight of Jyotish from all directions but to no purpose'. The allegations are as grave as any allegation could be. The mother says that her son has to be artificially fed, that he has been lying on his back for a period of six months, that he is paralysed and comatose. Sir, Regulation III of 1818 says 'that on the 1st of January and the 1st of July of every year, health reports should be submitted regarding the prisoners detained.' I should like to know if there have been such health reports with regard to this prisoner, and I should deem it a favour if my Hon'ble friend were to lay them on the table if there are any. I feel certain that if we had an Advisory Committee, complaints of this kind would never have been made. Sir, in this connection I desire to say this, that in order to render effective the working of these Advisory Committees, it will be necessary to appoint non-official visitors, and you can have a large number of them. You have got your Municipal Commissioners, Members of Distr'ct Boards, Honorary Magistrates, all of them would be only too glad to visit and see these prisoners and make their reports. These reports would be a very valuable material for the Advisory Committee to work upon.

"Sir, our Act is based upon the English Act. Sir Reginald Craddock claimed that though more comprehensive in its operations it is less drastic. The statement is only true in one respect, and that is Home internments are not allowed under the English Act, they are permissible under our Act ; but in every other respect our Act suffers in comparison with the English Act. The English Act does not oust the jurisdiction of the High Court. Under the English Act no person can be interned without the intervention of an Advisory Committee presided over by a High Court Judge. I do not go so far as the English Act. I claim much less, and I hope and trust my Hon'ble friend will see his way to accede to my request.

[Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.] [19TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Some objections have been raised to the appointment of an Advisory Committee, and with one of these objections I have already dealt. A second objection is that an Advisory Committee will not be able to deal with details. Surely they will be in a position to command the advice of experts; Government servants will help them; Government will be in a position to supplement their information on its own initiative with the means at its disposal. Then again, it has been said that members of the Advisory Committee would be exposed to the grave risk of assassination. That assumption is absolutely unfounded. We have got our special tribunals upon which Indian members sit. They try men for anarchical crimes; they have sentenced some of them for long terms of imprisonment, but they have never been exposed to any threats of violence.

"Lastly it is said that there is the Rowlatt Committee sitting, inquiring into a similar matter. I may point out that the function of the Rowlatt Committee is entirely different. The Rowlatt Committee deals with the question of the existence of a revolutionary conspiracy if any. My Committee will deal with individual cases, inquire as to whether the persons interned should be kept in internment or not. Sir, I claim that Lord Ronaldshay is on my side and he supports the appointment of an Advisory Committee. I will read an extract from His Lordship's speech:—It is taken from the Calcutta Gazette of 12th December 1917. His Lordship says:—

'But while I hold this belief I realise that there may be persons among the public who are genuinely apprehensive lest injustice should be done...... If however, it is suggested that a small Judicial Committee would be regarded as a more satisfactory form of safeguard against possible error on our part, we should be prepared in future to submit our cases against all persons whom we propose to place under restraint under the Defence of India Act, the Ingress Ordinance or Regulation III of 1818 to such a body consisting of two judges for their opinion? This would ensure that the case of every individual concerned was investigated and pronounced upon by an impartial body having no interest in his conviction.'

This is what I am asking for. Lord Ronaldshay is on our side. He says that the Committee should consist of two Judges. I have not indicated what according to my opinion ought to be the personnel of the Committee. But if I may be permitted to make a suggestion for the favourable consideration of my Hon'ble friend, I would say that the Committee should consist of three members, because two may be divided in their opinion. Two of them should be High Court Judges, one High Court Judge being an Indian not necessarily from the same province, and the third should be an Indian lawyer or educationist. The constitution of the Committee would involve expenditure, but when the Government has spent lakhs and lakhs upon the prosecution of political prisoners, it may spend a few thousand rupees to do them justice. I do not know that I should detain the Council any longer. I am sure if an Advisory Committee is appointed, it will help to soothe public feeling and ease the situation. It will do much more than that. It will go very far to undo the mischief wrought by the Sindhubala case, it will demonstrate the responsiveness of a great Government to the growing volume of public opinion on the subject, and restore the vanishing rays of hope and confidence to many a desolate and grief-stricken home in Bengal and elsewhere.

"I have a personal appeal to make to my Hon'ble friend the Home Member. He is a Bengal Civilian; I am sure he loves the people of Bengal. I desire to tell him this, that I know of no Act, the administration of which has within living memory caused wider dissatisfaction and discontent than that of the Defence of India Act. There is no feeling more deep-rooted in the heart of the Indian than love for his offspring. The Bengali father who has got a grown-up son reading in a college or school is haunted with the daily fear that he may be spirited away in a mysterious fashion and under the operation of a mysterious law. There is a sense of consternation abroad. The atmosphere is surcharged with the elements of distrust and suspicion. I appeal to my Hon'ble friend to remove them, to remove this feeling which sits like a nightmare on the troubled bosom of our people and to take them into his confidence and that of the Government by appointing an Advisory Committee. Sir, the result of to-day's debate, I am sure, is awaited with interest and expectancy by large classes of the population in Bengal and elsewhere. May they not be disappointed. May the result represent a distinct advance towards the conciliation of public opinion in a matter in which the heart of the people has been so deeply stirred.

" It is in that hope, I may add, in that confidence that I have ventured to place this Resolution before the Council for their acceptance, and I am sure my anticipations will not be belied."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, my Hon'ble friend, by the form in which he has cast his Resolution, recognises—and I congratulate him on his political acumen in this matter—that the special powers with which we have armed ourselves are a necessity in these troublous times, and he has confined himself to a recommendation which is directed to secure as far as may be that the innocent are not confounded with the guilty, that the measures of restraint imposed on these persons are as mild as the exigencies of the case permit, and that the health and welfare of persons against whom action is taken are carefully safeguarded. These, Sir, are objects which the Government always has had and always will have in view, and if we differ at all, I think it will be as to means and not as to aims. I believe that another matter in his mind—indeed he has said so—is the desire to satisfy public opinion that our machinery has been worked fairly and without undue harshness. Here, again, we are on a common platform. I, therefore, do not think it necessary to detail the general arguments which, in my judgment, have justified Government in using the powers it possesses to eradicate political crime, but I will refer to one aspect of the matter. I saw an article recently in a newspaper, a Calcutta paper I believe, in which the German-Indian plot was referred to as a joke. Sir, I wish it was or ever had been a laughing matter. It is not. Even at this present moment men are being tried for connection with that conspiracy in America and some have been convicted. I should have thought that the terrible events in Singapore in 1915, I should have thought that the serious conspiracy trials in India and Burma, would have afforded ample evidence to any one who sought the truth of the real and serious nature of these criminal conspiracies against the Government. I am glad that my Hon'ble Colleague has not taken up that attitude. Of conspiracies in India, also many of which are fostered by external assistance, the Council has abundant evidence in the numerous cases of murder and assassination and desperate crimes committed not only in the Mofussil but in the city of Calcutta, the chief commercial centre of India.

" But, Sir, there is another side to this question. The Government may be satisfied with the reality of these plots and with the necessity of measures to repress them ; they may have excellent grounds for believing that the law is used considerately, but it remains to satisfy Indian opinion that, as a matter of fact, the machinery of the law is worked reasonably and fairly, and that these men who are under restraint are really men engaged in these conspiracies and that they cannot be released without prejudice to the public safety. Further, it is felt by many that systematic inquiries should be made to ascertain whether these persons have not, in the course of time, shown by their conduct that they have mended their ways to such an extent that their further detention is unnecessary. It is on this aspect of the case that I propose to address the Council.

" At present in every case—I say this with particular reference to the inquiries of my Hon'ble friend as to the steps taken by Government before any person is placed under restraint—before any warrant under Regulation III of 1918 is issued, a report is sent to the Government of India with a full history of the life of the person and of all the information against him, and this information is very carefully scrutinised. I myself, I may say, in addition to others, take part in this scrutiny. A full summary of each case is, when the warrant is issued, despatched to the Secretary of State for his information. In the case of persons upon whom restrictions are imposed under the Defence of India rules the procedure is similar, though the action is taken by the Local Government and no report is submitted to the Secretary of State. The information in such cases is carefully examined by a judicial officer in accordance with the promise made by my predecessor last year. In fact, I can assure this Council that everything is done to ensure that no action is taken against any man unless we are convinced that there are grounds for believing that the imposition of restrictions is necessary, and that the person is directly implicated in a conspiracy which is responsible for violent crime. I should like also to inform the Council that the Local Government constantly and regularly re-examines and revises these cases, and wherever such a course is possible, relaxes or removes restrictions imposed. Thus, many who are at first domiciled away from their villages are subsequently allowed to live in their own homes subject only to minor restrictions, and when a detenu's conduct continues to improve, all restrictions are removed.

"Well, Sir, I cannot deny that in some cases mistakes have been made. The Hon'ble Member has referred in particular to this case of two ladies in Bankura, the Sindubalas. I think the very fact that the Government admitted the error at once is sufficient indication that they scrutinize these matters with great care. The Local Government did not seek in any way to mitigate or palliate the mistakes in this case. I can assure the Hon'ble Member that no one regrets this unfortunate incident more than the Government of India and the Local Government, and that they feel the greatest sympathy for these ladies for the ill-advised action which was taken against them. The Government of Bengal has made inquiries into this matter, full inquiries, and far from taking the attitude suggested by the Hon'ble Member, namely, that of sympathising with those officers who were responsible for their action, they have, as I understand, censured them. I do not deny, and I cannot deny, that there was a mistake made in that case, and I should be the last person to seek in any way to palliate it. But I do say that with the number of cases which the Government have to deal with, a certain number of mistakes is inevitable, and it is, I think, to the credit of the Bengal Government that this is the only case in which any mistake at all has been proved. At the same time, I also recognise that the very fact of such an occurrence having taken place has shaken the public confidence in the administration of this Act to a considerable extent. I am informed that many loyal and good citizens by reason of this mistake have had a suspicion created in their minds—there may have been similar mistakes in the past—and that some of the persons under restraint are not rightly confined. There is also a feeling in the minds of some that the system is one under which the police exercise too much power. Nor can the Government neglect the views of men whose opinion carries such weight, as those of the gentlemen named by my Hon'ble Colleague just now. Speaking for the Government, we believe that there is no ground whatever for the assertion that is frequently made that any of these men are confined without reason and without ample material to justify the orders. In Bengal, the Province in which the Hon'ble Mover is directly interested, a great part of the work in these cases has been done by an officer who, I think the Council will admit, is well known for his scrupulous fairness, honesty and ability, a man whose natural temperament is, while doing justice to love mercy, I mean Mr. J. G. Cumming, and I do not think that in this Council there is anyone who has any acquaintance with him who would believe that he would ever be a party to the imposition of unnecessary restraints on an innocent man. The officer now in charge of this work is also of equal ability, patience and impartiality, in whom the Government have every confidence. Nevertheless, as I have said, Government recognise that this feeling of alarm is widespread, and that there is a genuine desire in the minds of many like my Hon'ble friend that steps should be taken by Government to insure that the cases of men already interned and those against whom such action is contemplated, should be investigated by some independent authority, and it is for this reason mainly that he has agitated this question in Council.

[19TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent; Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.]

"His Resolution, if I may say so, raises two entirely separate points. It suggests that inquiries should be made into —

(1) the necessity and propriety of the orders restricting the liberty of individuals;

(2) the treatment of such persons when under restraint.

"It is quite clear, I think, that the agency which might be employed for the first inquiry would not necessarily be at all suitable for the second. I propose, therefore, to treat these questions separately

"I will deal first with the proposal in so far as it suggests a Committee for the purpose of inquiring into the necessity and propriety of individual orders of restriction. Here, again, we shall clear the issues if we consider matters first as regards future cases and then as to past cases.

"Now, as to future cases, His Excellency the Governor of Bengal in a recent speech, from which the Hon'ble the Mover, I think, made a quotation, announced what the intentions of the Government of Bengal are in respect of this matter. I need only say, at this stage, that the Government of India are in complete agreement with those proposals.

"Well, there remains the question of persons against whom action has been taken in Bengal since the Act came into force, and their number is very considerable. I have already told the Council that most of these cases have been examined by a judicial officer; but this does not, I gather, content my Hon'ble friend..........."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"That is so."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Well, Sir, in view of the feeling on the subject, the Government of India are prepared to ask the Local Government to appoint a Committee consisting of one Indian and one English officer of judicial experience, of whom one at least shall, if possible, be a High Court Judge, or an officer who has served in that capacity, again to make careful inquiry into each case, to sift the materials on which the order of restraint or confinement is based, to consider any memorials that are put in on behalf of the persons whose cases are under investigation, and to advise the Government whether these orders are justified by this material that is placed before them. Further, this Committee will, in the case of a person for whose detention originally sufficient grounds are proved, inquire, so far as may be possible, whether by his subsequent conduct the detenu has shown such signs of reform or amendment that the removal of the restriction imposed on him is possible or whether, by reason of any other circumstance, this course is feasible without danger to the public tranquillity. For reasons which have been fully explained to this Council on former occasions, the inquiries of this body cannot be made in public and must be held in camera, and there can be no question of pleaders or advocates appearing before it. But this will, I hope, be the less necessary as every effort will be made to secure that the members are persons well able, without extraneous assistance, to sift and test the value of the evidence placed before them. The powers of the Committee will be advisory and confined to advice as to whether the material facts placed before it justify the imposition of restrictions, the nature of these restrictions being finally determined by the Local Government or, in the case of persons confined under Regulation III, by the Government of India.

"There is one more point in this connection to which I must refer. There are some cases, very few, I believe in which any investigation by a Committee might necessitate the disclosure of facts which concern our relations with foreign powers on matters of international importance, disclosures which might involve complications with foreign powers and the publication of information which we cannot divulge. The Government must reserve the right to decline to refer such cases to any Committee. I do not believe myself that there will be many such cases, certainly not under the Defence of India Act, and the intention of the Government of India is that this reservation shall be used as sparingly as possible.

"Well, in other Provinces the number of detenus is comparatively small, but we will ask Local Governments if a similar procedure cannot be followed there.

"I now turn to the second part of the Resolution which deals, as I said, with a separate point, namely, whether adequate care is taken to ensure that the health, welfare and comfort of detenus is properly attended to. I explained as fully as I could yesterday the action that is taken in regard to these detenus, and I laid a copy of the rules on the table, but I had better deal with particular points to which the Hon'ble Member has adverted. In the first place, he has referred to the possibility of financial stringency being in some way responsible for our not treating these people or their dependants more generously. I can scarcely believe that any Member here can accept that view, but, if it is necessary, I may assure the Council that there is no foundation whatever for such a suggestion. The Hon'ble Member went on to complain that newspapers and books were not supplied to these persons. Well, Sir, we have been in correspondence with the Government of Bengal on the subject of newspapers, and I may say that copies of one of the papers to which the Hon'ble Member referred, namely, the Weekly War News, are already provided for the use of the prisoners. As to books, I should like to read the rules. From what the Hon'ble Member said perhaps Council were under the impression that books are not supplied. Well, the rule runs thus—'Political prisoners should not be allowed to see or read newspapers, but books and magazines both in the vernacular and in English may be allowed from the jail library and from outside, provided they are passed by the Superintendent of the jail. In fact, it is desirable to encourage the perusal of suitable literature and, so far as may be practicable, facilities should be given for obtaining it'. That is the position in regard to books.

"I turn now to the question of the solitary cells. I think that the impression which the Hon'ble Member has created by his speech is not entirely correct. He has testified himself to the humanity of our jail administration in Bengal. I can assure the Council that the prisoners under Regulation III whom I have personally seen—and I saw, I think, about 20 or 30 of them—were treated, and rightly so treated, with very much more consideration than any other prisoners. The allegation of separate cells comes to this, that the prisoners are in small separate rooms side by side. In those rooms adequate furniture, books, papers and so on are provided. Ordinarily they are confined in these rooms, but during the day they are allowed to take exercise outside their cells for a period of one hour each morning and evening, and we have, as a matter of fact, asked the Local Government to consider if this time cannot be increased. Opportunities are also given to prisoners to practise any useful work in which they like to employ their time, such as carpentry. I may mention that among other things they were encouraged to go in for Swedish exercises.........."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"Typewriting, that is a useful thing."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I am glad to receive confirmation of what I say from the Hon'ble Member. If we take such trouble to provide typewriters and encourage them to take Swedish exercises, is that consistent with the theory that they are confined in separate cells and subjected to ill-treatment? ...."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"I did not use the word ill-treatment."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" The Hon'ble Member did not say so, but it has been frequently suggested. I withdraw the remark so far as the Hon'ble Member is concerned.

" As regards communications with their parents and relatives I should like the Hon'ble Member one day to pay a visit to the office of Mr. Cumming or Mr. Stephenson and see the pains and patience taken in interviewing the parents and relations of those interned explaining to them exactly what has been done and encouraging them in every possible way to assist in reforming these young men."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" May I say at once that I have often visited the offices of these gentlemen, and I can testify to the absolute accuracy of that statement."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Long hours are spent by Mr. Cumming and also by Mr. Stephenson in explaining the facts to the parents and guardians of these detenus."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" I know that as a matter of fact."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Again, I must congratulate myself on having such valuable corroboration of what I say. Well, Sir, I think all that I have said makes it clear that the Government really is doing all it can to ensure the welfare of these persons.

" I admit, however, that here again there is a feeling that non-officials should be associated with the official agency in this matter, and we are prepared to do what is possible to meet public opinion in this matter. Though I hope that the Council will agree with me that any such agency must be entirely different from the agency appointed to inquire into the necessity of the orders. The persons concerned are detained under Regulation III in different jails and under the Defence of India Act in different localities, and no committee of Judges could without great inconvenience visit these centres, nor would they afford a suitable agency for that purpose. The Government of India propose however to ask Local Governments to appoint for each locality in which detenus are confined or restrained under this Act one or more non-official visitors to be associated with the official visitor to visit at short and regular intervals the men who are under restraint or detention, to ascertain that necessary measures are being taken for their health and welfare, to inquire into any complaints and ascertain if they are reasonable and well-founded, and to report directly the result of their inquiries to the Local Government with their recommendations. I ought to say here that in respect of Regulation III prisoners, proposals to this effect had already been made by the Government of Bengal. It would be unfair if I suggested that this action had not been taken by them of their own motion. And I may add that the Government of Bengal were, I think before we addressed them in connection with this Resolution, also considering the possibility of appointing some non-official agency in the case of persons upon whom restrictions have been imposed under the Defence of India Act.

" The personnel necessary to give effect to this proposal will be selected by the Local Governments, and I fear that in some cases there may be difficulty in securing suitable non-officials to undertake the duty. But in view of all that has been said in this Council and elsewhere the Government of India think it imperative that measures should be taken to satisfy public opinion that the welfare of these prisoners is being attended to. I am anxious that the views of the Government of India on this subject should not be misinterpreted. They have every confidence in the work of the officials to whom the duty of visiting these men has been entrusted, and they believe that these men are well tended. The charges that have been made from time to time, so far as the Government can ascertain—we have had charges but not from the Hon'ble Member—are unfounded. They recognise, however, that there is a considerable amount of popular feeling in the matter, and they think it their duty to take such action as lies in their power to satisfy the public. I hope the Council will accept this as an indication of the desire of Government to meet non-official opinion in this matter, and I trust that the Hon'ble Mover will recognise that the Government of India have really gone as far as possible to meet his wishes. At the same time I ought to say that it is not our intention in any way to relax the efforts which have been made to maintain the public tranquillity, and I feel I ought at the same time to say a word or two about the great work which has been done by the Government of Bengal in combating these dangerous conspiracies. I think that Members of this Council realise that the measures taken have been successful. But I do fear that the public has not realised the great strain which has been put upon the Local Government by this work, or the very constant and anxious care which the local officers have exercised in using the powers vested in them by the law.

"I will only before I sit down, Sir, refer to one or two of the cases which the Hon'ble Member mentioned. I was prepared for the mention of some of these names. The first case is that of Manindra Nath Set. This a Press Communiqué which was issued by the Government of Bengal on the subject:—

'The attention of the Government has been called to an article in the Amrita Bazar Patrika on the 18th January 1918, regarding the death of a detenu Manidra Nath Set. It is suggested that Manindra Nath Set was arrested in consequence of a visit he paid to Hon'ble Mr. Cumming at Darjeeling to inquire about the arrest of his brother Sachindra; that he was then detained in jail an unusually long time, and that this detention had its effect on his constitution as phthisis developed soon after he left jail.

'The facts are these. It is quite untrue to suggest that Manindra Set was arrested for the reason alleged; he was arrested on the 28th August 1917, for quite different reasons. The first report about his health was made on the 11th September when the Superintendent of the Presidency Jail reported that he was under observation for insanity. Orders of domicile were passed on 26th September in accordance with which he would have forthwith been released from Jail; but the Jail authorities reported at the time that he was dangerous and not in a fit condition to be sent away alone; he was therefore kept under observation. On the 28th October Government received the report of the Police Surgeon that Manindra was not insane and that he was responsible for his action. At the same time a report from the Jail medical authorities was received that tuberculosis of the lungs was suspected in Manindra's case and that he himself had said that he was convinced he would die of phthisis like all his family. Endeavours were accordingly made at once to get a relative to take him to his house and look after him and after considerable difficulty a relative in Calcutta was induced to take him in for the time. This relative, however, suggested that Manindra might be sent to another relative, at Deoghur. (Deoghur, as the Hon'ble Member is aware, is a health resort) Manindra was therefore domiciled with his relative in Calcutta on the 4th November, and inquiries were made through the Bihar and Orissa Government whether the relative in Deoghur would take him in but this the relative subsequently refused to do. On the 6th November at the request of the relative with whom he had been domiciled in Calcutta who was unwilling to keep him any longer, Manindra was sent to the Medical College Hospital where he remained till his death.

'As regards the statement in the article in question that Manindra was pining during his illness to see his brother Sachindra, no request to this effect was received by Government.'

"Then there is the case of Jyotish—the last case I propose to read, becaue, if I proceed to examine the details of every case the discussion will be endless and in general all I need say is that we are satisfied that Local Governments make every inquiry possible and take every care with regard to these men. This is the statement that I have about Jyotish:—

'About three months after his arrest it was reported he was suffering from hallucination.'

"And here I should like to intervene for a moment and say that it has been unfortunately the case that many of these men are of weak intelligence, the very fact that they take so readily to these criminal courses is in itself an indication that their minds are not normal. For no normal man would join in such wild and wicked plots, nor be guilty of the desperate crimes of which my Hon'ble Colleague, living in Calcutta as he does, has full knowledge. Well, my statement continues:—

'He was melancholic and was under the delusion that the Criminal Investigation Department were trying to poison him. He refused all food. On the 27th March the Government of Bengal wired that the prisoner's condition was bad and that Major Peebles, Superintendent of the Berhampur Lunatic Asylum, had been ordered to proceed to Rajshahi and examine him.

'Being suspected of lunacy he was transferred to the Berhampur Jail to be under the continuous observation of an expert there and as he refused to take food the authorities had to resort to forcible feeding. As a matter of fact during that process the prisoner gained 12 lbs. in weight. Also a man was put to keep him company all through the day and night. This prisoner noted that Jyotish refused to speak though he every now and then forgot the rôle he was playing and did something that was quite intelligent On the 10th May it was reported again that the prisoner was lying in a state of apparent coma, while his physical condition was good. The Government of India at once directed that he should be examined by a Medical Board consisting of Major Peebles and Lieutenant-Colonel Deare, and they, after careful examination, expressed it as their deliberate opinion that he was feigning insanity That was the opinion on which we moved him. They added that in his own interests it would be better to remove him to the asylum where his mental condition could be scientifically investigated.

'On the 26th September Major Peebles again wrote that Jyotish was feigning insanity and that he was in fair health otherwise. Captain Hume, who examined the prisoner on 25th February, could not say definitely whether he was insane or not'

"Well, the prisoner is still reported to be lying in this condition. He is fed and tended with the utmost patience, and the Government of India are now in communication with the Government of Bengal regarding any possible treatment which may improve his condition. We are arranging for a visit to this man by a non-official medical officer, although we believe our own men are doing everything possible. We are also inquiring whether his mother cannot be allowed to nurse him, and if in any way the treatment undergone is found to be unsuitable or if he can be liberated with safety, I can assure the Hon'ble Member we shall not hesitate to do what is possible.

"I have now finished. I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to convey to the Council the attitude of Government in this matter, and I hope that it will be understood and accepted that we are anxious to satisfy reasonable opinion in this matter. We know that there is a certain body of public opinion here in India, more particularly in Bengal, which nothing will satisfy. On the other hand, there are reasonable men whose minds are open to conviction; those reasonable and loyal citizens we do seek to convince that we are doing our best to satisfy the public that all possible action is taken to ensure the welfare of these prisoners and to ensure that the innocent are not confounded with the guilty. The Hon'ble Member will, in the circumstances, understand me when I say that I cannot accept the Resolution exactly as it stands, but I hope that this will meet him sufficiently."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandy of Kasimbazar:—"Sir, the question of the operation of the Defence of India Act of 1915 and of Bengal Regulation III of 1818 has assumed a really serious aspect in the province where I and the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution come from. In reply to a question recently put by a member in the Bengal Council, the total number of persons interned and deported under these Acts was given as nearly a thousand. Sir, the internment of such a large number of people has naturally affected thousands of families in Bengal and drawn towards these men the indiscriminating sympathy of perhaps the bulk of the educated community of my province. Now, Sir, most of us believe in the existence of a rather widespread conspiracy against law and order in Bengal, and also in the fact that crimes of a certain character have been greatly reduced by the operations of the Acts in question. The fact of the practical suppression of political dacoities and murders loudly proclaims the wisdom of the Defence of India Act and of the Bengal Regulation of a hundred years ago, but the public refuse to believe that all the men so far dealt with under these Acts are guilty people. At present, the whole responsibility of investigating into these crimes lie with the Criminal Investigation 12-22

Department which, like other human institutions, cannot be considered to be infallible or above mistakes and suspicion. The men of the Criminal Investigation Department may be very clever people themselves, but they cannot claim the trained lawyer's skill and ability to sift evidence properly, and in consequence mistakes have occurred and are likely to occur over and over again. These mistakes actually put the Government in a very awkward position and, as Lord Ronaldshay stated so frankly in his Council a few days ago, the Government would do everything in their power to prevent their occurrence and not to give needless trouble or pain to the people. What is, therefore, wanted is to make the position of the Government unassailable, and to secure the confidence of the people in the administration of the Acts in question. I cannot suggest any better means of gaining that end than by the adoption by the Government of the Resolution so ably moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea. An advisory committee, composed of men in whom the people have confidence and who are not likely to be influenced by cooked police reports and are used to sift evidence properly, may influence public opinion greatly in favour of the impartial administration of the Acts in question, and may also take off a good deal of the sting from the acrid criticism now levelled against the Government out of sheer ignorance. Sir, the Defence of the Realm Act of England, after which model the Defence of India Act has been shaped, has given a statutory recognition to such a Committee in the United Kingdom as is suggested in Mr. Bannerjea's Resolution, besides allowing all persons arrested under the Act an opportunity of being tried by a Jury. Sir, to an Englishman these are only minimum safeguards : and if both of these cannot be extended in India, I hope, for the good name of the Government and with a view to promote trust of the people in their bonâ fides, the Government will see their way to accept Mr. Bannerjea's Resolution. That would relieve in a very large measure the tension in th· public mind in connection with the subject, and effectually prevent the Government being impugned, maligned and discredited before the public eye in season and out of season."

12-26 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis :—"Sir, we are glad that this Resolution has been virtually accepted by Government. It must be admitted that the main object of Government in enacting this Regulation is to combat anarchy and lawlessness. In doing so, it is possible that mistakes must and will sometimes occur; but the partial acceptance of this Resolution is in itself clear proof that Government are as anxious as the Hon'ble Mover himself to avoid mistakes, to arrange for necessary comforts and conveniences to persons detained and to secure public co-operation with a view to remove distrust and suspicion in the working of these regulations. It is therefore right that when we condemn Government for mistakes which they themselves sincerely admit and regret, we must be prepared to congratulate them on the success that they have been able to achieve in combating the main object these Regulations had in view, and also thank them for what they have done in spite of many difficulties in the interests of loyal and law-abiding citizens of this country."

12-27 P.M. The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur :—"Sir, after hearing the speeches of the Hon'ble Mover and the Hon'ble the Home Member and the sympathetic views taken by him, it is not necessary to say more, and it only remains for us to thank him for his sympathetic attitude. The Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea's Resolution makes a modest proposal. It does not aim even at the slightest alteration of any clause or provision in the Defence of India Act or the deportation Regulations. It wants the defence to remain on the defensive and not assume the rôle of the offensive. It seeks to ensure the just and proper application of the Act or the Regulations to individual cases. It asks, therefore, for the appointment of a mixed committee of officials and non-officials.

"First, such public opinion as we have in this country desires to be satisfied in certain cases as to the justness of the enactment or enforcement of the

[19TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Mr. K. K. Chanda]

Act as well as of the Regulations. Whether rightly or wrongly people have come to entertain a doubt as to their correct application in some cases. The sentiment is there, and it is growing stronger and stronger. In practical politics sentiment counts a good deal. With due deference to the authorities whose vast powers, resources and methods of investigation may unearth facts which otherwise can hardly be known to an unsuspecting public, I feel bound to remark that, even with the best of intentions, the best of officials are after all human, and are liable to err. They are no more infallible than non-officials are. Even should there be one unjust case for a hundred just cases, the effect that that single case would produce upon public opinion would be so great that no enlightened Government could afford to neglect it. Hence the Government should be prepared to satisfy public opinion. It may be that the Government have in their possession such assured information as may not be disclosed to the public in the interests of public safety. But they can furnish the proposed Committee with such information as might be let in the course of investigation, and thus help the Committee to arrive at safe and sound conclusions.

"Secondly, justice requires that the sacred personal rights of the individual should be protected from envy or malice which too often in the affairs of men may involve even absolutely innocent persons into unexpected trouble. I consider it is one of the functions of a civilised Government to protect and safeguard the personal rights of the individual.

"Thirdly, in the name of prestige which the Government values so much, and in the interests of efficiency of which the administration is so jealous, the Government should favour the appointment of the proposed Committee, so that there may be greater cordiality between the rulers and the ruled. Even where the prestige of the Government is assailed, the public will then voluntarily rush towards the support of constituted authority and help to maintain its prestige.

"Fourthly, the appointment of a Committee will go a great way in securing that public co-operation which the police badly miss to-day for want of mutual confidence between them and the people. With accurate knowledge of facts the public will be less and less disposed to stand aloof from police investigation of the right sort.

"For these reasons, I heartily support the Resolution before the Council, and trust that it will meet with the unanimous acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—"Sir, after the reply that has been received from the Hon'ble the Home Member, I have only to offer thanks to him on behalf of myself and that of the Province which I have the honour to represent, for the announcement he has made with regard to the appointment of a Committee as desired by the Hon'ble Mover. I am sure this announcement will be received by the whole country with a sense of great relief and gratitude. It will be a good thing if the benefits of inquiries with the aid of Advisory Boards will be extended to the existing cases, a course which will hardly leave any room for further complaint in this matter." 12-32 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—"Sir, after hearing the Hon'ble the Home Member's speech in reply to that of the Hon'ble Mover of the Resolution in which he so eloquently and abundantly made out a case for an Advisory Committee, one does not see the necessity of speaking at length on the Resolution or of making a speech. The Government is prepared to meet us half way, it offers to appoint a board of two judges, one of whom is to be an Indian and also to allow non-official visitors to visit these unfortunate young men For this concession, although it does not go the length we desire, I wish to thank the Government of India. We are grateful that the Government of India is not stationary but is moving and progressive. Last year when a Resolution was moved by Mr. Dadabhoy on similar lines to the present Resolution, I moved an amendment to it suggesting the appointment of 12-33 P. M.

[Mr. K. K. Chanda; Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.] [19TH MARCH, 1918.]

a Committee consisting of a High Court Judge and an Indian practising lawyer and a District Judge. But, Sir, the then Home Member, Sir Reginald Craddock refused to accept our suggestion and he interposed a high stone wall in front of us. To-day the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent accepts our suggestion and, although he has not removed the wall, the opening he makes is now fairly wide and will admit of a passage. If we again have to come before the Government in this matter, though I hope and sincerely trust there may be no need to do so,—but if unfortunately our grievances are not removed, we shall not cease to knock at the door—and then I feel sure that the door will fully be opened. I am sure that if on another occasion we do come up Sir William Vincent will absolutely remove the wall, and will grant our request in full. The Government of India have gone further and almost unasked have agreed to the appointment of non-official visitors. In this matter also the Government of India are moving, it was only the other day during the present Session that I suggested the appointment of such visitors through an interpellation. At that time the Government of India had not made up its mind and was waiting for the reply of Local Governments. To-day Sir William Vincent has been pleased to announce the appointment of non-official visitors. Looking to the attitude of Government in this matter to-day, one feels that if the Government was pleased to take this attitude before, what a world of difference it would have created. I feel sure that many homes in Bengal would not have been desolated, that many brilliant young men might have continued to be useful citizens, might for instance, have shed their blood on the plains of Mesopotamia, fighting for their King and Country. Many of them, alas! have unfortunately taken their lives with their own hands, or are inmates of lunatic asylums or are otherwise wrecks. Sir, we are grateful to Sir William Vincent for the decision as to the composition of the Committee, but we regret it in so far as he has not seen fit to accede to our request for the association of a non-official on this Committee. Speaking for myself, I confess I do not understand what the objection is. Surely there must be some non-official in whose integrity and judgment Sir William Vincent may have confidence. If it has been found possible to appoint non-officials on the Council of the Secretary of State, to appoint one on the Executive Council of the Government of India and as members of Provincial Councils,—not only so but if they could be appointed as judges of the special tribunals for trying these very cases, and what is more if one is associated with the Committee presided over by Mr. Justice Rowlatt who is inquiring into a much bigger question, Sir, I do not understand what reasonable objection there could be to the appointment of a non-official member to inquire into a particular case. However, Sir, I accept the decision with perfect gratitude and respect. I should, however, like to utter a word of caution on one point. The whole thing depends on the personnel of the Board, upon the persons who are appointed visitors. There are judges and judges as there are men and men. Unless you give us the very best men, those in whom the public have confidence, I am afraid the result will be worse than useless. I trust that Sir William Vincent will be pleased to consider it and appoint men who will carry weight in the country. With these words, Sir, I respectfully accept the decision of Government and associate myself with the Resolution ".

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" Sir, I think the one feeling that pervades the minds of non-official Indian Members on this occasion is one of deep thankfulness to the Government for the attitude which it has displayed in connection with my Resolution. Sir, I am quite sure that when the result of this debate is known, it will have a soothing effect on public opinion in Bengal and elsewhere. Public opinion has been in a state of consternation, I do not use the language of exaggeration, but I have not the slightest doubt that the Hon'ble the Home Member's speech will have a very ameliorating effect upon public opinion. Sir, my Resolution divides itself into two parts as the Hon'ble the Home Member pointed out. The first part suggests the appointment of an Advisory Committee, and in the second I make a recommendation that there should be visitors to visit prisoners confined under Regulation III and the Defence of India Act. I think my Hon'ble friend has substantially accepted my Resolution. The point of difference I shall presently indicate. I suggested in my speech, and not in the Resolution itself, that there should be three members on the Advisory Committee. My friend says two, and that is the recommendation of the Government of Bengal of Lord Ronaldshay, and an effort will be made, I understand, to obtain at least one High Court Judge, as a member of that Committee. I hope one High Court Judge will be a member of that Committee, and I do not think there will be any difficulty in obtaining a High Court Judge as a member of the Committee. We have a High Court Judge as a member of the revolutionary committee that is now sitting, from Madras and another has been brought out from England, and if my Hon'ble friend were to make a serious effort, I have not the slightest doubt that he will obtain a High Court Judge to sit as a member of the Advisory Committee. I need hardly point out that the personnel of the Committee is a matter of the greatest importance. If the personnel is satisfactory, public opinion will be soothed; if the personnel is unsatisfactory public opinion will be suspicious. Therefore, it is a matter of the first importance to see to it that the personnel is such as will inspire public confidence. And I should like to add a third member if my Hon'ble friend could possibly see his way to accept that suggestion, because there may be a division of opinion amongst the two, but if there are three, a settlement could be arrived at, and I think it would be a distinct advantage to have a third member if the Hon'ble the Home Member could see his way to accept that suggestion. It is a question of expense I am told, but I hope this consideration will not be permitted to stand in the way, and I would like to press this point upon the sympathetic consideration of the Hon'ble the Home Member.

"Well, Sir, then, with reference to the second part, namely, the Board of visitors, my Hon'ble friend has practically accepted my suggestion, that there will be non-official visitors to go and see these prisoners whether confined under Regulation III or under the Defence of India Act. I do not think that I shall be justified in detaining the Council any longer. Our feeling is one of deep thankfulness to the Government, and I offer my congratulations to the Hon'ble the Home Member for having seen his way to accede to a feeling which is uppermost in the minds of educated Indians throughout the length and breadth of the country. As my Hon'ble friend says, there may be some who will not be pleased but they do not count. I think all that Government need do is to conciliate the good, the true and the thinking and if that is done, I think the duty of the Government is fulfilled."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I have very little to add, Sir, to what I have already said. For the reasons which were given by the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock in the debate last year which reasons appear to me to be very cogent, the question of appointing a non-official on to this tribunal must, I think, be decided in the negative. I do not wish to repeat those reasons, but I am satisfied myself, and I think I could satisfy the Council, that they are reasons which would commend themselves to any reasonable person. 12-43 P.M.

"I quite agree, however, with what both the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda and Mr. Bannerjea said that it is of great importance that the personnel of the Committee should be such as will command the confidence of the public, and I am quite sure that the Local Governments will bear this matter in mind.

"The other point to which the Hon'ble Member referred was the question of appointing three members instead of two on these committees, and I do not know if I should be divulging a confidence if I mention that the suggestion has been put to me from another source that an educational officer should be employed for this work. All I can say in regard to this proposal is, that I do not think that an educational officer would be of much use on these Advisory Committees as they will really be employed in investigating, examining and scrutinising the evidence that comes before them. But I will have the point put to Local Governments for consideration. I may say that many of these persons against whom action has been taken are men of middle age. We have some men of 40 interned, and I think it is a little too much to suppose that an educational officer would be able to influence men of that age; there are, however, many cases in which the persons against whom action has been taken are young men, and I will ask Local Governments to consider whether at least in the case of visiting committees,—and that I think will meet my Hon'ble friend's wishes,—an educationist should not be appointed as a visitor where such a course is possible......."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"I could mention some names."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Then the Hon'ble Member went on to say that having conciliated Mr. Bannerjea we had conciliated Bengal. Was that the suggestion?"

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"I did not put it in that way. That is the Hon'ble Member's version."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I admit it is rather a perversion. However, I am glad to think that by anything we have done, we have been able to secure the approval of what I may call moderate opinion in that province, and I accept the assurance of my Hon'ble friend that that is so.

"Then my Hon'ble friend went on to say that as regards the visiting agency I have practically met all he asks. I was reminded of the old saying of an eminent judge that the word 'practically' always conceals a fraud, and I am not quite sure how far really I have met my Hon'ble friend or not. But what the Government intend to do is, I think, plain from what I stated, and if it in any degree satisfies the Hon'ble Member and the rest of this Council, I am more than content."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"Sir, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble the Home Member I beg leave to withdraw the Resolution."

The Resolution was, by leave of the Council, withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE APPOINTMENT OF AN INDIAN MEMBER TO THE NEXT IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"Sir, I beg to move that—

12-18 P. M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Indian Members for the next Imperial War Conference be appointed on the recommendation of the elected members of the Imperial Legislative Council.'

"Sir, I do not think that this Resolution will take long. It will be in the recollection of Hon'ble Members that at the Simla Session of the Legislative Council my Hon'ble friend Mr. Shafi moved a Resolution recommending that India should be officially represented at the Imperial Conference, and that a representation in that behalf be addressed to His Majesty's Government through the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India. That Resolution was strongly supported by the then Viceroy (Lord Hardinge,) and it was unanimously accepted by the Council. As a result, in 1917, India was represented at the Imperial War Cabinet by the Secretary of State aided by an Indian deputation nominated by the Government of India. The Indian deputation consisted of His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner, Sir Satyendra Prasanna Sinha, and Sir James Meston. The association of an Indian deputation in the deliberations of the highest Council in the Empire was a notable event in our annals and marked a new departure in our relations with the British Empire. The conduct of the deputation demonstrated that India was in every way worthy of the great confidence that was bestowed on her. The tact, judgment, practical capacity, and in the case of the Indian members, their loyalty and unflinching devotion to the British connection were the theme of universal praise and profoundly impressed the Imperial Conference. The Conference decided by a unanimous vote that India should henceforth be represented at every session of the Conference.

"That was a great, a distinct gain. In pursuance of that Resolution a deputation will soon leave India for the representation of this country. Sir, when the Indian deputation left India last year there was a general feeling in the country, which found expression in the public prints and in a question recently asked in the House of Commons, that the deputation had not behind it the imprimatur of the people and the high sanction of popular choice. It is with a view to remove this defect in the title of the coming deputation that I have ventured to submit this Resolution for the acceptance of this Council. The Resolution is that the Government of India should appoint the deputation, but subject to the recommendation of the elected members of this Council. I am well aware of the fact that the Indian representative of the deputation that will sit at the Imperial Conference will be the representative of the Government of India, and, being the representative of the Government of India, the Government of India must appoint him. We do not in the slightest degree want to interfere with the authority of the Government of India. He must be a nominee of the Government of India, but at the same time we want to support the choice of the Government by his election by the elected members of this Council. Sir, the effect of the acceptance of this Resolution would be to place the Indian member of the deputation somewhat approximately on the same footing with the Colonial representatives. The Colonial representatives are the members of the Colonial Governments, but they are also the elect of the people, the Governments being popular. Our representatives will be the nominees of the Government and, unless there is behind them the sanction of popular choice which I am anxious to secure, they would not be the colleagues of the Colonial representatives in the full sense, echoing the voice of the Government and of the people. This would be a distinct advantage to the Government. The Government will be the authority that appoints, only we want to have our share and our voice in the matter. We fortify the appointment of the Government by the choice of the elected members of the Legislative Council. It seems to me, Sir, that that is an eminently reasonable proposition and should be accepted by the Government, because it does not in the smallest degree take away from the authority or the decision of the Government, but strengthens that decision by the voice and the vote of the elected Members of this Council.

"Sir, in this connection there was a question and answer in the House of Commons. I will place them before the Council:

'In Commons to-day (25th March) Mr. Denham suggested that the Elected Members of the Legislative Council should be invited to select one of the representatives of India to attend the sitting of the Imperial War Cabinet in order to avoid the recurrence of the grievance of educated Indians last year.'

"There was a grievance last year and it found expression in the public prints, as I have just mentioned. Dr. Fisher replied that "the War Cabinet consisted of representatives of the Governments of the chief portions of the Empire and therefore it was impossible to adopt the suggestion.'

"Evidently the suggestion was that the appointment should be made by us, but we do not claim that at all. We only claim to have a voice in the making of the appointment. Therefore this answer of the Government does not preclude the acceptance of my Resolution. The Government is to appoint subject to the election made by the elected members of this Legislative Council. I do hope that, under the circumstances, my Resolution will be accepted. In fact, I am prepared to go a little further, and if the Government see its way to accept it, I would say, let us have a pannel of, say, a number of members elected by the elected members of this Council, and Government may pick and choose from that pannel.

"I do not know that I need detain the Council any longer. With these words I beg to move the Resolution."

12-56 P. M.

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur :—"Sir, while taking exception to the form in which the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea's Resolution is worded, I fully sympathize with the object of the Resolution. By the 'Indian member for the next Imperial War Conference,' I suppose Mr. Bannerjea means an Indian representative chosen to assist in his advisory capacity, the Secretary of State for India on the Imperial War Conference 'formally agreed on the motion of the Prime Ministers of the great Dominions to modify its own constitution so as to permit of India being fully represented at all future Imperial Conferences,' we are not entitled, I presume, to send our own representatives to the Conference until its constitution is changed. We do hope that it will shortly be amended in the direction indicated. Until such time we must rest content that our representatives can be sent only in their advisory capacity, as was done last year. Since no Indian representative can have a vote in the Conference it is immaterial whether he is nominated by the Government either directly or on the recommendation of the elected members of this Council. Mr. Bannerjea evidently desires that the Government should be pleased to recognize the principle of election by appointing a representative recommended by the elected members of this Council. While no doubt or fear is entertained as to the excellence of the choice of the Government, patriotic feeling suggests a popular method of nomination.

"The Resolution, Sir, might have gone further and suggested the election of a non-official representative by the elected members of the Council. But it modestly suggests, for the ready acceptance of the Council, that the recommendation of the Council should influence the Government nomination of at least one Indian representative. Since it is to be, as it was, primarily a War Conference, it is but fitting in the nature of things that a popular representative should give expression to the popular feeling that India is prepared in these troublous times to share the burden of the Empire, and it shall be his duty as India's spokesman to pledge India to give her best and materially assist the Empire in all possible ways to achieve a glorious victory. In fact, such a loyal expression will come out with better grace of peoples representative. I do hope, therefore, that the elected members of this Council will be allowed the proud privilege of recommending to His Excellency the Viceroy one or two names of Indian representatives, one of whom he may be pleased to nominate to assist the Secretary of State for India on the Imperial War Conference. India's position and status within the Empire having been raised by admitting Indian representatives last year into the inner Counsels of the Imperial War Cabinet, as well as of the Imperial War Conference, it is but meet that India should be allowed the choice of nominating her representative. More words are not needed to commend this timely Resolution to your acceptance. I, therefore, desire to give my hearty support to Mr. Bannerjea's Resolution."

[19TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, in answering this Resolution, I think there is very little to add to what was said by His Excellency when he addressed this Council on the 7th of February, 1917, and I will ask the Council to bear with me while I read what appear to me to be the relevant portions of that speech. His Excellency then said:— 1 P. M.

'Criticism has been made of the method of representation and the manner of selection of India's special delegates. I think our critics have misapprehended the nature of the Conference and of the representation. The Conference is of the Mother Country, the Dominions and India. Each Dominion is represented by its Prime Minister, and has but one voice in the Conference, but the Prime Ministers are permitted to bring with them such other Ministers as they may desire, and may invite these Ministers to speak on behalf of the Dominions on any particular question. It is obvious that in the case of India, so long as the Secretary of State is directly responsible to Parliament for the policy of the Indian Government, the Secretary of State must be the head of the Indian delegation, and the policy propounded by India must be the policy of the Secretary of State in Council, but I have the Secretary of State's assurance that he will be glad to leave his colleagues from India to speak, whenever possible, on behalf of India.'

'The Conference then being a Conference of Government, it follows that the responsibility for the choice of the representatives must rest with the Government. No Government could divest itself from that responsibility, and so in the case of India, the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Government of India, has chosen the three gentlemen whose names you know. The choice in fact goes beyond the promise made by Lord Hardinge in his speech of 22nd September, 1918.'

"The next paper to which I would refer in this connection is the declaration of the Prime Minister in the House of Commons. I have only a telegraphic summary of it. It is dated the 18th of May, 1917. He began by saying, that the Imperial War Cabinet was an important event and constituted a landmark in the constitutional history of the British Empire.' He went on to explain how great the success of that Cabinet had been and added:—

'As far as the Government were concerned they could state with confidence that the experiment had been a complete success and the Imperial War Cabinet was unanimous that the proceedings had been of such service not only to its members but to the Empire that it ought not to be allowed to fall into desuetude. Accordingly it was agreed that meetings should be held annually. The Imperial War Cabinet would consist of the British Premier and such of his colleagues as dealt with Imperial affairs, of Dominion Premiers or specially accredited representatives and an Indian representative appointed by the Government of India. The essence of the institution was that responsible heads of Governments of Empire with ministers specially entrusted with the conduct of Imperial policy would meet together at regular intervals to confer about foreign and Imperial policy and come to decisions regarding them.'

In a later part of the speech he said: 'It was felt, however, that the experiment of constituting Imperial Cabinet, in which India was represented, had been so fruitful in better understanding and unity of purposes and action that it ought to be perpetuated, and he believed that the proposal would commend itself to all the nations of Europe.'

"Well, Sir, on a later occasion than that, a few days later, in reply to a question by Mr. Charles Roberts as to what modifications in the position of India relative to the Empire were affected as a result of the Imperial Conference, the Secretary of State gave the following reply:—

'In answering my Hon'ble friend's question it will be convenient to consider together the results, so far as published, of the Imperial War Cabinet and the War Conference. As my Hon'ble friend is aware the Imperial War Conference recommended to the Governments concerned that steps should be taken to amend the constitution of the Imperial Conference so that India should be represented at future sittings with the same right of speech and vote as is accorded to the representatives of other Governments. Further, India will be represented at the annual session of the Imperial Cabinet by a nominee of the Government of India as well as by the Secretary of State for India who will sit as one of the British Ministers especially concerned with Imperial affairs.'

"This decision marked an immense advance in the position of India within the Empire.

"Well, the only other communication I have is the telegram to which reference was made by the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea. In that telegram, which is dated the 5th of March, 1918, in answer to a question by Mr. Denman. Mr. Fisher replied 'that the War Cabinet consisted of Governments of chief portions of the Empire, and it was impossible to adopt the suggestion that one of the representatives of India should be selected by the elected members of the Legislative Council.'

"That, then, is the decision of His Majesty's Government, and in the face of that decision I do not think that it would be possible for me to accept this Resolution, and I trust that the Council will realize the position of the Government of India in the matter having regard to the very clear statement made by a Minister of His Majesty's Government. Indeed, I cannot help feeling the the Hon'ble Member is on this occasion rather beating his head against a wall...."

The Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea:—"We always do that."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Well, on this occasion I am afraid it will serve no useful purpose.

"Then, the Hon'ble Member said: 'Oh! yes, you may continue to appoint a man, but we must really select him.' That is a form of camouflage which, I think, will deceive nobody. Either a man is appointed by the Government or he is selected by the Council. The two things are really different and incompatible. If the Council is to select the man, why then, well and good, let them do it; if Government is to nominate him, then surely the Government must be entitled to select any man in whom they have the greatest confidence, whether that person is the man selected by the members of the Legislative Council or not. In such circumstances, however deeply members of the Council may sympathise with the aspirations which prompt this Resolution, I fear that its acceptance by Government would not be consistent with the present constitution of the Imperial Conference, which is a Conference of those who are responsible for the Government of the different parts of the Empire; and I think a gentleman who had no such responsibility and who was selected by members of the Council, who, however eminent, are not responsible for the Government of India, would be out of place in an Imperial Conference of this character.

"I submit really that this Resolution is opposed to the logic of existing facts, and, on the part of the Government of India, I must oppose it. At the same time I hope that Members of Council will remember that on the occasion of the last War Cabinet the Government nominated an Indian who was not only in the confidence of the Government of India, but who also, I believe, commanded the respect and trust of Indians generally, a gentleman who a few years ago presided, if I am right in my recollection, over the National Congress, and whose liberal sentiments, loyalty, patriotism and devotion to his country are well known. I was glad to find that this view is endorsed by what the Hon'ble the Mover said, and I think that the Council will rest assured that the choice of the Government on this occasion will fall on less suitable a person."

1-9 P. M.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Sir, in view of the answer given by Mr. Fisher in the House of Commons, we were prepared to hear that the Government of India could not accept the Resolution. But I submit, Sir, that if the Government of India thought fit to make a recommendation to the British Cabinet that the matter might be reconsidered, they could do so without violence to any official propriety. However, I do not wish to argue the question now. I only want to make one thing clear, and that is that, whomsoever the Government of India may appoint, so long as that appointment is made by the Government of India, will not go as the representative of the Indian people. It is expected that at the Imperial Conference important fiscal questions will be considered; questions of Imperial Tariffs and Imperial Preference If this expectation is wrong, there is nothing more to be said about it. But if it should not be, I want to make it clear that we, the elected members of this Council, having a sense of our responsibility to our people, feel that no representative appointed by the Government of India should be regarded as representing the people of India, and as being in a position to commit the country, directly or indirectly, to any fiscal policy including Imperial Tariffs, which may be discussed at the Conference.

"Our object in bringing this Resolution before the Government was to offer to co-operate with the Government in having the Indian point of view represented at the Conference. If the Government do not think that the time has come when this should be done, or do not care to see it done, we have nothing more to say about it. Only I want that it should be clear that the representative who goes will not represent the Indian point of view in the opinions which he will express. I have not one word to say against my esteemed friend..."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent.—"Does the Hon'ble Member say that Sir Satyendra Sinha does not represent the Indian point of view?"

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya—"I was just going to say that, if my Hon'ble friend had waited half a minute. I have nothing to say against Sir Satyendra Sinha. We esteem him as a lawyer, a gentleman and a patriot. But even he will not be accepted by the people of this country as representing them, unless he is elected by their chosen representatives. That is the position. No one whosoever he may be, who goes to the Conference as a mere nominee of Government, should be regarded as a representative of the Indian people in the sense which I have indicated. The questions which will be discussed will be of very great importance, and I am anxious, as I am sure many of my Hon'ble friends are anxious, that the situation should be correctly understood."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah:—"Sir, as we all know, the fate of this Resolution was sealed long before to-day in view of the answer that Mr. Fisher gave in Parliament. But, Sir, I must say I am not satisfied with the reasons that are advanced. I think, Sir, there is a confusion in regard to the Imperial Conference and the Imperial War Conference. It seems that there was an Imperial Conference which was in existence long before the Imperial War Conference came into existence; and I find from the proceedings of the Imperial War Conference of 1917 that the position was stated in this way by one of the members, who said: (1-11 P.M.)

'May I suggest that it will become necessary before we conclude to rescind the resolution of the Imperial Conference itself bearing upon the admission of the Indian representative, because to-day we have the Indian representatives here and they are here because this Conference is called, not under the name of the Imperial Conference but under another name so as to admit of the representatives of India attending. Now if some important subjects which affect India were to come up at an ordinary Imperial Conference, the present is a Conference which should clear the road so as to enable those representatives to be summoned as members of the Imperial Conference, or otherwise the Imperial Conference is faced with the difficulty that there is no record now of any resolution bearing on that matter of Indian representatives being summoned to the Imperial Conference.'

Therefore the two Conferences, namely, the Imperial Conference and the Imperial War Conference, are quite different.

"Sir, the Resolution that was passed by this Imperial War Conference is to the effect that arrangements should in the meanwhile be made to secure the representation of India on the Imperial Conference when it meets after the War; and the Resolution runs in the following words:

'That the Imperial War Conference desires to place on record its view that the resolution of the Imperial Conference of the 20th April 1907 should be modified to permit of India being fully represented at all future Imperial Conferences, and that the necessary steps should be taken to secure the assent of the various Governments in order that the next Imperial Conference may be summoned and constituted accordingly.'

"Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea referred to the Resolution which was passed in this Council, moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi, but that Resolution was with regard to the Imperial Conference. At that time there was no Imperial War Conference at all.

"Now, with regard to this Imperial War Conference with which we are concerned to-day—what is its object? The object of this Conference is stated by Mr. Long, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and this is what he said.—

'They were engaged in a war, the greatest and the most terrible in history, and their object both in the Cabinet and in the Conference was to deal with the immediate war problems, with those which will arise on the conclusion of peace, and with any other questions which it may be desirable to discuss or decide as being of Imperial interest without delay.'

Now, I take that to be the object of the Imperial War Conference. This being the object, we have got to get representatives from different parts of the Empire on it. It is also clear that each Government has one vote, but all representatives have the right to speak. Therefore, so far as the voting is concerned, each Government has got one vote, and I take it that so far as India is concerned the Secretary of State for India will have that vote. But you find that from most parts of the Empire more than one person is represented on this Conference and is entitled to speak. You find, for instance, that there are 4 representatives from Canada. You have got the Prime Minister, the Minister of Overseas, the Minister of Public Works, the Minister of Marine, Fisheries and Naval Service. But it is said: That may be—there may be more than one representative, but who has nominated those representatives? And it is said that the Government in this country is the only body that can nominate like the Governments of the Dominions. But is there any analogy between the Government of the Dominions and the Government of India? Well, Sir, I will ask this question of the Hon'ble the Home Member. May I know why you are sending an Indian? Is the Indian who is going there to the War Conference to represent the views, the feelings and the sentiments of the people of India, or is he not? If that is so, then what is the best machinery by which he is to be selected? By the nomination of the Government of India as it is constituted? Is that the best machinery? That is the question that I put to the Council. Or would it not be the best way of ascertaining, whether he is a true representative of the people, to resort to another machinery, namely, the machinery of the votes of the representative men in this Council or if you like in all the Councils of India? That is only one method that is suggested. The point of this Resolution is this, that if an Indian is allowed to speak at the Imperial War Conference—mind you, he has no vote, he can only speak—he can only express his views. The Conference will be called upon to consider most important and vital questions affecting India during the progress of the war and after the war; then what objection is there to this Council saying 'Perfectly true; we have eventually got to have an Indian member on this War Conference, to express the views of the people, therefore let us have a man who really and truly represents the people.' Therefore, Sir, I cannot understand what difficulty there is in the way of the Government adopting a machinery—it is a pure question of machinery—by means of which you will choose a man who will command the confidence of the people and who the people feel is sure to represent their views properly and truly.".

1-20 P. M.

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadar Sapru:—"Sir, in the course of my speech on the budget last year I referred to this question and expressed the hope that on the next occasion the Government would see their way to allow the elected members of this Council to elect a representative of their own to the Imperial Conference. I must say, Sir, that the decision which has now been arrived at by the Government in this matter is extremely disappointing to us. Well, it has been asked by a paper, what right have the 27 gentlemen sitting in this Council to pose as the representatives of the people? And what right have they to elect a representative of their own to the Imperial Conference? Well, rightly or wrongly, the situation is that these

27 gentlemen here are supposed to be the elected members of the Council as representatives of the people, and if their number is not larger the fault is not theirs. Well, it has further been pointed out that there is a material distinction between the case of India and the case of the Colonies. It is urged that it is the Colonial Governments who send their representatives there, and therefore the people here ought not to send a representative of their own. May I be permitted to point out that the Colonial Governments represent the people; the ministers who go there have got the vote of the people behind their back, and that cannot be said with regard to the representative of the Government of India As Mr. Jinnah has very pertinently asked, why is it that after all an Indian is sought to be sent? Surely the only object with which an Indian is sent, is that he would be able to put the Indian point of view before the Conference. Well, if that is considered desirable, then I respectfully submit that it seems also extremely desirable that the Indian who goes there goes with the confidence of the people. On these grounds, Sir, I would strongly support my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"Sir, I am sorry that my Hon'ble friend the Home Member, has not been able to see his way to accept this Resolution. The point which he took up and upon which he mainly relied was that no Government could divest itself of its responsibility in this matter. We do not want the Government to divest itself of its responsibility at all. We want the Government to have that responsibility to the fullest measure; only we want in our own humble way to associate ourselves with that responsibility. Surely that does not mean a diminution of the measure of responsibility which the Government possesses in this direction. The Hon'ble the Home Member says that according to the logic of facts this Resolution is absolutely inadmissible. Sir, I am prepared to take my stand upon the logic of facts. But in these days since the war, facts are rapidly changing and everything is in a fluid state; why not this one too? The whole atmosphere is surcharged with the spirit of change; and that being so, why should we not move with the changing times, adapt ourselves to changing circumstances? Therefore, even upon the logic of facts I venture to submit that this Resolution should be accepted by the Government. 1-23 P.M.

"Then my Hon'ble friend says 'Oh, you are proceeding in a circumlocutory fashion. (He did not actually use the word 'subterfuge' but I think it was at the back of his mind.) If you want to elect, elect straightaway. But let not this sort of proceeding be resorted to.' I want to remind my Hon'ble friend that this sort of proceeding was exactly the sort of proceeding that the Government of India had recourse to before the Minto-Morley Reforms scheme came into operation Under the Statute of 1892 constituencies were allowed to elect, but the Government did not accept that election at all; in the Statute there was no mention of 'elected'. The Government continued as before to appoint the members thus elected. Cannot the Government have recourse to its own precedent and follow the same precedent that it adopted before? It is a familiar thing for Government to appoint after election. It used to do so in scores of cases before the Morley-Minto scheme. Why, then, hesitate now, in view of practically the unanimous demand on the part of the elected members of the Legislative Council? Government has followed the same procedure before and Government now says 'No, no. Go straight on to election if you want; but you are not going to have this circumlocutory procedure.' As Mr. Jinnah pointed out, if you want an Indian let him be one elected by the people having behind him the choice of popular sanction. That would strengthen his position. He would then not only be a nominee of the Government, but the representative of the people. He would go to the Conference in that double capacity and with that double weight; that is the capacity in which the Colonial members sit at the Conference, and that is the capacity in which we want our Indian representative to sit there. We want to approximate his position so far as practicable to the position of the Colonial ministers who are the representatives of Government as well as the elected of the people. I am sorry that the Government should not see the cogency of our views in this matter and should not accept the Resolution which I have the honour to move "

The motion was put and at the request of the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah the Council divided as follows :—

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915. (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Friday, the 22nd March, 1918.

PRESENT:

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 57 Members, of whom 50 were Additional Members.

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent laid on the table statements* regarding the working of Workman's Breach of Contract Act, 1859, which were promised in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on the 20th March, 1917.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair laid on the table a copy* of correspondence regarding housing accommodation for the poorer classes in towns, which was promised in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri on the 12th September, 1917.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent laid on the table a reply* regarding internments under the Defence of India Act, which was promised in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul on the 27th February, 1918.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent laid on the table a statement* regarding suicides, etc., by State prisoners, which was promised in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda on the 20th February, 1918.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent laid on the table a statement* regarding number of persons interned under the Defence of India Act, which was promised in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul on the 27th February, 1918.

* Not included in these Proceedings.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Qualifications required of Presidency Post Masters.

1. "(a) What definite qualifications, if any, are required of Presidency Post Masters ?

(b) Is it a fact that Superintendents are promoted to the appointments of Presidency Post Masters ? If so, are not first grade Superintendents and Post Masters on Rs. 500 to 600 considered eligible for these appointments ?

(c) How many Postmasterships on Rs. 500 and upwards are there, and how many of these appointments are held by men who were Superintendents ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The qualifications required of Presidency Postmasters are administrative ability and a thorough and practical knowledge of Post Office work in all its branches. Tact, resource and organising ability are also essential qualifications.

(b) Ordinarily Superintendents of post offices are not promoted to the grade of Presidency Postmasters, as the appointments of Deputy Postmasters-General are reserved for them. The selections for Presidency Postmasters are almost invariably made from among Postmasters drawing R600—800.

(c) There are five postmasterships on R500—20—600, two on R600—40—800, one Presidency Postmastership on R800—40—1,000 and two on R1,000—40—1,200. Two of these appointments are at present held by officers who once belonged to the Superintendents' line, namely, Rai Bahadur K. V. Lingham Pillai, Presidency Postmaster, Madras, and Mr. H. M. Richardson, Postmaster, Delhi."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Appointments of Indians to the higher grades of the Postal Service.

2. "(a) Was an assurance given in this Council, in reply to a question by the late Mr. Gokhale, that Indians would get higher appointments in the Postal Service on attaining seniority of grade ?

(b) If so, will Government in view of such assurance be pleased to state how many Indians have since been appointed to higher posts in that service carrying a salary of Rs. 1,000 or more ? What is the percentage of such higher posts ?

(c) Has any Indian ever since the establishment of the Postal Department attained the rank of Postmaster General ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) I think that the Hon'ble Member must be referring to the observations made by Sir Charles Stewart-Wilson, then Director General of the Post Offices, on a resolution moved by the late Mr. Gokhale at the meeting of Council held on March 11, 1911. These observations were as follows :—

* * * 'The Hon'ble Member and I may both hope that, as the largely increased numbers of Indians reach seniority in the Department, and we have a larger number of them to select from for the higher appointments, more will be so appointed, and I for one shall always be glad to see that their claims are not overlooked in any way.'

(b) Seven Indians have since been appointed to posts carrying a salary of Rs. 800 and above, which are reckoned as the higher administrative appointments of the Post Office. Of 28 such appointments five, or 18 per cent. are at the present time held by Indians. This small percentage is due solely to the fact that many of the Indians who in recent years have reached the superior grades in the Department entered as subordinates and had to retire before attaining sufficient seniority to permit of their claims being considered for the higher posts.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Sir George Barnes; Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar.]

(c) Three Indians have held the appointment of Postmaster General, two of whom, Rai Bahadur Saligram and Khan Bahadur Cowasji J. Lalkaka, rose from the ranks of the Department, while the remaining Indian officer, Mr. Kavasji J. Badshah, was a member of the Indian Civil Service."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Appointment of Mr. Hughes as Assistant Director General, Posts and Telegraphs.

3. " (a) What is the criterion by which the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, selects an Assistant Director General? Is the selection confined to Superintendents or Postmasters or both?

(b) Was Mr. Hughes appointed Assistant Director General as a result of an appeal to the Government against his supersession by the late Rao Bahadur P. A. Charlu?

(c) Have any Superintendents been superseded by Mr. Hughes himself? If so, how many? And have any of the Superintendents thus superseded any chance of being appointed to the post of Assistant Director General?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" (a) The selection for an Assistant Director Generalship is made from the officers in the higher grades of Superintendents and Postmasters, preference being given to those who possess special ability and aptitude for Secretarial work. The Director General nominates and Government appoints.

(b) Certainly not.

(c) Mr. Hughes superseded seven officers in the first grade of Superintendents. It is improbable that any of these seven officers will be selected hereafter for the appointment of Assistant Director General. Their sepersession for an Assistant Director General's appointment does not, however, debar them from promotion as Deputy Postmasters General, and in point of fact two of them have since been promoted to the rank of Deputy Postmaster General on Rs. 800."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Appointment of Mr. C. D. Rae.

4. " (a) Is it a fact that Mr. C. D. Rae, Postmaster, Simla, was brought from another Department on 8th July 1908, as a clerk in the office of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, and appointed soon after to the grade of a Postmaster (R400—500), without having any previous experience of Post Office work?

(b) Did he supersede Postmasters on Rs. 300 to 400 and even Superintendents? If so, why?

(c) Is it not a fact that the pay of the Postmaster, Dacca, was especially transferred to the General Post Office, Calcutta, in order to give Mr. Rae another lift to the next higher grade (500 to 600) and is he not in consequence the senior man in that grade and eligible for promotion to the next higher grade?

(d) Has Mr. Rae been appointed Additional Assistant Director General on Rs. 800 and has he superseded Superintendents in the 1st and 2nd grades? If so, why?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" (a) On the 8th October 1908 when the services of a competent assistant with a thorough knowledge of Secretarial work were required in the Director General's Office, Mr. C. D. Rae, who was drawing R300 in the Department of Commerce and Industry, and who had served previously in the Director General's Office, was transferred to that office on a pay of R300—400. Towards the middle of 1909 an energetic officer possessing superior qualifications was required for the Deputy Post Mastership of Calcutta, pay R400—500, to effect improvements in the working of the Calcutta General Post Office, and as no suitable officer, Indian or non-Indian, was then available in the line of postmasters, Sir Charles Stewart Wilson selected Mr. Rae to act in that appointment after giving him a special training in the Simla head office.

[Sir George Barnes; Captain Ajab Khan; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Mr. Abdur Rahim.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

(b) Yes. Mr. Rae superseded all Post Masters drawing R300—400, as none of them was fitted for the appointment.

(c) The facts are as follows :—

In July 1913 Mr. Rae was the senior qualified officer fit for promotion to the R500—600 grade and in the ordinary course would have been given the appointment in that grade at Dacca. But as he could not conveniently be replaced in Calcutta, the pay of the Dacca Post Master was exchanged with that of the Deputy Post Master of Calcutta. This was done in order that Mr. Rae should not lose by being retained in Calcutta in the public interest.

(d) The answer is 'yes,' and the reason is that he was the best man for the post, and by his industry and ability had distinguished himself more than his fellows."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

Changes introduced in the Indian Army.

5. " Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a list of the changes that have been introduced for the improvement of the Indian Army in the last three years ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" A list * of the principal changes referred to is placed on the table."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

Temporary honorary appointments in the Indian Army.

6. " (a) With reference to No. 212 in the Gazette of India dated the 2nd February, 1918, under Army Department, Appointments, will Government be pleased to state what is the scope of these temporary honorary appointments ?

(b) Are the incumbents to be drafted into the Indian Army when they are qualified ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" (a) These temporary honorary appointments are made on the recommendation of the Local Governments for services connected with the war, more especially in regard to recruiting.

(b) No."

The Hon'ble Mr. Abdur Rahim asked :—

The Bihar riots.

7. " (a) Will Government be pleased to state :—

(i) the total strength of the Criminal Investigation Department in Bihar ;

(ii) the number of Hindus, Mohamedans and Christian officers of the same ;

(iii) whether the Criminal Investigation Department of Bihar gave any previous information to the Local Government of the recent riots which took place during the last Bakr-Id festival in the Gaya and Shahabad Districts, and if not, why such previous information was not given ;

(iv) if the Local Government did receive any such information from the Criminal Investigation Department, what steps did the Government take to protect the rights of the Mohamedans, religious and personal, and to prevent the apprehended disturbances ;

(v) whether the Government have taken any step, or are considering any measure, for the relief of the sufferers and recoupment of the losses sustained by them for the performance of their religious duties ;

(vi) the number of Hindu and Mohamedan police officers in the area affected by the riots ;

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Abdur Rahim; Sir William Vincent.]

(vii) what precautionary measure Government have taken or are taking to prevent the recurrence of lawlessness and to protect the religious and personal rights of the Mohamedans of Bihar in future ?

(b) Is the Government in a position to state—

(i) the approximate number of rioters who took part in these disturbances;

(ii) the number of persons killed and wounded in these riots ;

(iii) the number of persons arrested in this connection ; and,

(iv) the number of persons already tried and convicted ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" (a) (i) and (ii). The total sanctioned strength of all ranks is 93 ; the actual strength is 79, distributed as follows :—

Hindus	51
Muhammadans	22
Christians	6

(iii) The Criminal Investigation Department obtained information that trouble was possible in all the districts of South Bihar except Patna ; but no definite information of the probability of rioting on a large scale was received and no trouble was anticipated in Shahabad. The riots were organised with such secrecy that it is understood that even the local Muhammadans had no warning of their imminence.

(iv) As a matter of general precaution the armed reserves of all districts had been brought up to full strength ; and detachments of military police were kept at Bhagalpur and Patna in readiness to move in any direction in which trouble might occur.

(v) Action is being taken, under Section 15A of the Police Act, to compensate those who lost property during the riots.

(vi) The numbers reported by the Local Government are :—

Hindus	290
Muhammadans	141

(vii) Four tribunals have been established under the Defence of India Act, for the trial of persons who are accused of participation in the riots. Exemplary sentences have been imposed on those persons proved to have taken a prominent part in those riots. The Local Government have also sanctioned the quartering of a large force of additional police in the affected area for a period of two years. This force will consist of 100 mounted police, 150 armed police, and 150 unarmed constables with the corresponding proportion of officers. It is expected that the mounted police at least will be fully equipped by the end of the present month. Pending the constitution of the force, a detachment of infantry and one squadron of cavalry have been retained at Arrah.

(b) (i) It is impossible to state even approximately the number of rioters who took part in the disturbances, but in the 172 cases instituted some 5,000—6,000 persons were named as having participated.

(ii) The numbers reported by the Local Government are as follows :—

Killed	41
Wounded	176

(iii) The total number of persons arrested is 3,878.

(iv) The number of those tried up to the 25th January 1918 was 893, of whom 614 were convicted. "

The Hon'ble Mr. Abdur Rahim asked:—

Telephonic connection between Delhi and Simla.

8. " (a) Will Government be pleased to state :—

(i) the actual cost of the existing telephonic connection between Delhi and Simla ; and

(ii) the income annually derived from this source since the establishment of the connection ;

[Mr. Abdur Rahim; Sir George Barnes; Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

(b) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of establishing a similar telephonic connection between Calcutta and Darjeeling?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) (i) The capital cost of the three telephone trunk circuits between Delhi and Simla was four and a quarter lakhs of rupees.

(ii) The revenue derived from fees paid by the public for the use of the trunks in 1916 was Rs. 1,414 and in 1917 Rs. 2,172. These figures have no relation whatever to the total volume of business disposed of over the Delhi-Simla telephone lines, because these lines were erected primarily for the use of Government and are open to the Public only when not otherwise engaged.

(b) In view of the shortage of material the Government are not at the present time disposed to consider the establishment of a telephone trunk between Calcutta and Darjeeling, but the Government will be pleased to consider the question as soon as normal times return and material is again available."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah asked :—

9. "Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) The total number of Indian Superintendents of Post Offices in the Bombay Presidency; and of these, how many are Muhammadans?

(b) The total number of Indian Inspectors, Postmasters, and Deputy Postmasters, respectively, in that Presidency, and of these how many are Muhammadans?

(c) The total number of Indians in all these appointments in Sind, and how many of them are Muhammadans?

(d) The proportion of Muhammadans in the total population of Sind.

(e) Of the Superintendents of Post Offices in the Bombay Presidency, how many have been promoted from the ranks of Inspectors? And, if none have been promoted, the reason why no Inspector has been promoted to the rank of Superintendent?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) There are 16 Indian Superintendents of Post Offices in the Bombay Presidency, including Sind, of whom 2 are Mahomedans.

(b) In the Bombay Presidency, excluding Sind, the numbers of Indian Inspectors, Head Postmasters and Deputy Postmasters are 43, 20 and 17 respectively. Out of these 1 Inspector only is a Mahomedan.

(c) In Sind the numbers of Indian Inspectors, Head Postmasters and Deputy Postmasters are 4, 2 and 3 respectively, and of these 1 Inspector and 1 Deputy Postmaster are Mahomedans.

(d) The proportion is 75 per cent.

(e) In the Bombay Presidency 3 Superintendents of Post Offices have been promoted from the rank of Inspectors."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah asked :—

10. "Is it a fact that while in the remaining portion of the Bombay Presidency Inspectors of Post Offices have clerks to do their office work, Inspectors in Sind are not given any clerks? If this is so, will Government be pleased to state the reason for this distinction?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"No. In no part of the Bombay Presidency are Inspectors of Post Offices given clerks to help them in their office work."

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur; Sir William Vincent; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea.]

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Securities deposited under the Press Act of 1910.

11. "Will Government be pleased to state, Province by Province, for each of the last three years :—

(a) the number of (i) monthly magazines or periodicals and (ii) weekly journals, for which securities were demanded under the Indian Press Act of 1910; and

(b) the number of such magazines and journals as have deposited securities under the Act?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"A statement * is laid on the table giving the information desired by the Hon'ble Member."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Educational expenditure.

12. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement for each of the last five years, Province by Province, showing—

(a) recurring grants,

(b) non-recurring grants; and

(c) unspent balances,

in regard to educational expenditure?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The statement† asked for is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Lord Morley's "Recollections" and deportation.

13. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following observations made by Lord Morley while Secretary of State for India in a letter to the then Viceroy, Lord Minto, published in his "Recollections."

"At this point they have just sent me four press telegrams of yesterday. It startles me that even Lord Tchinovniks like your — and your — should so far forget that they are the servants and the agents of Parliament in a free country, and should dream that an S.S. could live one hour after the assembling of Parliament who should have assented to these new provisions. I see that — says that this drastic power of muzzling an agitator will save the necessity of 'urging deportation.' He must have forgotten what I very explicitly told him, that I would not sanction deportation except for a man of whom there was solid reason to believe that violent disorder was the direct and deliberately planned result of his action."

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the cases giving the names of the detenus and the acts of violence alleged against them, in which this principle has been applied?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Assassination and dacoity have been the direct and deliberately planned results of the revolutionary conspiracies in Bengal for connection with which certain persons are held as State prisoners under Regulation III of 1818. But the Government of India do not think it would be advisable to publish the details of each case."

* Not included in these Proceedings.

† Vide Appendix A.

[Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir William Vincent; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

14. "(a) Are Government aware that the prohibition of the Ramlila procession along the old route at Delhi last year caused great indignation among the Hindu population of Delhi?

(b) Do the Government of India intend to direct the local authorities to call a meeting of the leaders of the Hindu and Muhammadan communities and arrange a programme and time table for the Ramlila and Tazia processions to pass by the old route with a sufficient interval between them to avoid collision?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The Government of India received lately a memorial from the members of the Ramlila Committee, Delhi, protesting against the decision of the local authorities in regard to the route of the procession. After a careful examination of the case from all points of view, the Government of India came to the conclusion that no solution could have been found which would have been fully acceptable to both the Hindu and Muhammadan communities, and would at the same time have offered adequate safeguards against a breach of the public peace. They considered that the decision of the local authorities was the best way in which the difficulty could have been met.

(b) The answer is in the negative. The invariable practice of local authorities, in Delhi and elsewhere, is to arrange meetings of the kind suggested by the Hon'ble Member in these cases. Many such meetings were called by the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi on the occasion to which the question refers. Nor could the Government of India in any case interfere beforehand with the discretion of the local authorities to determine the route to be followed, as it is the local authorities and not the Government of India who would be primarily responsible if the public peace and good order were broken."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

15. "(a) Is it a fact that British men-of-war were once built in India?

(b) Is it a fact that, in later years, wooden sea-going sailing ships have been built at Chittagong, Moulmein, Coconada, the Andaman Islands and other Indian ports: also that a sailing ship built at Chittagong within the past five years, and a steamer built in the Andaman Islands within the past twenty years, have had tonnage of nearly one thousand tons each?

(c) Have wooden sailing ships at any time been built and navigated with the aid of only such materials, labour, and appliances as are still procurable in India?

(d) Are wooden sailing ships, even of rough country-make, useful to the Empire at the present time in setting free steamers for other duties?

(e) Is this swadeshi ship-building industry capable of being assisted by the grant of liberal Government funds and the provision of additional facilities?

(f) Do Government intend to consider the question of placing a competent officer on special duty with ample funds and urgent orders to take immediate action to resuscitate the industry?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) Before wood was replaced by iron and steel, several vessels were constructed for the Navy in the Bombay Dockyard. The first was the 36-gun frigate "Pitt" built in 1805. Thereafter six ships of the line of 74-guns, and five of 80 to 84-guns were built. The composite brig "Fame" was constructed as late as 1889.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir William Vincent.]

(b) Wooden sailing ships have been built at the places named. At present small wooden ships are being constructed at Chittagong, Moulmein, Calicut, Bombay, and Rangoon. With regard to the latter part of this clause the Government of India have not got precise information.

(c) The answer is believed to be in the affirmative.

(d) The Government of India are advised that wooden sailing vessels, of the kind that could be built in India under present conditions, would only be suitable for employment in coasting trading, and that the steam vessels which they would replace are, for the most part, themselves unsuitable for larger voyages.

(e) and (f) With regard to the last two clauses of the Hon'ble Member's question an officer with considerable experience in the construction of ships has been sent out recently by the Admiralty to India, and is now investigating the possibility of constructing vessels of various descriptions in this country. The Government of India propose to await his report before deciding whether any special action should be taken by Government towards the encouragement of the indigenous ship-building industry."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

16. "Are Government aware—

Holding of public meetings in Delhi.

(a) that the President of the Delhi Municipal Committee refused the use of the Town Hall for holding a public meeting of condolence on the death of Sir William Wedderburn, and again refused permission to use the Town Hall for holding a meeting of the Provincial Congress Committee to elect members of the Reception Committee for the next session of the Indian National Congress to be held at Delhi;

(b) that no public meeting in the open air can be held at Delhi after sunset without permission from the police, and that such sanction is usually withheld;

(c) that before this restriction was imposed by the District Magistrate of Delhi open air meetings were frequently held in the Queen's Gardens at Delhi, and there has been no risk of any breach of the peace?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The Government of India are informed that on 26th September last the local Home Rule League was given the use of the Town Hall for a public meeting and this meeting was made the occasion for an attack on Government couched in unseemly language. In consequence of this when the use of the Hall was subsequently requested by the provincial Congress Committee on 27th and 29th January the use of the Hall was refused by the Secretary under orders from the President.

(b) and (c) In October, 1917, several public meetings were held in the Queen's Gardens, Delhi, at one of which the police had to interfere to prevent disorder. The District Magistrate consequently passed an order under the Police Act of 1861 that such meetings should for the future be held only under license; owing to the difficulty of controlling meetings after dusk, the licenses issued have stipulated that meetings should terminate at dusk. There is of course no restriction on holding meetings in other than public places."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea :—

"I just want to put a supplementary question, my Lord. Is it not altogether better to allow public meetings to be held in preference to private meetings which cannot be controlled by the public authorities?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"May I ask, my Lord, if this question is within the rules?"

[His Excellency the President; Sir William Vincent; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

His Excellency the President:—"What is your point?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I submit that the Hon'ble Member has asked me for an expression of opinion, and such a question is not in accordance with the rules."

His Excellency the President:—"I think that is so."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked:—

Conscience Clause in Educational Codes.

17. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the opinions received from Local Governments on the question of a conscience clause in Educational Codes?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied:—

"The opinions received were in every case confidential and cannot be placed in extenso on the table, but I lay on the table an abstract* which indicates the general character of the opinions received."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Placing of Government orders with Indian firms.

18. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the evidence of Mr. Karimbhoy A. Peerbhoy before the Industries Commission?

(b) Is it a fact that he stated—

(i) that in the matter of entrusting Government orders for tents and leather the authorities have a tendency 'to favour European firms to the detriment of Indian industries?'

(ii) that in the matter of Government orders the work entrusted to Indian firms 'is not in proportion to the work they are able to turn out,' and that firms 'able to turn out 6 annas are not given the work of a pie?'

(iii) that in placing orders for tents officials so arrange it that while Indian firms get orders for tents from 50 to 75 tents at a time and have often to sit idle for want of orders, European firms at Cawnpore get orders for 1,500 to 2,000 at a time?

(c) Do Government intend to take any action to test the truth of the allegations made and take such steps as may be desirable under the circumstances?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied:—

"As regards (a) the answer is in the affirmative.

As regards (b) (i), (ii) and (iii) the answer is that Mr. Karimbhoy Adamji Peerbhoy did make the statements referred to.

The general policy of Government in matters of this kind is laid down in paragraph 13, Army Regulations, India, Volume III, in which are set forth the regulations in regard to Army contracts. These regulations enjoin the primary use of the resources of India, without discrimination between European and Indian firms. It is, as the Hon'ble Member is aware, the earnest desire of Government to stimulate local industries with a view to making India self-supporting, in so far as the resources of the country permit. The appointment of the Industries Commission and the subsequent creation of the Munitions Board afford the best possible proof of the intentions of Government in this respect. The military authorities are, however, responsible for seeing that all stores supplied to the Army are of proper quality, punctually delivered, and manufactured under conditions which facilitate inspection and supply. Strict compliance with these conditions is of special importance in war time, and if certain European firms received larger orders from time to time than certain Indian firms, it is because their manufacturing resources are in most cases better developed, and because experience has shown that they are generally more reliable in completing orders within contract time.

*Vide Appendix B.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.]

Orders are placed with European and Indian firms in accordance with what experience has shown to be the average manufacturing capacity of each concern. At the present time most of the Indian firms which manufacture military stores are being employed by Government. When, however, a firm, whether European or Indian, has been tried and has failed to complete a limited order in contract time, the conclusion drawn is that the capacity of that firm is unequal to what it has undertaken to perform, and additional orders are consequently placed elsewhere.

As regards (c) Government do not propose to take any action in the matter at present. More is required than the statement of a single individual to justify the delay to administrative work that would be entailed by instituting an inquiry of this kind in war time. The Government of India will, therefore, await the submission of the Industrial Commission's Report, which will, doubtless, deal with such mattters as part of the general scope of its inquiry."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Case of Babu Jyotish Chandra Ghose, a State prisoner.

19. " (1) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 8th February about the case of Babu Jyotish Chandra Ghose, now a State prisoner, under Bengal Regulation III of 1818, and a similar article in the Bengalee of 22nd February, giving publicity to a memorial said to have been addressed to His Excellency the Viceroy ?

(2) Is it true, as alleged in the said memorial, that Babu B. B. Mitra, maternal uncle of the State prisoner, visited him in the Berhampur Lunatic Asylum on the 10th February with Mr. W. S. Adie, District Magistrate of Murshidabad ?

(3) Is it true that it was then found that he had been lying straight on his back on a bedstead for the last six months with a vacant gaze fixed on the ceiling, supremely unconscious of his surroundings, failing to recognise even his near and dear relations, with jaws firmly closed, legs stiff and crooked, unable to move his limbs or even to speak, with the power of response to sensation deadened, and that he had been artificially fed for six months ?

(4) Is it a fact that the Bengal Government informed his mother that he was feigning insanity and that his physical condition was satisfactory ? If so, when was this reply given ? Was he all along kept in a solitary cell ?

(5) When was he made a prisoner and when was he admitted to the Lunatic Asylum ? Was any intimation given to the mother or other relations of this or of his showing signs of insanity ? If so, when and how ?

(6) Is it true, as alleged in the Patrika, that in reply to a letter from her the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming informed his mother on the 8th June that Jyotish was at Berhampur Jail, and that there was no objection to the relatives seeing him once a month for which application should be made to the Magistrate of Murshidabad ?

(7) Is it a fact that, although the letter from Mr. Cumming is dated 8th June, it was not sent for some time, and that the mother did not receive it before the 19th July ? Is it a fact that Jyotish showed signs of insanity before this, but that this fact was not communicated to her ?

(8) Is it a fact that immediately after receipt of Mr. Cumming's letter, that is, on the 25th July, Babu B. B. Mitra applied for permission to see Jyotish and enclosed a copy of Mr. Cumming's letter ? Did the Magistrate of Murshidabad then reply, 'I know nothing of you and your relationship to

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir William Vincent.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

Jyotish Chandra Ghose. I cannot allow you the interview you suggest. I have received no intimation of any order of the Additional Secretary of which you enclose a copy ' ?

(9) Did he then see Mr. Cumming and state all that the Magistrate had said, on which Mr. Cumming said that through pressure of work no intimation was sent to the Magistrate of the order and then gave a printed note of permission bearing date the 13th August and which was as follows : 'Babu B. B. Mitra (mother's brother) is permitted to see Jyotish on the—at Berhampur. He should present this before the Magistrate, Berhampur or Murshidabad ? '

(10) Is it a fact that then Babu B. B. Mitra applied to the Magistrate early in September and asked for an interview about a week later and quoted the note, and that on his arrival found that the Magistrate had gone out and left no order about the interview, and that the officer in charge admitted inability to do anything ?

(11) Is it a fact that the Magistrate afterwards wrote to him that he could not allow the interview as he had not yet received any order ?

(12) Is it a fact that Mr. Cumming being appealed to again advised a fresh application to the Magistrate which was done on the 3rd December, and the reply received was that he must apply for a new order as the order quoted was three months old ?

(13) Was Jyotish before imprisonment a Professor in the Hugli College and some time in the Ripon College ?

(14) Is any allowance granted for the maintenance of his family ?

(15) Will Government be pleased to consider the question of even temporarily restoring him to his family for proper treatment under such conditions as the Government may be pleased to impose ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" I have had a statement* prepared giving the information required so far as it is available on the records of the Government of India. As it is rather long I propose to lay it upon the table."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Number of political dacoities committed since 1910.

20. " Will Government be pleased to give a list of murders, dacoities and other outrages committed or supposed to be committed by members of any revolutionary parties since 1910, the number of persons suspected in each case, the number sent up for trial, if any, and the result of such trial ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"A statement* is laid on the table embodying such information as is available. The cases shown under Bengal are only those in which the persons concerned have been placed on trial. The total number of outrages in that Presidency since 1910, which are referred to by the Hon'ble Member, is as follows :—

(a) dacoities	89
(b) murders	30
(c) attempted murders	1
(d) bomb outrages	9
(e) attempted dacoities	7

In addition in Bengal 74 persons were proceeded against for offences under the Arms or Explosive Substances Acts ; of these 56 were convicted and 18 acquitted or discharged."

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis; Sir Claude Hill]

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Money spent by District Board and Municipalities on Education.

21. "(a) Will Government be pleased to place on the table a statement showing, Province by Province, the amounts spent by District Boards and, Municipalities, respectively, during each of the last ten years, on—

(i) primary education,

(ii) secondary education, and

(iii) other educational objects?

(b) What proportion does each of these amounts represent of the total actual receipts and of the total expenditure of these bodies during each particular year?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"A statement* giving the information asked for so far as available is placed on the table. Separate figures for primary, secondary, and other education are not available in this connection, but it is hoped that the information supplied will meet the Hon'ble Member's wishes."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

Agricultural stock and food-supplies in India.

22. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following passage in the leading article of the Pioneer of 9th March 1918 :—

'The meat problem is still more serious, since the diminution of supplies connotes an entrenchment on capital. For various reasons the agricultural stock of the world has been declining for some years, and the war has immensely quickened the rate of contraction. The huge demands of the various armies, the dearness of feeding stuffs and the large profits to be derived from the slaughter of young animals have created a grave situation. Mr. Hoover, the Food Controller of the United States, believes that we have been living for years on the capital of our flocks and herds, and he puts the decrease at the huge figure of 115 million beasts. His estimate may be a few millions in excess, but even allowing for this, it is clear that for many years the contraction in cereals cannot be compensated by the increased consumption of beef and mutton: some other sources must be tapped and there are some who believe that the resources of the land being limited in quantity, the best remedy lies in more effective exploitation of the wealth of the seas.'

(b) Will Government be pleased to state how India stands as regards its agricultural stock, in consequence of the war from 1914 to 1918?

(c) What steps, if any, do Government intend to take to prevent diminution in the cattle supply of the country in the interests of agriculture?

(d) Will Government supply all such information regularly in the official Gazette?

(e) Have any steps been taken by Government for the proper and scientific exploitation of the seas and rivers for improvement in fish supply?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) The information asked for is not available, as with two exceptions agricultural stock are not enumerated more frequently than once in five years in any province in India; and the next quinquennial census falls due in most provinces in 1919-20.

(c) No special steps are contemplated for the purpose indicated. The conditions depicted in the article quoted by the Hon'ble Member, as prevailing in Europe and America, are not the same in India, which, taken as a whole,

* Vide Appendix C.

is not a meat-eating nor a meat-exporting country. The Government of India have no reason to believe that the general food shortage resulting from the war has had the effect of materially increasing the slaughter of cattle for indigenous consumption. So far as foreign consumption is concerned, I would point out that the export of slaughter cattle from British India has been prohibited since the 10th of August 1914. The improvement of the quality of the various breeds of Indian cattle is at present a more important problem than an increase in their number.

(d) It is not understood to what information the Hon'ble Member refers. The cattle census reports are published separately, and are too bulky for inclusion in the official gazettes.

(e) Yes. Fisheries Departments have been established with this object in Madras from 1905, in Bengal from 1907 and in the Punjab from 1911. The Bengal Department deals also with the fisheries of Bihar and Orissa. The reports of these Departments are published annually and contain all available information as to their proceedings."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

Memorial from Indian guards of the Bengal and North-Western Railway.

23. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to any memorial of Indian guards on the Bengal and North-Western Railway, setting forth their grievances, which was submitted to the Traffic Manager, Gorakhpur? If so, how has that memorial been disposed of?

(b) Is it a fact that an annual increment in their salary was sanctioned in 1907 and has now been stopped?

(c) Is it a fact that they are required to pay for their summer uniform? What is the practice on other lines?

(d) Is it also a fact that they are required to pay the rent for their quarters which other servants of the railway occupying similar positions are not?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"(a) Government have received no memorial from the Indian guards on the Bengal and North Western Railway.

(c) The practice on State-worked railways and probably on the larger at any rate of the companies' systems is to provide summer clothing for their men.

(d) Guards do not get rent-free quarters on other systems.

The Government have no knowledge of the facts on the Bengal and North Western Railway."

The Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque asked :—

Release of interned persons.

24. "(a) Have the cases of any other interned persons been inquired into as was promised by the Hon'ble the Home Member on 5th September, 1917, in his reply to a question of the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, in connection with the release of Mrs. Besant and her two colleagues? If the answer be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to place on the table a list of any such person or persons who have been thus released?

(b) Will Government be pleased to place on the table a list of those interned persons whom the late Home Member, the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock, on the 21st February, 1917, during the course of his speech on the Resolution of Mr. Dadabhoy regarding the amendment of the Rules under the Defence of India Act, 1915, characterised as 'openly and avowedly preaching or publishing ill-will among His Majesty's subjects, etc.,' as distinguished from 'secret conspirators.'

(c) Has any interned person so characterised by the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock and in whose case the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent made the definite promise of inquiry referred to in part (a) been so far released?"

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Parts (a), (b) and (c) :—

The exact words of the undertaking to which the Hon'ble Member refers were as follows :—

The Government of India are prepared, subject to the same conditions, to take the same course (i.e., to recommend Local Governments to remove restrictions under the Defence of India Rules) in regard to other persons upon whom restrictions have been placed under these rules merely by reason of their violent method of political agitation.

Inquiries were made in pursuance of that promise and such restrictions were cancelled in the case of the following :—

Mr. Karandikar.
Mr. Horniman.
Mr. Titus.
Mr. Kolhatkar.
Mr. Paranjpe.

The Hon'ble Member will see that he has not quoted me correctly in clause (c) of his question, but the only persons now interned under the Defence of India Rules who come under the precise category referred to by the Hon'ble Member in clause (b) of his question are—

Imamuddin Punjabi,
Swami Satya Dev,
Bairagi Tripathi, and Nihal Singh."

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" My Lord in moving that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or grain be taken into consideration, I do not think that I need detain the Council at any length. I have already explained the provisions of this measure and its scope and object in detail last Sessions. I have every reason from the manner in which it was received on previous occasions, to assume that it has commanded the general approval of this Council. It has now been before a Select Committee, who have examined the details of the Bill if I may say so with great care, and made certain amendments which are fully explained in the Report which is before Hon'ble Members; I can add very little to that Report. 11-30 A. M.

" It will be seen that the question of prescribing a minimum rate of interest below which Courts should not go when deciding cases under the Act has, as I anticipated, been abandoned. This course was taken in view of the very weighty opinions expressed against prescribing any such minimum.

" Another point that was much discussed in Select Committee was the question whether this Bill should be given retrospective effect or not. I say, ' retrospective effect, ' but the use of that word was also the subject of some contention. My meaning is whether the Bill should apply to past transactions. Well, my Lord, there were many in the Select Committee who were in favour of including such transactions within the scope of the Bill, but the view of the majority was that, as this was a new and experimental measure, it was desirable not to expose it to attack on the ground that it was retrospective, and we finally decided the question in the negative.

" Another detail to which I should draw attention is the first proviso to sub-clause 3 (1). Fears were expressed that if no limits were placed on the power of the Court to reopen agreements under this clause, money-lenders' books and accounts for long periods, 30 and 40 years, and even 50 years, would have to be periodically examined, and to obviate this difficulty, as far as possible, the Committee decided that the Court should not have power to reopen any agreement which purported to close previous dealings and create a new obligation if such agreement was made more than six years from the date of the transaction which is the subject of the suit. I am glad to say that, by making that modification in the Bill, we were, I think, able to secure unanimity in our report. The second proviso to the same sub-clause enacts that nothing in this Act shall affect any decree of a Court and will prevent any Civil Court acting under this law from re-opening decrees. It was suggested by, I think, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul that a similar privilege should be extended to awards under the Co-operative Societies Act of 1911. On examination we found, however, that the power of arbitrators under that Act and the effect of such awards are not laid down in the Act itself, but are dependent on rules framed by the Local Government, and no provision for such awards could therefore be suitably inserted in the Bill. To meet the wishes of the Hon'ble Mover who put forward this suggestion, however, I undertook on behalf of the Government of India to draw the attention of Local Governments to this matter, so that they may, if necessary, direct that under section 1, sub-section (3), such awards shall be exempted from the provisions of the Act.

"Well, my Lord, I do not think there is anything else in this Bill to which I need draw special attention or which is not fully explained in the Report of the Select Committee, and all I need do is to commend the motion which I have just made to the favourable consideration of the Council."

The motion was put and agreed to.

11-25 A. M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"My Lord, the object with which I gave notice of the amendment* which stands against my name is met to a very large extent by the amendment standing in the name of the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent, and as I am sure that amendment will be carried, I do not propose to press mine and I beg leave to withdraw it."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

11-27 A. M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" My Lord, I move that after the proviso to clause 3 (1) the following explanation be inserted, namely :—

'Explanation.—In the case of a suit brought on a series of transactions the expression 'the transaction' means, for the purposes of proviso (i), the first of such transactions.'

"This is merely a drafting amendment to prevent any mistake or uncertainty as to the date from which the period of six years which is specified in the clause shall run. Where a transaction consists of a single loan on any given date there is no difficulty in ascertaining the date of the transaction, but if there is a suit on a running account, there might be difficulty in interpreting the proviso; to meet that difficulty, I propose to insert this Explanation to make it clear that the date is to run from the first of the transactions which are the subject of the suit."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" My Lord, I now move that the Bill as amended be passed, and, in doing so, I should like to express my great gratitude both to the Legislative Department and to the non-official Members of this Council for the ready manner in which they have assisted me in the examination of this very difficult question."

11-29 A. M. The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi:—" My Lord, I rise to offer my respectful congratulations to your Excellency's Government on the successful passage through its various stages of a Bill which,

* That in proviso (i) to clause 3 (1), for the word "six" the word "three" be substituted.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi.]

when converted into law and placed upon our Statute-book is calculated to uproot a gigantic evil without involving hardship to those who are engaged in the pursuit of money-lending upon legitimate and equitable lines.

"The cordial reception given to this Bill on the day of its introduction in this Council by the representatives of all provinces and of all classes furnished conclusive proof, if proof was necessary, of the great need felt in the country for the introduction of a measure like this. And its subsequent circulation disclosed an overwhelming volume of opinion throughout the length and breadth of the country in support of this measure. With rare exceptions, almost all Local Governments, all High Courts, an overwhelming majority of executive and judicial officers, of public associations and of representative individuals have given their whole-hearted support to this Bill. Among this volume of opinion we have the opinions of judges like the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Seshagiri Ayyar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Banerji, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim, of lawyers like the Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar, of merchants like Rao Bahadur P. T. Chetti Garu, President of the Southern India Chamber of Commerce, and of Associations such as the Marwari Association of Calcutta, the Marwari Sabha of Khurja, the British Indian Association of Calcutta and the Madras High Court Vakils' Association warmly welcoming this measure. In fact, my Lord, some competent authorities, for instance, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Banerji, of the Allahabad High Court, have expressed the opinion that the Bill does not go far enough towards uprooting this evil. But, as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble the Home Member, it was felt in the Select Committee that this being the first Imperial measure of its kind, it should be given a shape which would make it acceptable to all parties, so that it might go out of this Council with its unanimous blessing.

"My Lord, the law embodied in this Bill is in no way an innovation. As far back as five centuries before the commencement of the Christian era the Roman law-givers enacted in the Twelve Tables a provision laying down the maximum limit of interest realisable by money-lenders. The Hindu law-givers, as Hon'ble Members are aware, devised a rule called Damdupat under which the total amount of interest realisable could not exceed the principal sum originally lent by the creditor. And, as Hon'ble Members are aware, so far as the laws of Islam are concerned, they absolutely prohibit usury. In England, as far back as the reign of Edward the Confessor, an Act of Parliament was passed absolutely forbidding usury. Under the Canon Law loan on interest was punished as a sin, as is evidenced by 15 Edward III, c. 5. During the Tudor period an Act of Parliament, 37 Henry VIII, c 9, was passed which repealed all usury laws and fixed the legal rate of interest at 10 per cent. per annum. In 21 James I, c. 17 that rate was reduced to 8 per cent., in 12 Charles II, c. 13, to 6 per cent., and finally, in 12 Anne, c. 16, the rate was still further reduced to 5 per cent. Subsequently, owing chiefly to the writings of Hume, Adam Smith, and Bentham, the usury laws were abolished by several enactments which might be mentioned as follows:—

5 and 6 William IV, c. 41.

2 and 3 Victoria, c. 37.

17 and 18 Victoria, c. 90.

The injurious consequences of this abolition of all usury laws was felt all over England, and, finally, the Money-lending Commission of 1897 recommended severe restrictions on the mode of carrying on business by the class known as 'advertising money-lenders' and the Money-lenders Act of 1900, 63 and 64 Victoria, c. 41, and the Act of 1911, 1 and 2 George V, c. 38, were passed, which are at present the law in England.

"My Lord, even in this country since the advent of British rule steps have already been taken in the Sonthal Parganas to put down usury. Hon'ble Members may be aware of the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation of 1872, section 6 of which lays down that, where a loan is advanced for a period of one year, the maximum interest realisable on that loan shall not exceed 25 per cent.; while, if the period of the loan covers a longer term, then the ancient

[Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

Hindu rule of Damdupat applies in those Parganas. It is, therefore, perfectly clear that the law which we are now enacting is in no sense an innovation, but follows precedents, ancient as well as modern, and, in view of the overwhelming volume of opinion in favour of this measure, as evinced by the written opinions which have been received, I have not the slightest doubt that the Act will be welcomed all over the country.

"With these few words, my Lord, I support the motion placed before the Council by the Hon'ble the Home Member."

11-37 A.M. The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.—"My Lord, at this stage of the Bill I do not propose to make a long speech. I have been a warm supporter of the measure from the day of its introduction, and as a member of the Select Committee it is a matter of great gratification to me to find that the Bill as it stands now meets practically all shades of opinion. I say all shades of opinion deliberately, because in certain quarters grave doubts had been expressed as to certain provisions of the Bill as it was originally introduced; but I think it may be said in fairness to the Hon'ble the Home Member that he has tried as much as it was possible for him to meet all possible objections that could have been urged.

"With regard to the character of this Bill, my Lord, as the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent has been pleased to point out to-day, one leading feature of the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee is that it limits the period within which the accounts settled can be re-opened. The clause as it stands now runs as follows :—

'Provided that in the exercise of these powers the Court shall not re-open any agreement purporting to close previous dealings and to create a new obligation which has been entered into by the parties or any persons from whom they claim at a date more than six years from the date of the transaction.'

"I am very glad that my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma has seen his way to withdraw the amendment which he intended to move in regard to this matter.

"My Lord, some doubt has also been expressed as to whether it would not have been proper to lay down a certain minimum and to take away the wide discretionary powers which have been given by this Bill to the Courts. My Lord, it has been said that the Courts require some guidance, and to leave the Courts in the possession of such large discretionary powers is not a very safe thing. My Lord, my experience of the subordinate Courts is that they have, generally speaking, exercised such discretionary powers as the Indian Statute Law has given them with great care and caution. In fact, they have already large powers of discretion given to them by several Acts of the Legislature. Take, for instance, the Specific Relief Act. The whole foundation of it is discretion, and I do not think it can be said by any man conversant with the work of the lower Courts that they have abused their powers or exercised the discretion vested in them by law otherwise than in a judicial and judicious manner.

"Therefore, my Lord, I have no grave doubts with regard to that matter. In this respect the Bill purports to follow the English model, and we have every confidence that what has been the well-settled practice in Courts in England with regard to the interpretation of the various phrases in the English Act will usually be followed in India.

"My Lord, I have nothing more to say except that I desire to congratulate the Hon'ble the Home Member upon the measure which he is now piloting through the Council. My Lord, I think the Bill is really a measure of a very beneficent character, and I have no doubt for my part that as time goes on even the opponents of to-day will be converted to the opinion that the measure is really one which is intended to give relief to many deserving debtors. My Lord, I anticipate no such fears as are entertained in certain quarters. I therefore strongly support the motion made by the Hon'ble the Home Member."

The motion was put and agreed to.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Major-General A. H. Bingley.]

INDIAN ARMY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Major-General A. H. Bingley :—"I beg to move that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, be taken into consideration. 11-45 A.M.

"The amendments made by the Select Committee are few and not of great importance, and I trust they will commend themselves to this Council.

"In Select Committee one matter was mentioned which, however, could not be considered by the Committee as it was outside the scope of their terms of reference: I refer to the provisions of the Indian Army Act relating to corporal punishment by sentence of a Court-martial.

"Section 45 of the Indian Army Act provides that corporal punishment not exceeding thirty lashes shall be awardable by sentence of a Court-martial to a soldier under the rank of warrant officer—

(a) on active service for any offence;

(b) at any time for the offence specified in clause (d) of section 31 of the Act, that is to say, for the offence of theft in respect of Government or of regimental property or of the property of a person subject to Military Law; and

(c) at any time for a civil offence which is punishable with whipping under the law of British India.

"It is unnecessary for me to offer any special remarks regarding the offences referred to in clause (c); while those referred to in clause (b) are, so far as they go, cognate to those in clause (c), that is to say, they are offences of theft akin to some of those for which whipping is awardable under the ordinary law; and I need scarcely point out to this Council that, having regard to the conditions of life in the Army, when soldiers must constantly leave their property about, trusting to the honour of their comrades, stealing from a comrade in particular is rightly regarded as a peculiarly disgraceful offence.

"As regards clause (a), that is to say, for any offence when committed on active service; in practice the punishment is awarded in the case of such purely military offences as sleeping on post or quitting post without leave, committed by sentries (both of which offences are so grave as to be, on active service, punishable with death), for theft and cognate offences; for malingering; and for offences of an indecent or unnatural kind; and in the case of followers, in addition, for the offence of desertion, or of violence or gross insubordination to superiors. The Council are, doubtless, aware that we have large numbers of men employed in labour and porter corps on active service, and that a fair proportion of these are convicts on conditional release from the various jails in India. The alternative punishment in such cases as those to which I have just referred would be at the least a considerable period of rigorous imprisonment and at the most might be, in some cases, death. To a certain extent therefore corporal punishment may be regarded and in practice is employed as a measure of clemency.

"I have His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's authority for saying that personally he has no sympathy with this form of punishment, which he considers is of a degrading nature; at the same time he is fully convinced that it would be highly detrimental to good order and to the interests of military discipline to do anything at the present time, which would restrict by legislation, the powers which we possess in this respect. His Excellency, however, is prepared, after the war, to reconsider the whole position and to make such recommendations to Government as may be necessary in this respect in the light of the experience gained in the war, and after obtaining the views of General Officers Commanding in the various theatres of operations in which Indian troops are employed. As an example of the Commander-in-Chief's personal attitude towards corporal punishment, I may inform the Council that some months ago His Excellency issued executive orders to the Army in India that:—1st, a sentence of corporal punishment is not to be awarded under clause (a) of section 45 of the Indian Army Act, i.e., for any offence committed 'on active service,' in any place in India (such as defended ports and certain frontier stations) where troops and followers are 'on active service' for the purposes of discipline, merely by reason of an order or direction to that effect; 2nd, that such a sentence passed in India shall not, if it does not require confirmation, be carried out unless and until it has received his approval, and that such a sentence, if it requires confirmation, shall be reserved for confirmation by himself; and 3rd, that a member of the Indian Defence Force enrolled under section 12 of the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917, shall not be tried by Court-martial for an offence under section 31 (d) of the Indian Army Act, or for a civil offence punishable with whipping under the law of British India, but shall, where trial is necessary, be handed over to the Civil Power for trial. It will thus be seen that, though power is retained under the Act to inflict corporal punishment in India as well as in the field, such power, in so far as India is concerned, is virtually in abeyance, as it can only be exercised with the sanction of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief who is not in favour of this form of punishment as he regards it as contrary to the ideas of the present day."

The motion was put and agreed to.

11-42 A.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" My Lord, in view of the very sympathetic statement made by the Hon'ble Member and the assurance given by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief that the question will be examined sympathetically after the war, I beg leave to withdraw the amendment* standing in my name."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

11-49 A.M. The Hon'ble Major-General A. H. Bingley :—" My Lord, I beg leave to move that the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN COMPANIES RESTRICTION BILL.

11-50 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" My Lord, I rise to move that the Bill to control the withdrawal of capital from the money-market by companies be taken into consideration.

" I have already on more than one occasion—the last of which was when I moved for leave to introduce the Bill—given explanations as to the scope of the Bill and the way in which we intended to work it, and I should not ordinarily have said more in connection with this motion but for the fact that I have been receiving, and other people have been receiving, a good many excited telegrams from Indians in a variety of places which indicates that they have not taken the trouble to read the Bill or the explanations that have been made with reference thereto. The burden of their song is the impression that it is intended to put a complete stop on the issue of capital by companies.

" Well, of course I cannot admit arguments of that description. I have already explained, and I now repeat, that there is no intention to prohibit en bloc the flotations of those registered companies which come under the scope of the Bill. We merely say, as has been said in England and other countries at a much earlier stage of the war, and as we have said ourselves in regard to a variety of other matters of importance, that these flotations must hereafter require the license of the Government of India. I have also said, and I repeat it again, that when considering whether a license should be granted we shall bear in mind the following general propositions. First, is the enterprise likely to attract money which would otherwise go into Government loans and treasury bills? If it is not likely to attract such money, well then there is

* That in the Schedule to the Bill after the entry relating to section 43 of the Indian Army Act, 1911, the following entry be inserted :—

'Sections 45 and 46, the whole.'

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

no objection to such a flotation. Second, even if the flotation is likely to attract money which would otherwise go into Government loans and treasury bills, might it be allowed, nevertheless, in these war circumstances as being of assistance in the speeding up of war material or as being likely to result in increase of other production which will save tonnage and imports into India? Again, if this proposition be established a license will be given.

"I have also said that we propose to obtain the assistance of advisory committees which will be established at the outset in Calcutta and Bombay, two great centres of Indian industry. If it proves to be the case that an advisory committee is desirable at some other centre I am quite ready to consider the establis ment of one, and I repeat that each advisory committee will contain a representative of Indian commerce.

"I want now to go a step further to allay the fears that have been expressed. We do not really want to interfere with small local companies, such as the Nidhis in Madras, and other quite local enterprises; and I am prepared to guarantee that we will give a license without further inquiry in the case of a company whose flotation might come under the Bill if the total flotation during the period the Bill is in force does not exceed one lakh of rupees. That will wipe out the small people and concentrate the real operation of the Bill on the important flotations which it is in the interests of the State in the present circumstances to control. With these explanations I now move that the Bill be taken into consideration."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"My Lord, I beg to move the amendment that stands against my name that after clause 3 (2) of the Bill to control the withdrawal of capital from the money-market by companies, the following sub-clause be inserted:— 11-51 A.M.

'(3) A license shall not be refused under this section unless it appears clearly that the capital or increased capital proposed to be raised cannot be spent by the company advantageously during the continuance of the war and the company is unwilling to place the funds raised by them and which cannot be so spent at the disposal of the Government as a loan to be returned six months after the war with interest at the current rate.'

"My Lord, I move this amendment notwithstanding the remarks which have been made by the Hon'ble the Finance Member, because I think and believe that there is absolutely nothing detrimental in this amendment to the promotion of the object that Government have in view, consistently with the development of industries and commerce in India. I venture to go further and say that the acceptance of this amendment and the registration of companies when a license is granted subject to the conditions noted above would facilitate the object that the Hon'ble Member has at heart. I think we cannot be too grateful for the last assurance given by the Hon'ble the Finance Member that companies with a total capital of one lakh of rupees will be excluded from the purview of the Bill by executive order. That would, I think, meet the case; also where the unpaid calls which may be called up by any of the companies which are now existing do not exceed one lakh of rupees; various local industries of a minor character would then be saved, and I am sure there would not be hereafter the same objection to the passing of this measure as there would have been if there had been a general embargo on the flotation of all companies. But, my Lord, I think this amendment really would meet the object the Government of India have at heart while safeguarding the industrial interests of the country and for this reason. What do I provide here? Government need not give a license to persons who wish to float a company who do not comply with one of two conditions; firstly, they will have to show that they can advantageously spend the money they propose to raise for the benefit of the company, and, if that condition is fulfilled, I ask that a license should be given and that the other companies should be released from the provisions of the the Act. If the money cannot be advantageously spent by the company during the continuance of the war, either owing to lack of machinery, lack of materials, or owing to other difficulties, then I say that the company must undertake to raise the capital and hand it over to the Government on the condition that the Government should return the capital at a reasonable rate of interest within six months of the war. If the company does not undertake to do this, then the license may be refused. But if either these two conditions are satisfied, I do not see any reasons whatever that Government can urge for refusing the license except the one solitary ground that though the company may usefully spend the capital newly raised, yet the needs of Government in financing the war prevent the flotation of a company or the raising of such capital. Now the question that confronts us in this aspect of the matter is this. Has the capital raised in this country during the last few years been really detrimental to the object which the Government has in view? I find that the money which has been invested in joint-stock Companies between the years 1903-04 to 1913-14 was on an average about £2,000,000, it never exceeded £4,000,000.

"Therefore, the normal rate at which the Indian commercial community has been able to absorb capital from the money-market is between £2 and £4 millions. My Lord, that ought not really to interfere with or hamper the operations of the Government. Then even taking the Savings Bank and Exchange Bank deposits the amount does not exceed more than a further two crores of rupees. Therefore, the sum total of the money which was ordinarily raisable before the war did not exceed about 5 to 6 crores of rupees. For such a paltry sum as that, is it necessary that the Government should take such wide powers as to impair to a certain extent the confidence of the people? Is it likely that, if the confidence of the people be impaired, the average investor would come forward to invest that money in Government securities? If business be carried on as usual, and if there be no such restrictions, I venture to submit that the Government are more likely to draw from the investors the money that they desire than by frightening them and showing them that the conditions are such that they might feel nervous about their position. Now take the example of last year. Last year notwithstanding the fact that there were no restrictions upon the raising of capital, the Government have by their own exertions been able to raise £35 millions. Therefore, the question of company flotation did not stand really in the way of the Government. I therefore submit that the confidence of the people in the Government would be less impaired by this amendment being accepted than if it were to go forth that there are reasons for which a Government would refuse a license notwithstanding the ability of the company to show that it can usefully spend the money upon its own concerns. Then, again, it was hoped that the advent of America into the war and the enormous sums that have been spent in England to help the allied Governments would render this experiment unnecessary.

"My next point is this, and that is an important point. Unless people are encouraged to form companies now for industrial purposes on a very large scale, it would be absolutely impossible to compete with foreign countries immediately the war is over. From the example of Great Britain in allowing the flotation of a company with a capital of 10 millions it is clear that the United Kingdom and every other country is feeling that after the war there will be a tremendous competition; and preparations are already being made in various countries to meet that competition. Under those circumstances, I would respectfully ask, would it be wise to prevent the registration of companies, inviting capital for developing the resources of the country, in order that the people may be able to meet the situation arising after the war is over. It is not an easy thing to float a company; you have to secure share-holders, collect capital and do so many other things; it will take an enormous amount of time, and unless we begin now, I do not think we shall be in time to meet the industrial competition even to the limited extent to which we might perhaps be prepared. On the other hand, is there anything detrimental to the interests of Government by allowing the registration of companies if they are prepared to hand over the money to the Government keeping only such portion of it in their hands as they can usefully spend themselves? I, therefore, submit that under no circumstances should the registration of a company be prohibited if the parties are reasonable enough to guarantee the loaning of their capital to the Government if they cannot spend it themselves. It is from that standpoint that I press this amendment upon the earnest attention of the Hon'ble the Finance Member and the Government. I think we shall not lose anything if there be a statutory guarantee that the Government would not trespass upon the legitimate rights of the public to improve the industries of the country, in safeguarding the interests of the war. Under normal circumstances, it would have been our stern duty to oppose a Bill of this description, but we all feel that it would be wrong on our part to embarrass the Government by taking up an attitude of opposition to Government at the present time. I therefore refrained from making any remarks at the preliminary stage lest I should be construed to set up an agitation, but we find that there is great dissatisfaction in the country, and we shall be failing in our duty if we do not ask the Government to accede to the wishes of the people by relaxing the restrictions in the manner I have indicated."

The Hon'ble Mr. Rangaswamy Ayyangar:—" My Lord, when the Bill was first foreshadowed in the budget speech of the Hon'ble the Finance Member, I sounded a note of alarm. Last year we had no restrictions on the issue of capital, and yet the War Loan far exceeded the careful calculations of the expert financiers, and when only 10 millions had been expected we realised 35 millions and more. No case was made out that the War Loan figure would have been greater had they then introduced such a restriction as the present one to control the withdrawal of capital from the money-market. The necessity for such a Bill this year has not been unquestionably proved. Further, may I respectfully invite the attention of Government to the fact that if the public come to know that the Government is forcing capital by legislation to be diverted to War Loan, there will be much apprehension and little success in the flotation of the loan, in spite of clause 3 of the Bill empowering the Governor General in Council to issue licenses for flotation of special companies. The Bill will certainly go to suppress the formation of new companies that the war may stimulate in India. The Industrial Commission would certainly be against such a Bill, and this Bill evidently has not been referred to them. This Bill contradicts the object that led to the appointment of the Industries Commission which, I take it, is for the promotion of indigenous industries. The capital issued for industrial development would be able to help the war, though indirectly, in a better way than the War Loan itself. If in industrially advanced countries they have enacted such laws the procedure should not be applied in the same way here. I am reminded in this connection of what the late Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt regarded of the ways of the John Company who sought to cripple the weaving industry of India with a view to promote it when it was in its infancy in Manchester. Of course, there is this difference, that the present measure is in critical times and for what are considered to be Imperial necessities. But even without such an Act the rising industrial firms cannot compete with the Government in the matter of loans when the Government pays such a high rate of interest.

12-1 P.M.

" This Bill, my Lord, has been very unfairly received by the public and the press. I do not know if unpaid shares of Nidhis, Funds and those of mutual benefit associations (kuttu chittus) would also be affected by this Bill. If so, it will paralyse trade and everyday economy to a great extent.

" Let me take a few minutes to give an example of a small Railway Company. A line was constructed by the Tanjore District Board and when it was about to be opened, the company that should have supplied rolling-stock pleaded inability to do so. Seeing the difficulties of the District Board a new company was formed and the rolling stock was purchased. We have got the stock ready and to work the line we may require some more capital. It may be said that this special case may be licensed, but we have bitter experience of how some of the English Companies imagine themselves as rivals, and how their influence is used to withhold the license. Our efforts to form companies should be encouraged on principles of economic right and not licensed as a matter of grace. The Bill would be injurious and I appeal to the Council at least to accept the amendment I support the first part of the amendment, though I do not understand the second part of it."

12-9 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" My Lord, when I came to this Council this morning I intended to associate myself with the amendment of my Hon'ble friend. I received a number of telegrams and other communications from a number of people in Assam asking me to urge the deletion of clause 3 (2) of this Bill. But after hearing the remarks of the Hon'ble the Finance Member, I think there are no real apprehensions about the effect of the clause, and I do not desire in any way to support this amendment, in view of the fact specially that this is a war measure."

12-10 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" I think I need not take any further notice of the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Rangaswamy Ayyangar, because he delivered to us his real purpose in the general debate on the Financial Statement. He objected to a War Loan next year altogether, on the ground that it would be counter to the interests of himself and his class. He is, therefore, quite out of Court in dealing with the present Bill except for motives which no other Member of this Council would, I think, support.

I am rather sorry my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sarma, whose attitude is far different from that of the Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar, has not followed the precept of the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda and withdrawn his amendment after he had heard my speech just now.

" I explained the way in which we proposed to work the Bill and I explained that we should give a license, as a matter of course, to small companies whose flotations would not exceed one lakh. But as long as we require licenses, the burden of proof, as is in every other case in which in the interests of the State a license is required, must obviously lie on the applicant. The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma would twist the thing round. He says the burden of proof must lie on the Government. The Government, he says, shall not refuse a license under this section unless it appears clear—clear to whom? to the would-be licensee?—that the capital, or increased capital proposed to be raised cannot be spent by the company advantageously—advantageously to whom? to the Company presumably—during the continuance of the war. A clause like that really means that the Government will be debarred from refusing a license at all. Then he goes on to say 'and unless the company is unwilling to place the funds raised by them and which cannot be so spent at the disposal of the Government as a loan to be returned six months after the war with interest at the current rate.' I explained the other day, in answer to the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg, that I thought the suggestion he then made was a very good one—that when a company wants to make a flotation, it might be a good thing to say, 'yes, make your flotation, but in the meantime you must deposit your funds with us.' But we cannot lay down that as an invariable rule in these times of war and financial stress. If it is necessary to have a license system at all—and I hold it is now absolutely necessary—it is necessary that the final discretion should rest with the Government.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma dwelt on the small amounts of previous flotations in India. Well, Indian capital has been advancing enormously of late, as is shown by the response to our loan last year, and if my Hon'ble friend reads the newspapers outside Madras, as he doubtless does, he will see the way in which big companies in Bombay and Calcutta are proposing to float enterprises to take up crores of rupees. Some of those enterprises may be of such a sound character that, even having regard to war conditions, we would give them licenses. Others may be of a character to which we could not, having regard to the fundamental principle that we must conserve the resources of India as far as possible for the War Loan, give permission to go on with them. They would have to be delayed. My Hon'ble friend mentioned the example of the Home Government in allowing a certain

Development Company to be floated. That is they gave them a license. If we think that the flotation of a company is in present circumstances in the interests of India, we shall certainly not refuse a license.

"I admit that in certain cases the system we propose will inconvenience certain capitalists. We cannot help that. I would remind the Council of a Resolution unanimously carried on the 24th of February 1915, which affirmed the unswerving resolution of Indians to support the honour, dignity and prestige of the Empire, regardless of the sacrifice it may entail on them. Surely my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma does not desire to treat that sacrifice on the basis of a limited liability company—to say the sacrifice shall be very limited indeed. I am sure that he really does not mean that, and I trust that, in view of the explanation I have given of the impossibility of accepting his amendment, he will see his way to withdraw it and let the Bill pass as it stands."

12-15 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"My Lord, there does not seem to be much difference really between the Hon'ble Finance Member and myself. Certainly I do not want it to be understood that any of us are unwilling to do the best that the country can do in order to win the war. And the Hon'ble Finance Member is also equally emphatic in the view that if the company can show that they can raise the money and would hand it over under conditions referred to by the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg, to the Government, there would not be any real objection, unless those companies do mean to spend large portions of the capital which they raise on themselves during the continuance of the war. It comes to that practically. Well on analysis, I think, any large concern would require the use of so much machinery and organisation that if the war should not last long, there would be no chance of the money being usefully spent during the continuance of the war. Therefore the condition I have laid down would be really useful to the Government inasmuch as the company can be used for raising the capital and handing it over to the Government.

"It may be then asked, if there is no difference between us, why should not I withdraw the amendment? There is no question of onus here and nobody has suggested that there should be any resort to a civil Court. The language employed is for the purpose of placing on a statutory basis the intentions which the Government have in granting licenses, and I do not see any reason why the Government should fight shy of that. In practice, I feel sure that the acceptance of the amendment would inspire confidence in the people without really inconveniencing the Government. It is in that view, my Lord, and nothing more that I wish to press the amendment. If I had felt that the Government would be really embarrassed by the acceptance of this amendment or that any military operations or any economic operations would be hindered by its acceptance, I should certainly not have moved this amendment and would have withdrawn it. But feeling that I am not embarrassing the Government, but helping the Government, I still persist in my obstinate attitude, and I hope the Council will be able to accept the amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"My Lord, I move now that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

BUDGET FOR 1918-19.

12-19 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"My Lord, I rise to present the Budget of the Government of India for 1918-19. The preliminary estimates which I laid before the Council on the 1st March have been revised in the light of our latest information. The Financial Secretary's Explanatory Memorandum has also been checked and brought up to date.

[Sir William Meyer.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

" 2. The final figures of the Revised Estimate for 1917-18 and of the Budget Estimate for 1918-19 are given in separate formal statements. The broad results of the revenue account are brought out in the table below in which I have also shown in brackets for convenience of comparison the figures (now superseded) which were given in the corresponding table appearing in paragraph 54 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement.

[In millions of pounds.]

" 3. The more important alterations in our figures occur under the entirely provincial or the 'divided' heads of revenue and expenditure. Thus, owing to the unsatisfactory conditions of the paddy market in Burma the Local Government has had to postpone land revenue collections to a considerable extent with the result that these are now expected to fall short of the previous estimates for the current year by £500,000, of which we anticipate that £400,000 will be realised during the course of next year. This affects both the Imperial and the Provincial estimates in each of the two years. There has been a similar postponement of a smaller amount, namely, £67,000 in Bombay. In the latter province, however, a large increase of £233,000 is now expected in the excise revenue for next year, against which we have allowed proposals made by the Local Government for additional expenditure mainly on education and sanitation. Under purely Imperial heads the largest changes in our estimates are an increase in the Customs revenue of about £76,000 in the current year, and £100,000 in the next year. I need not refer to other alterations as these are of relatively minor importance.

" 4. The net result of the above changes, in so far as the Imperial position is concerned, is to reduce the surplus for 1917-18 by £114,000 and to increase that for next year by £291,000, the surplus for 1918-19 now standing at £2,582,000. Of this latter improvement, however, about £183,000 represents revenue thrown forward from the current year, and £108,000 a real improvement.

" 5. These results would, so far as the ability to provide funds is concerned, permit the fulfilment of the conditional promise I made on the 9th instant with reference to a Resolution by my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Sarma, that if our final Budget figures justified it, we should be prepared to make a supplementary grant of £200,000 for technical and agricultural education. But, as I indicated on that occasion, the sanction of the India Office was also required, and though that has just been received, it has arrived too late to allow of the alteration in figures which the allotment of this sum would require. But I assure the Council that we shall make a supplementary allotment as soon as possible, and thus furnish substantial evidence of the reality which we attach to our new procedure in respect of discussion of the Financial Statement.

" 6. In the case of the provinces there will be a reduction in the surplus for 1917-18 of £418,000, but on the other hand the estimated deficit of £95,000 for 1918-19 will be converted into a surplus of £131,000, there being thus an improvement of £226,000. Concurrently with this conversion of the collective provincial deficit into a surplus, provision has been made for increased provincial expenditure next year to the extent of £313,000, this increase occurring mainly in Bombay where, as already stated, we have allowed the Local Government to apply the anticipated increase of £233,000 in excise receipts next year to beneficent expenditure, including £100,000 on education, £67,000 on sanitation, and a like amount for grants to local bodies for other purposes. We have also allowed them to draw on their provincial balances during the current year to the extent of £30,000 for the last mentioned object. This is a very early fulfilment of the undertaking which I gave in connection with a resolution moved in the Council a short time ago to the effect that if later an improvement occurred in the provincial revenues we would consider very sympathetically the possibility of allowing the provinces to increase their outlay.

"7. Turning to ways and means, recent heavy demand for Treasury Bills in Bombay warrants an increase of £1,333,000 on our previous estimate for 1917-18, involving a corresponding increase in the estimated repayments of the same from fresh bills next year. There has also been an improvement in savings bank deposits, and a falling off in payments on account of foreign money orders. On the other hand, we expect to have to meet during the current year additional military outlay, mainly on stores, to the extent of £660,000; a considerable part of this will probably be recovered later, and the expenditure is meanwhile shown provisionally under the suspense head. As the net result of these and other less important alterations, we now expect that our cash balance in India at the end of the current year will be £16,522,000, or an increase of £553,000 on the figure adopted in the Financial Statement; while our closing balance for next year will stand at £12,273,000, being an increase of £1,153,000, over that previously taken and practically equivalent to the normal closing balance we look to.

"As regards England, the Secretary of State expects that his balance will be larger by £1,745,000 at the end of the current year and next, owing to additional and more prompt recoveries from the War Office and the Admiralty.

"8. This is the last occasion on which I shall address this Council as I shall have relinquished office before it re-assembles at Simla. I desire therefore to reiterate my heartfelt acknowledgment of the generous tribute to my work which fell from the lips of my non-official Colleagues in the general debate on the Financial Statement. Tributes such as these, giving the assurance that I am held to have done good service to India, are an ample recompense for my heavy and anxious labours. And, though I shall presently cease to serve her, my love for India will continue as long as my life lasts. I shall always hope and pray for her welfare, and follow with the keenest interest the developments that the coming years may have in store for her. I shall also follow with sympathetic attention the careers of my friends, official and non-official, with whom I have been associated in the Legislative Council. To those of them whom I shall not see again, I beg now to extend a cordial God-speed, and to wish them, each and all, a full measure of happiness and prosperity in the future."

His Excellency the President:—"I shall trouble the Council with very few words in closing this Session. We have put through some useful legislation which I hope will stand the test of time and prove of value. But the Spring Session is primarily the Financial Session, and I shall devote the greater part of my remarks to that topic. I should however like to draw your attention to a practice which we have inaugurated during our sittings this year, and which I hope to see greatly developed, and that is the practice of official Members taking a larger share in the debates and the proceedings of the Council. 12-28 P.M.

"I cannot but express my regret that this practice had not been adopted before, because it would have obviated some of the patent objections which have been raised to our present system. From the point of view of the Government of India, it is undoubtedly a waste of man-power and brain-capacity that we should place a number of distinguished officials on the Imperial Council and then refuse to avail ourselves of their knowledge and experience in our debates.

[His Excellency the President.] [22ND MARCH, 1918.]

"It is a constant source of irritation to the non-official Members that they are up against a silent phalanx of votes. Much of this soreness would, I feel sure, be removed if non-official Members were able to cross swords with official Members on the floor of the Council Chamber; if they found that they had to deal with men of flesh and blood of like passions with themselves, and not silent voting automata finding their way with machine-like precision and unfailing accuracy into the Government Division Lobby.

"I believe a great advance could be made to improve the present system, but I would remind Hon'ble Members that you cannot alter a practice or a system in a day; that Government must have power to carry its legislative proposals; and inasmuch as legislation is carried by votes, it cannot relinquish its hold on the official vote. But within these limits it is my desire more and more to give the official element a greater part in our deliberations and so give more reality to our proceedings.

"I feel sure that such a change would appeal generally to Hon'ble Members and more particularly to the official Members of the Council.

"I now turn to financial matters.

"Sir William Meyer has explained clearly to the Council the nature of our financial difficulties at the present time, the paramount importance of meeting adequately the calls on our resources which the war entails, and the specific advantages to India of meeting our war contribution as far as possible by loan proceeds in this country. In view, however, of the supreme importance of ensuring that the second Indian War Loan shall be as complete a success as the first, I wish to take the opportunity of saying a few words on the subject to this Council, and through them also to the wider public. The position is briefly that last year India promised to give £100 million or Rs. 150 crores to His Majesty's Government for the cost of the war. Of this amount, we have paid in cash to the Home Government Rs. 52 crores which were subscribed to the loan last year. Against the balance of India's contribution, namely, Rs. 98 crores, she has assumed responsibility for interest charges and repayment of a corresponding amount of the British War Loan. On this we have of course to pay interest in England.

"The advantages to India of paying off this balance as soon as possible and consequently of raising as much as possible by the second War Loan are in simple language as follows :—

(1) We require the money to spend in India in buying for the Empire and the Allies wheat, rice and other foodstuffs, jute, cotton, tea, hides, boots and shoes, tents and also other equipment. The sums so spent will directly benefit the cultivators and other producers in India.

(2) The money will by its application in this way be of the greatest use to His Majesty's Government, since it will be entirely devoted to expenditure necessary for the successful prosecution of the war. This is the simplest way in which I can put a rather complicated transaction. Actually we provide funds in India for the purchase of the above-mentioned commodities and other services and are repaid in London These repayments place the Secretary of State in funds in England, and enable him to make over to His Majesty's Government an amount equivalent to our loan proceeds here, thus extinguishing our liability for British War Loan of a corresponding amount.

(3) The reduction of our liability in this way reduces the amount of interest which we have to pay in England: interest will instead be paid in India to those who subscribe to the new War Loan. By this statement I am simply putting in popular language the well-recognised economic advantage of a country holding its own debt.

[22ND MARCH, 1918.] [His Excellency the President.]

(4) There is yet a further reason why it is highly desirable that we should obtain by the loan all the money that we can. More than one Hon'ble Member referred, during the course of the discussion on the Financial Statement, to the possible evils of currency inflation and to the large additions to the currency of the country which have been made in the last two years. Sir William Meyer was able to show that the additions to our currency had been in the circumstances necessary, and that a much larger contributory factor to the rise in prices was the enhanced world demand for essential products. But as my Hon'ble Colleague also indicated, such effect in this direction as might be due to increased currency issues might be reduced by the Government's drawing money back into its coffers by additional taxation or otherwise. Our reasons for not imposing additional taxation on the present occasion are briefly that we anticipate a considerable surplus next year, and that our difficulty arises not because our revenues do not cover our expenditure, but from the fact that, owing to causes over which we have and can have no control, a very large amount of our money has been transferred to England, and that we cannot at the present time bring this back and make it available for expenditure in India. Any sums which we could reasonably hope to raise by additional taxation would be relatively insignificant as compared with the huge abnormal payments which we have at the present time to make in this country, and the imposition of such taxation would in all probability affect our loan receipts to an extent out of all proportion to the proceeds of the taxation. To those who say that we are not helping to the utmost, I would reply that we are helping to the utmost of our ability. We believe that the most effective method of giving our help and of securing the object in view is that which we are adopting. It is, however, important to ensure that the Government shall receive back in the form of subscriptions to its loans as large a proportion as possible of the sums which it spends, since such receipts obviate the necessity of putting additional notes and rupees into circulation. It is, I think, evident that for every rupee subscribed to the loan, we shall be able to avoid the coining of a new rupee or the issue of an additional one-rupee note that would otherwise be necessary. Each rupee subscribed will thus either reduce the amount of new silver that we have to purchase, or else help to strengthen the metallic proportion of our Paper Currency Reserve.

"For all these reasons I confidently trust that India will once more rise to the occasion and equal, if not surpass, her previous effort. I feel too that I can look to Hon'ble Members of this Council for their whole-hearted help in our loan campaign. We are asking Local Governments, as on the last occasion, for their co-operation, and are suggesting to them the formation of unofficial propagandist committees on the lines of those which did such good work in connection with our first War Loan. The co-ordinated work of such committees can, however, very valuably be supplemented by volunteer propagandist work outside. As I said last year, we want propagandist work and the more unofficial that work, the more satisfactory will be its results. The persuasive efforts of Members of this Council will, I am sure, not in any sense be open to any possible objection on the ground of the employment of undue pressure to constrain unwilling people to subscribe to the loan. I fully agree with what has been said in this Council on that subject. We do not want compulsion at all, and, as I think Sir William Meyer added, it almost certainly in the long run does us more harm than good.

"In the debate which took place in this Council on March 8th, Hon'ble Members without exception paid their tribute to the services of Sir William Meyer and the manner in which he had surmounted the difficulties and financial problems with which he has been faced during these past years of war. I should like to take this opportunity of associating myself to the full with that tribute. I can only speak of men as I find them, and I say unhesitatingly, and I am sure my Colleagues will bear me out, that there is no man who has spent himself more freely in the cause of the Empire during these years than has Sir William Meyer. I sometimes think that the lucidity and simplicity with which he has presented his facts to us may have led to some failure to appreciate the difficulties underlying the problems with which he has been confronted. Sir William Meyer has always been ready to find funds for purposes which the military authorities have declared to be necessary for the prosecution of the war and, with the ever increasing scale of military outlay which it has been necessary to meet, there has never been any hesitation or reluctance on the part of Sir William in discharging the paramount duty of financing military demands to the full. In addition to his financial work, he has taken on his shoulders the Chairmanship of the Recruiting Board; he has given us invaluable help on the Defence Committee; and his labours in the ordinary work of the Government of India in the Executive Council have been assiduous and ungrudging. Let me remind the general public of one more thing. Sir William Meyer is responsible for presenting his budget proposals to the Governor General in Council, but when once they have been accepted, then they become the proposals of the Government as a whole for which we must take responsibility equally with the Finance Member. Sir William Meyer has been at times singled out for attack. I think I may say that we, his Colleagues, deeply resent this unfairness. No man in these grave times will dare to claim immunity from criticism, but equally I venture to say that all men who bear heavy responsibility have a right to ask that criticism should be tempered by charitableness.

"Let me now bid Hon'ble Members, who come from the ends of India, good-bye. You have learned during these past two months some of our difficulties. The war is still with us, and while it continues, we can hope for no respite from those difficulties But you know them and their causes, and I am confident that you will instruct your fellow-countrymen as to their why and wherefore. We have no cause for despondency. We know that if we are true to ourselves, victory lies ahead of us, but in the meantime until its dawn appears, there are the discomforts and inconveniences which are inseparable from war. You can teach the people better than we that these are only for a time and will vanish when sure and certain victory crowns our arms. It is a privilege for us that we live in these times; that, in however humble a way, each one of us can play his part in the great struggle of right against wrong. We have then all of us a special call to service at this moment, and I bid you who are going from here to scatter throughout India godspeed in this great service for your Sovereign and your country."

The Council adjourned sine die.

A. P. MUDDIMAN,

Secretary to the Government of India,

APPENDIX B.

[Referred to in Answer to Question No. 17.]

ABSTRACT OF OPINIONS RECEIVED FROM LOCAL GOVERNMENTS ON THE QUESTION OF A CONSCIENCE CLAUSE IN EDUCATIONAL CODES.

1. The following questions were laid before local Governments for opinion :—

(i) Is the absence of a conscience clause defensible on the principle of non-interference with the religious instruction imparted in aided schools and in view of the fact that the same treatment is accorded to all denominations ; or would the inclusion of the clause be more congruous with a principle of strict religious neutrality ?

(ii) In cases where it is found that Government could with the grant it gives to an aided school which imparts compulsory religious instruction and with the fees* the school receives, maintain as good an institution, might the conscience clause be insisted upon as an alternative to the establishment of a purely secular school ?

* After paying due regard to the capital expenditure incurred and the staff of the school.

(iii) In single school areas may a conscience clause be insisted upon or the opening of a new school encouraged as an alternative ? Where schools of different religions exist in a single area is there any adequate reason for insistence on a conscience clause ?

In respect of the above questions :—

(i) The United Provinces and Central Provinces consider that the absence of the clause is defensible on the principle of non-interference with the religious instruction imparted in schools. Punjab, Bihar and Orissa and Assam, to a certain extent, think its absence a departure from strict religious neutrality. The last-named province puts forward the proposal that neither aid nor recognition can be consistently afforded to any institution which Government would be debarred by their principle of strict religious neutrality from maintaining as a State institution.

(ii) Under certain circumstances which do not apply in that province, the Punjab agree with the suggestion. Burma doubt whether institutions of the same size as the Mission schools could be managed by public or secular agency with as little cost to public revenues as they are at present managed by the Missions. Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces agree with the suggestion, but point out that its application will be limited. The conditions which this consideration pre-supposes do not exist in Assam, and the local Administration says that even when a Mission institution is maintained entirely by fees and grants-in-aid Government could not maintain the same institution on a similar measure of efficiency at anything like the same cost.

(iii) In the United Provinces there is no district in which a Christian Mission holds the monopoly of education. No difficulties have arisen in respect of single school areas in the Punjab. In Burma the difficulties which occur in such areas frequently yield to the exercise of a certain amount of tact, but at times the locality is either compelled to maintain two schools, when one would be sufficient, or to attend religious instruction. In Bihar and Orissa the principle of a conscience clause in single school areas is applied in primary schools with the consent of the missionaries, and if the principle were enforced further it would apply only to one college and a few middle schools. In the Central Provinces there are practically no areas in which primary education is given only by Mission schools. So far as secondary education is concerned, the Chief Commissioner deprecates the introduction of a conscience clause in single school areas unless it is introduced in all aided schools. Assam agree with the suggestion mentioned by the Government of India.

2. The Government of India further asked for information on the following points :—

(a) How far is there a genuine demand for a conscience clause on the part of —

(i) Parents who object to their children being taught an alien faith ?

NOTE.—As the abstract prepared by the Government of India is not accepted by the Government of Bombay as an accurate representation of their opinions, reference to their views has been omitted from it and there has not been time to prepare a fresh abstract in consultation with them.

All provinces, including Madras, say that there is no genuine demand at present.

(ii) Indians who look upon its absence as a loss of national self-respect?

In Madras the demand is only by a few and in the United Provinces by the Indian press and by publicists who upbraid parents for what they term their slavish submission. In the other provinces there is no genuine demand and Bihar and Orissa and Assam say that there is no indication to show that the absence of the clause is considered a loss of national self-respect.

(b) What is the nature, generally speaking, of the religious instruction imparted?

(i) To what extent is there a system of universal prayer?

Generally speaking, prayer forms a part of the day's proceedings in Mission schools throughout the country.

(ii) How far do the authorities insist on a compulsory attendance of pupils at religious instruction?

In Madras, the United Provinces, Punjab, Bihar and Orissa, the North-West Frontier Province and Delhi attendance is compulsory. In the Central Provinces attendance is compulsory in schools other than Roman Catholic and in Roman Catholic schools only Christian pupils are expected to attend. In Burma pupils are not usually compelled to receive religious instruction. In Assam instruction is accepted as a part of the ordinary school curriculum and students attend as a matter of course.

(iii) What is the nature of the religious instruction given, other than prayer? Could the instruction imparted be termed definitely religious, or is it a system of moral instruction based on the Bible?

In all provinces except Bengal, which furnishes no information, and Coorg, where no such instruction is given except in one orphanage where the pupils are all Christians, the instruction is more or less definitely religious.

(iv) To what extent do parents value a system of religious training, even if imparted in the light of an alien faith?

In Madras, and the Central Provinces the attitude of the majority of parents is one of indifference. In the United Provinces it does not appear to be considered objectionable. In the Punjab it is appreciated even if imparted in the light of an alien faith. In Bihar and Orissa it is valued but Muhammadans dislike and attach little value to it if imparted on Christian lines. Hindus admit that some knowledge of the tenets of the Christian faith is desirable, but value is mainly attached to the moral atmosphere of mission schools. In Burma religious training is highly appreciated by parents, but they consider that it loses all its value if imparted in the light of an alien faith. In Assam the general feeling is that the smattering of religious instruction given by mission schools in Christian guise is better than no religious instruction at all. In the North-West Frontier Province Muhammadans disapprove of a purely secular form of instruction and the rapid increase in the number of aided Islamia schools providing facilities for Muhammadan parents to have their children educated in the tenets of their own faith bears this out. In Delhi apparently some value is attached to religious instruction, but the Chief Commissioner thinks that what is really valued in mission schools is their insistence on discipline, attention to regularity of conduct and their impartiality.

(c) Should a conscience clause be introduced, what would probably be the attitude of the missionaries?

(i) Would any of them close their institutions?

(ii) Would any of them relinquish their grants and continue to maintain their institutions on a purely private basis?

Practically all provinces (Bengal have not replied on this point) anticipate considerable opposition from missionary bodies. Madras, Burma and the Central Provinces do not think that many missions would stop their general educational work as a result of a conscience clause. Madras say that some may relinquish their grants but explain that no college or secondary school in that Presidency can be maintained on a purely private basis. The United Provinces and Bihar and Orissa think that the missionaries would abandon a number of institutions and concentrate all their resources on a few schools or colleges which they could finance without Government assistance. Punjab say that many mission schools would be closed and the remainder would lose in efficiency. Assam think that there would be no rapid closing down of schools, but that mission assistance on its present liberal lines would not continue for long. The Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, thinks it unlikely that the Church Missionary Society would continue to maintain its schools. The Chief Commissioner, Delhi, is of opinion that financial support from England and America would be largely withdrawn if a conscience clause is introduced and would be devoted either to missionary enterprise pure and simple or to hospital work. Such Governments as have referred to the question whether schools maintained by missions on a purely private basis would constitute an undesirable element, have replied in the negative.

3. On the general question all Provincial Governments, except Assam and the Central Provinces, who are by no means entirely in favour of it, deprecate the proposal being accepted, at the present time at any rate. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bihar and Orissa deprecates any definite policy either in favour of or against a conscience clause being laid down for the whole of India and suggests that if it is considered necessary to issue any orders they should merely give a general permission to make the proposed change and leave it to each local Government and Administration to take action if and when it is considered expedient to do so.

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777-79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

Book-keeping (mercantile)	100	50
Geometry. (Euclid Books I and II) (a)	50	25
Essay writing (b)	100	50
TOTAL	750	...
Total required for passing	...	500

(a) Candidates will be expected to be familiar with all the propositions in the above books, and will also be expected to solve simple riders.

(b) Two or three simple subjects will as a rule be given, from which a candidate may choose one only. He should endeavour to excel in good sense, not in quantity. The standard is roughly equivalent to Matriculation or School Final.

1. The examination is held annually at the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, on the first Monday in June. The examination will be conducted, either at the College, or by an Accountant-General (including the Government Engineer of Railway Accounts) in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, Assam and Burma only. The examination will be ipso facto vitiated, if it be not held (begun and completed) on the dates fixed; but the officer who will conduct the examination may make his own arrangements with the candidates in regard to the place and hour of examination.

Candidates will not be examined in any of the Calcutta offices.

A candidate already in permanent Government employ * may be allowed to compete in the examination, even if he is more than 25 years of age, and may be appointed to an accountantship, if he passes it; but if he is not already in pensionable service, he will be eligible only for appointment to the non-pensionable establishment on State Railways.

* This term includes employment under Local Boards and foreign bodies, if such is pensionable by the British Government.

2. The candidate should apply to an Accountant-General not later than 30 days previous to the date fixed for the examination and obtain his consent to conduct the examination if examination at the College is not convenient. The application must bear the address of the candidate, must be accompanied by a fee of Rs. 10 and the following certificates and registration form duly filled in, and must be forwarded by him not direct to the Principal, but through the Accountant-General.

Certificates may be submitted in original, or true copies attested by an officer of the Engineer or Accounts Branch, but they will not be returned—

(1) A certificate of good character signed by applicant's immediate official superior, or by the instructor under whom he has been educated or by some other superior under whom he may have been brought up or employed or to whom he may be well known. (This certificate must have special reference to the two years immediately preceding the application.)

(2) A certificate of age, baptismal or of birth (not required, if the candidate is already in permanent Government employ).

(3) A certificate that the application is in the candidate's hand-writing.

NOTE A.—A candidate already in Government service should, in like manner, submit his application through his immediate official superior to an Accountant-General (including Government Examiner of Railway Accounts, qualified to hold the particular examination and should state whether he desires to be examined at the office of the Accountant-General concerned or at the College.

NOTE B.—The usual examination centres are (1) the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, (2) Chittagong, (3) Ranchi, (4) The Bihar School of Engineering, Patna, (5) Rangoon, (6) Shillong, and (7) Simla for candidates in the Government of India offices, no others will be admitted at Simla.

(4) Registration statement containing the following information :—

(a) Name in full.

(b) Father's name.

(c) Nationality or class, i. e., European, Anglo-Indian or Indian, of candidate ; and, if Indian, caste or tribe.

(d) Date of birth.

(e) Place of birth.

(f) Present address.

(g) Examinations passed.

(h) Thumb mark of candidate, left hand, to be made in the presence of a responsible person who knows candidate.

(k) Signature and address of above-mentioned witness.

It will rest with the Accountant-General (including Government Examiner of Railway Accounts) to whom the candidate submits his application, to decide on a consideration of the certificates submitted, whether the candidate should be allowed to appear for the examination, or whether his application should be rejected. The Accountant-General or the other officers referred to, will then forward to the Principal, for registration, the names of the accepted candidates, together with their registration statements, which should be signed by the Accountant-General. The registration statement should be carefully preserved by the Principal. The names of these candidates should be entered in a statement showing their ages and their addresses, and also showing where each candidate is to be examined, whether at the College or at the office of the Accountant-General. This statement, together with the fees, should be transmitted to the Principal not later than 15 days after the dates fixed in paragraph 2 for the submission of applications of candidates.

3. Examination papers that are issued for examination need not be returned.

4. Each examination is complete in itself. A candidate who has failed in an examination and presents himself for examination on a subsequent occasion, must undergo the full examination and furnish fresh a fee and certificates.

5. If from any cause a candidate fails to appear for the Examination, the fee paid will not be refunded.

6. It must be distinctly understood that the passing of this examination does not give any claim to an appointment, and that, in making appointments, preference will be given to qualified persons who are already employed in the department.

7. Passed candidates should apply, not to the Principal of the College nor to the Comptroller-General, but direct to the Accountant-General or Government Examiner of Railway Accounts in the province or railway under whom they may desire to be employed.

8. The Civil Engineering College acts solely as an examining body in reference to admission to the 4th grade of Accountants, Public Works Department.

9. Candidates for the 4th grade Accountantship Examination, who are not Government servants and over 25 years of age, are allowed to appear at the examination of the Sibpur College centre only, but even if successful, they are debarred from employment in the service of Government, and their names will be excluded from the list of passed candidates which is furnished to the Comptroller and Auditor-General.

10. Candidates over 25 years of age not in Government employ should apply in writing to the Principal of the Civil Engineering College not later than 30 days previous to the examination ; the application to be accompanied by a Treasury receipt for Rs. 10, and the registration statement prescribed in rule 2 (4).

NOTE (1).—The question papers of previous years are not published separately. Those of the preceding year are printed in the Civil Engineering College Calendar— price, annas 12 and annas 3 postage, which must be prepaid.

NOTE (2).—Candidates for the examination are not provided with accommodation in the College barracks, but arrangements for their meals can be made on payment in advance of annas 4 per meal to the Assistant Superintendent of the Mess.

NOTE (3).—As for qualifications for admission to the examinations, candidates should refer the matter to the Accountant-General of their province.

NOTE (4).—There are no classes at the Sibpur College for teaching Book-keeping.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

SPEECH OF THE HONOURABLE FINANCE MEMBER PRESENTING THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1918-19.

Speech of the Honourable Finance Member

INTRODUCING THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1918-19.

Introductory.

MY LORD,

I rise to present the Financial Statement for 1918-19, and as usual there will be no debate to-day. As regards subsequent discussion we are this year, as Your Excellency has already informed the Council at the opening of the session, introducing a modification in previous procedure which will, I think, be appreciated. We propose, that is, before dealing with particular portions of the estimates to have a general debate on the Financial Statement as a whole, which will enable Members to discuss and criticise to more effect than in the debate that has hitherto taken place on the final Budget, and will give greater reality to subsequent Resolutions which are admissible with reference to loan or taxation proposals and grants to Local Governments, or in the later compartment stage. This discussion will commence on the 8th March and we shall subsequently proceed to the stages at which specific Resolutions will be admissible.

The Budget in its final form, with such alterations in the Financial Statement as may be required by later information or suggested by the discussions in Council, will be presented on the 22nd March. After that there will be no further discussion, the lifeless Budget debate of previous years being superseded by the general discussion on the Financial Statement above referred to, which, as I have said, will enable criticisms to be put forward at a time when our proposals are in a less rigid state.

2. We must again, unfortunately, assume that the war will continue throughout the coming year. That means a continuance, in probably aggravated form, of some of the special problems which I shall presently have to describe to the Council; and as I have said on previous occasions the constantly changing circumstances of the war materially add to our difficulties in estimating. We must go cautiously, and when the results turn out better than we anticipated, it is a matter for congratulation and not for criticism.

3. The general situation I have now to describe is in many ways similar to that outlined in my speech last year. The revenue position is again excellent. Our Railway receipts have once more broken the record, and far exceeded the figure estimated in the current year's Budget. The result is that we are able to face with equanimity a considerable increase in military charges. Our financial embarrassments, as I shall presently show, are mainly due to ways and means questions. We have had to incur here on behalf of His Majesty's Government constantly increasing expenditure which is repaid to the Secretary of State at home. Simultaneously there is serious and growing demand on our resources to finance the shipment of materials required for the prosecution of the war, and of the food-stuffs which the Allies and many portions of the Empire are drawing from India. The account which I shall give later on of the calls which we have had to meet will be a sufficient indication of the anxieties which the year now coming to a close has brought with it. To meet these demands we have had to ask the trading and financial community to submit to restrictions on their operations, and to share to some extent in the general financial burden. I fully recognise and acknowledge the spirit of co-operation with which these restrictions have been accepted.

But I may quite legitimately claim that we on our part have at all times taken our full share in responding to the calls in question. We have been materially assisted in this endeavour to meet our responsibilities by the continued expansion in our currency note circulation, by the gratifying results which have been achieved by the War Loan, by the substantial success of our issue of post office cash certificates, and, latterly, by the material addition to our resources which we have received through the sales of Treasury Bills.

4. Our satisfactory revenue position is largely due to favourable agricultural conditions. The south-west monsoon of the current year was exceptionally bountiful and prolonged, and such damage as has been sustained by crops, as regards cotton for instance in some provinces, has been due not to deficiency of rainfall but to excess. The recent winter rains have been defective in the north and centre of India, but, speaking generally, the copious south-west monsoon has rendered this deficiency far less serious than would otherwise have been the case. I may add that the area under wheat, which shows an increase of 3 per cent. over the area finally reported last year, is the highest on record.

5. Trade conditions have on the whole been very satisfactory, in spite of the shackles placed upon them by difficulties in respect of railway transport and ocean and coasting freight, and the restrictions which military and political considerations have required us to impose on a variety of imports and exports. The total volume of the private sea-borne trade in 1916-17 was much the same as in 1915-16, though, as a consequence of the rise in prices, the recorded value shows an excess of about £40 million, of which one-third occurred under imports and two-thirds under exports. The excess of exports over imports reached the record figure of £54 million as against £40 million in 1915-16. The financing of this large excess at a time when the ordinary adjusting method of imports of specie on private account is precluded has been, and remains, one of the principal problems which we and the commercial community have had to face.

6. The current year, so far as this can be gauged from the figures of the first nine months, shows little variation from its predecessor. The exports and imports of merchandise show a balance of £38 million in favour of India—reduced to £24 million by private imports of gold, which, however, as I shall shortly explain, have been acquired by Government. Practically the whole of these gold imports have come to us from Japan and America, in liquidation of payments due from these countries for purchases of our products which they have not been able to adjust through exports of merchandise to India.

Speaking roughly, of £108 million of exports in the first nine months of this year—grain, pulse and flour represent £27 million ; raw and manufactured cotton £25 million ; raw and manufactured jute £21 million ; and tea and tanned hides between them £10 million. Over half our imports represent yarns and cotton goods, and sugar.

The available results of this year's trade operations have thus disproved the gloomy prophecies made in some quarters as to the prejudicial effect on trade of the restrictions which, for the reasons explained in my speech last year, we found ourselves compelled, in view of the larger interests involved, to impose on the Secretary of State's Council drawings. Similarly, there is nothing in the trade statistics to support analogous apprehensions that the raising of exchange in August last would re-act on our export trade. As I have said on previous occasions, these factors are of minor importance compared with the difficulties of obtaining freight, and cannot affect the demand for our produce and manufactures so long as war conditions secure these against the competition which India would ordinarily meet with in the world's markets.

Revised Estimate for 1917-18. Current Revenue and Expenditure.

7. The general position is brought out in the following table, which compares the current year's Budget and the Revised Estimate now put forward :—

[In millions of pounds.]

	Budget, 1917-18.			Revised, 1917-18.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.
Revenue	66·420	32·451	98·871	76·677	33·724	110·401
Expenditure . . .	66·284	32·549	98·833	70·852	31·468	102·320
Surplus (+) or deficit (—) .	+·136	—·098	+·038	+5·825	+2·256	+8·081

Revenue and Expenditure—Imperial.

8. As regards Imperial transactions, it will be observed that we are over £10 million better under revenue, while our expenditure has increased by about £4½ million, leading as a result to a surplus of £5·8 million against £136,000 estimated in the Budget.

9. Nearly half of the total increase in Revenue is due to Railways, which have once more broken the record in respect of receipts, in spite of the hampering of our sea-borne trade by scarcity of freight and other war restrictions, difficulties in respect of coal, continued deterioration (owing to lack of renewal facilities) of permanent-way and rolling-stock, and the pulling up of some lines to provide railway material for Mesopotamia. The following table compares the results as anticipated in the Budget with those now forecasted, and brings in for purposes of comparison the actuals for 1916-17 :—

[In millions of pounds.]

	1916-17.	Budget Estimate, 1917-18.	Revised Estimate, 1917-18.
Gross receipts	41·8	41·3*	45·5
Working expenses, including payments of surplus profits to Railway Companies	20·7	21·7	21·7
Net receipts	21·1	19·6*	23·8
Add—Receipts from Subsidised Companies and miscellaneous receipts in England.	0·2	0·1	0·2
Total receipts	21·3	19·7*	24·0
Deduct—Interest charges and some miscellaneous expenditure.	13·8	14·1	13·9
Net profit on Railways	7·5	5·6*	10·1

In framing the current year's Budget we allowed for a slight decrease under gross receipts as compared with the, at that time, record figures of 1916-17, and added to the working expenses in order to cope, as far as the circumstances of the war permitted us, with the demands under renewals caused by the heavy work imposed on our lines and rolling-stock. The very favourable agricultural conditions which India has enjoyed have more than counterbalanced the prima facie unfavourable factors referred to above, with the result that we have a large expansion in gross receipts; and as regards net profits, an excess over the Budget of £4·5 million.

10. We have also a considerable increase under gain by Exchange, which is mainly due to the fact that in August last the Secretary of State raised his rates for Council Bills to 1*s*. 5*d*. per rupee in the case of immediate telegraphic transfers, and 1*s*. $4\frac{29}{32}$d. in the case of other Council drafts. Before this, too, the figures had been 1*s*. 4¼*d*. and 1*s* $4\frac{5}{32}$d. respectively, i.e., in excess of the normal 1*s*. 4*d*. we take for adjusting our rupee transactions in sterling.

On the other hand we have sustained actual loss on some of our rupee coinage by reason of high silver prices, and it has been decided to take this loss against our exchange gain and not to debit it to the Gold Standard Reserve, which was not intended to deal with a situation in which the bullion value of the rupee exceeded its value on coinage : allowing for this our total net gain under this head amounts to £1 million.

11. Under Salt we have an increase of nearly £1½ million,† due to large advance payments in Northern India to secure priority of issue from the stocks there. In November last these indents had so accumulated that it was estimated that it would take more than a year to clear them off, and accordingly the receipt of further indents was stopped, a measure which will be reflected in a reduction of revenue in 1918-19.

* These figures are less than those taken in the Budget by £500,000, the sum estimated as the proceeds of the small surcharge we levied this year on railway goods traffic. This surcharge was subsequently treated as a tax, and the proceeds brought to account under Head XXV—Miscellaneous. Consequently, for purposes of comparison, it is omitted here.

† I give round figures throughout.

12. Under Customs we have an increase of over £1·7 million, due mainly to higher prices which affect our ad valorem duties. The increase is most marked under cotton piece-goods (£810,000), while tobacco, silver bullion, sugar, articles of food and drink and miscellaneous manufactured articles are also appreciably better. We have likewise increases of £150,000 under excise duty on cotton manufactures, and £120,000 under the export duty on rice.

13. Other heads of revenue which show material increase are :—

(1) Posts and Telegraphs.—£150,000, owing to favourable agricultural and trade conditions.

(2) Mint.—£390,000, due mainly to seigniorage charges on new rupee coinage, to cover the cost of Mint establishments and other coinage expenses.

(3) Interest.—£150,000, due mainly to temporary investment of the Secretary of State's large cash balances, and to fresh investments made on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve.

In the Revised Estimate for 1916-17 and in the Budget for the current year we set aside, in all, £600,000 of the additional interest derived from our expanded Paper Currency Reserve investments for a Paper Currency Reserve Depreciation Fund, intended to make good the difference between the original purchase price of our consols holding in the Paper Currency Reserve and its value at current prices—vide paragraphs 12 and 53 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement. The current year's Budget provision for this purpose amounted to £200,000: we now increase this to £450,000, which at present prices will raise the Depreciation Fund to the full limit required.

(4) Income-Tax proper.—£910,000, due to larger profits in various trades as a result of war conditions—of which £550,000 occurs under the Income tax head itself, while we realise £360,000 by special payments from the provinces. Income tax is a divided head, the proceeds of which are normally shared in equal proportions between Imperial and Provincial. But in order to obtain for the Government of India the full advantage of the increase in taxation imposed for Imperial purposes in 1916-17, the provinces have, as explained in paragraph 59 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement for that year, to pay to us what would normally have been their share of the proceeds of the additional taxation in question.

Against this, however, we have to set off a slight decrease of £70,000 under Super-tax, the receipts from which we estimated in the Budget at about £1⅓ million. This figure had to be taken very roughly, and it is satisfactory that it has been so closely worked up to.

(5) Miscellaneous.—£330,000, which includes £150,000 additional receipts in respect of the railway freight tax imposed this year (vide foot-note to paragraph 9), i.e., the yield of the tax is now estimated at £650,000 instead of £½ million.

(6) Excise.—£180,000, owing to favourable agricultural conditions. The bulk of the increase under this head falls, however, to the provinces, and the above figure represents the Imperial share only.

14. The only revenue item which shows any considerable decrease is Opium (£320,000), owing to the fact that we were not able, without going below the upset price we had fixed, to dispose of as much as we anticipated at some of our monthly sales in Calcutta—by reason of freight and exchange difficulties, and the dealers having considerable stocks in hand. The loss would have been heavier but for some counterbalancing increase owing to additional supplies to the Straits Settlements Government.

15. The increase under Expenditure (£4·6 million) occurs chiefly under Military charges. The total net military expenditure for the current year was placed in the Budget at £25·9 million, including a reserve of about £700,000 to meet unforeseen charges. It is now estimated to amount to £28·8 million—an excess, that is, of £2·9 million. The increase over specific provision, which is due to war preparations and requirements, amounts therefore to £3·6 million and occurs mainly under the following items :—

(a)	Additional outlay on rifles and ammunition	£900,000
(b)	Grant of increased pay to British troops, following on the measures lately adopted by the Home Government . . .	£520,000
(c)	Larger expenditure on port defences, representing mainly the cost of mine-sweeping	£470,000
(d)	Increased expenditure on guns, machine gun squadrons and mechanical transport	£200,000
(e)	Increased railway charges in connection with larger movement of troops and stores	£140,000
(f)	Larger outlay on military works including frontier roads and hospital buildings	£710,000
(g)	Frontier operations, mainly connected with the Mahsud Expedition	£140,000
(h)	Formation of the Indian Munitions Board	£140,000

16. Under Political we have likewise an increase of expenditure on the South Persia Rifles, a corps raised to assist the Persian Government in maintaining order in tracts in which British interests are specially concerned with reference to present war conditions. While such conditions prevail, the cost of this corps is borne by ourselves and His Majesty's Government in equal proportions. It is now estimated that our moiety will amount to £900,000 for 1917-18, including £210,000 of expenditure which really belongs to 1916-17, but will be adjusted in the current year's accounts. Against this, however, we have a Budget provision of £300,000, thus reducing the real excess to £600,000. On the other hand, there is a saving on other political expenditure in Persia which reduces the total excess under this head to £440,000.

17. The only other material increases over the Budget are :—

(1) Interest on debt.—£690,000, due to provision for discount on our Treasury Bills. When we issue ordinary loans at a discount, the accounts procedure is to credit the receipts at par value and to show discount as an interest charge. We follow the same procedure in regard to Treasury Bills.

As regards outlay in connection with our war contribution of £100 million to His Majesty's Government, we set aside £6 million for recurring charges, in respect of this amount, including (a) interest on money raised by loan in India and made over to His Majesty's Government, (b) interest on the balance to be taken over in the shape of Home war debt; and (c) sinking fund provision. I explained in paragraph 58 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement that we were provisionally debiting this amount to the head Interest, and on further consideration it has been decided to maintain this allocation. The fact that our war loan receipts in India have been so much larger than we anticipated does not affect the total here, since it involves a counter decrease in the Home war debt taken over and the interest thereon.

(2) Miscellaneous.—£520,000, the chief item being £400,000 on account of stores lost in transit between England and India.

18. We thus, as I have already said, obtain an Imperial surplus of £5·8 million against £136,000 taken in the Budget. This satisfactory result is due in the main to the favourable agricultural conditions with which we have been blessed, and their results as reflected in the still further advance of Railway earnings. Our betterment here, together with the improved Provincial balances to which I shall refer directly, has been of material assistance to us in dealing with the very difficult situation we have had to cope with in respect of ways and means transactions.

Revenue and Expenditure—Provincial.

19. We estimated in the Budget that the provinces, in the aggregate, would obtain a revenue of £32·4 million and spend £32·5 million, leaving a deficit of about £100,000, which would be made up from their balances. The present figures indicate a revenue of £33·7 million and an expenditure of £31·4 million, thus leading to an aggregate Provincial surplus of about £2·3 million.

The improvement under revenue, which is most marked in Bombay, the United Provinces, the Punjab and Bengal, occurs mainly under Excise (£540,000) and Forests (£400,000). There is also a nominal increase of £470,000 under Income Tax; but that is largely set off, as indicated in paragraph 13 (4), by a payment to the Government of India under the head Transfers between Imperial and Provincial.

The decrease of about £1 million under expenditure, which is largest in the Punjab, Bombay and Bengal, is due to anticipated lapses in Budget grants, mainly in respect of civil works, education, police, and the profits from the wheat purchase scheme of 1915 allotted for outlay on agricultural objects.

The aggregate Provincial surplus goes, of course, into our balances, to the credit of the provinces concerned.

Borrowing in 1917-18.

War loan operations.

20. Before going on to our ways and means transactions, I should like to say something about our borrowing operations in the current year.

Our net borrowing at Home is a minus quantity as, while raising no fresh money there, we have paid off £2·1 million in the shape of India Bonds and Railway Debentures falling due.

The War Loan we floated in India in various shapes was, as announced prior to its flotation, intended to be made over to His Majesty's Government for the purposes of the war, and to form part of India's total war contribution of £100 million which was offered with such general approval. The balance of the said £100 million was to be defrayed by our taking over a portion of the previously existing Home War debt.

21. Having regard to the anticipations of my expert advisers and the necessity for caution, I was unable, in connection with the current year's Budget, to estimate the total amount of the War Loan at more than £10 million, though I expressed the hope that this might be materially exceeded. That hope has been justified to an extent far beyond the anticipations of the most sanguine expert, as will be seen from the figures below, which are in millions of pounds.

Main Loan	26·6
Postal Section	2·9
Cash Certificates	6·6
Total	36·1

The figures under the main loan and its postal section represent actuals, payments having been closed on the 15th October, and they include, under the main loan, £4 million actually received in March 1917 (our loan, it will be remembered, started on the 15th of that month) and a little over £1 million allowed to be tendered in England, on certain special conditions, in the shape of Home Treasury Bills, which were exchanged for allotments in the Indian War Loan. The cash certificates, which were introduced as a permanent measure, continue to yield money. The actual receipts up to the end of January amounted to £6,400,000, and we estimate that £200,000 more will have been received in the last two months of the year.

This splendid response to our loan is due in great measure to the patriotic propagandist work of Provincial and District War Loan Committees working under the auspices of the Heads of Provincial Governments, as also to the cordial co-operation of the Presidency Banks, especially those of Bengal and Bombay. The Bank of Bengal made special arrangements for advancing money, to be repaid in gradual instalments, to persons who wished to subscribe to the loan but had not funds immediately available. The Government also assisted its officers in this respect by a scheme under which these were enabled to subscribe in ten monthly instalments to be deducted from their pay—a scheme which was supplemented by the Presidency Banks in regard to officers who wished to spread their payments over a longer period.

22. The surprising response to the loan had, however, one disadvantage. The Public Debt Office was absolutely overwhelmed by the volume of the work suddenly thrown upon it, and in spite of the utmost exertions of the Bank of Bengal, which manages this office, and whose staff had previously been depleted by a number of its officers going to military service, there was considerable delay in the issue of scrip. I may say that steps have been taken to prevent any such complaint in respect of next year's loan by simplifying and decentralizing arrangements as far as possible.

23. Taking the various forms in which the loan might be subscribed to in the main section and its post office ancillary, the results are as follows :—

	[In millions of pounds.]
5 per cent. long-term Loan of 1929-47 .	8·3
5½ per cent. 3-year War Bonds . .	13·2
5½ per cent. 5-year War Bonds . .	8·0
Total .	29·5

It will be seen that, in spite of the conversion facilities it carried in regard to previous loans, less than one-third of the total was realised from the long-term loan, and that the 3-year short-term war bonds received a material preference over the 5-year.

It is interesting to note that the great bulk of the applications in all three issues were fully paid up, the percentage of such applications varying from 75 per cent. in the case of the long-term loan to 89 per cent. in the case of the 5-year bonds.

24. As regards the cash certificates, the nature of which was explained in my speech introducing the last Financial Statement, these have come to stay, and the results this year have been most gratifying, the total figure (£6·6 million, of which only about £300,000 was found by withdrawals from existing postal accounts) being in excess of any previous year's regular borrowing in India. It will be remembered, however, that, although the normal currency of our cash certificates is for 5 years, we undertake to repay them on demand, though of course at some sacrifice of interest. Such withdrawals, on the basis of the latest statistics, will amount to about £600,000, thus leaving the net receipts at £6 million.

I look forward with confidence to the continued operation of this scheme as establishing a valid and welcome nexus between Government and the really small investors; and as an illustration of this I may say that 6 per cent. of the subscriptions to the post office section of the loan came from people who put in Rs. 100 or less, and that the purchase of Rs. 10 cash certificates accounted for about 21 per cent. of the total receipts under that head up to the 15th October.

25. Taking the British provinces, in respect of the main and postal sections, and of the actuals already available as regards cash certificates, Bombay heads the list with a total subscription of 14 crores, followed by Bengal with nearly 12 crores, and by the Punjab with a little over 6. As a Madras officer, I must express my disappointment that my Presidency has not done as well, compared with others, as I expected, having allowed itself to be distanced not only by the United Provinces and the Punjab, but also by Burma. It has of course to be remembered that some of the subscriptions received in Calcutta and Bombay represented applications on behalf of subscribers residing in adjoining Provinces or States.

The loan was also most cordially subscribed to in the principal Native States Taking the figures for the main loan, 113 lakhs (in round figures) were received from Hyderabad, of which 75 lakhs came from His Exalted Highness the Nizam; 88 lakhs from His Highness the Maharaja Sindhia, 54 from Mysore, of which 35 lakhs were subscribed by the Darbar; and 31½ from His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda; while Their Highnesses the Nawab of Bahawalpur and the Maharaja of Patiala subscribed 40 and 25 lakhs respectively.

It is not possible to state with any degree of statistical accuracy to what extent the loan receipts represented money which would otherwise have remained with, or been lodged in, banks. But there is no doubt that a considerable amount—especially under the cash certificates and the postal section of the main loan—represented money that would not have been so employed, but was specially drawn out by the loan stimulus.

26. At the time the loan was launched apprehensions were expressed in various quarters as to the prejudicial effect it would have on trade and commerce by drawing off money from the banks. These anticipations have proved without foundation. The principle we adopted throughout was to leave the loan proceeds with the Presidency Banks, where they could be made available for trade purposes, until we actually needed them for disbursement, or the Banks specially requested their withdrawal; and the Presidency Banks on their side were ready to give assistance to other banks which might find themselves in temporary difficulties owing to the sudden withdrawal of their deposits.

The following figures will make our policy in regard to the loan receipts quite clear. In the third week of June these had swelled the Government balances with the Presidency Banks to nearly 24 crores, while by the end of September the balances had been gradually reduced to 8½ crores. But the withdrawals were employed, practically, to liquidate Council drafts, so the ultimate result was merely to transfer a portion of the Presidency Banks' holdings from public to private deposits.

The best proof of the success of the policy adopted was that when the payments to the main section of the loan closed in the middle of October, the Presidency Banks of Bengal and Bombay had such plethoric balances that we were able, without misgiving, to launch on the experiment in regard to Treasury Bills to which I shall now turn.

Treasury Bills.

27. The drain on our resources caused by heavy war payments for His Majesty's Government and the Secretary of State's Council bills led us, in the middle of October, to introduce a new experiment—the issue of short-term Treasury Bills, which could be taken at option for periods of 6, 9, or 12 months. It was suggested to us in some quarters that we might issue three-months bills also, but this would then have been undesirable, as the bills would have matured at a time when it would have been inconvenient for us to meet them. Since January, however, we have been issuing bills of this description.

The results have been very satisfactory. Including a special temporary loan we took from the Bank of Bombay on very favourable terms to ourselves, in addition to a large purchase of Treasury Bills by that institution, we have in this way raised £25⅓ million up to 15th February 1918, and we hope before 31st March to get up to a total figure of £30 million.

Revised Estimate for 1917-18. Ways and Means.

(1) India and England together.

28. As regards capital transactions, the following table reproduces the figures given in paragraph 72 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1917-18, subject to certain modifications made in the final Budget and later:—

Outlay.		£ million.	Resources.	£ million.
Provincial deficit		0·1	Imperial surplus	0·1
Capital expenditure—			Unfunded debt	1·9
Railways	3·6
Irrigation	0·6	4·5	Special war receipts	0·6
Delhi	0·3
Discharge of debt		0·9	Credit for silver purchased in 1916-17	1·4
			Miscellaneous items	1·5
TOTAL		5·5	TOTAL	5·5

29. (1) The figures for War Loan transactions have been omitted, as in the case of the corresponding table in the last Financial Statement, since they will go to His Majesty's Government in part liquidation of our £100 million contribution.

(2) The figures do not follow the Budget in the following respects:—

(a) We then contemplated drawing on our balances in India to the extent of £3 million, corresponding to the estimated loan receipts during 1916-17. The present table is, however, squared without adopting this course, and to the extent to which our balances were in excess of the normal figure, these consisted of anticipatory war loan receipts which can be more conveniently dealt with in connection with the war loan figures as a whole.

(b) Miscellaneous items, £1·5 million.—The head Miscellaneous is made up of numerous entries, such as deposit transactions, etc., and it was anticipated at the time of the presentation of the Financial Statement that these would practically balance each other. Subsequently, however, the Secretary of State advised us that he expected to recover £1½ million less war expenditure in 1916-17, and a correspondingly larger amount in 1917-18 (vide paragraph 6 of my speech introducing the final Budget).

30. But the figures as we can now forecast them will stand thus:—

Outlay.		£ million.
Capital expenditure—
Railways	3·1
Irrigation	0·5	3·9
Delhi	0·3
Discharge of debt*		2·7
Purchase of Home Treasury Bills		20·0
Credits in favour of Federal Reserve Bank of New York		2·7
Purchase of military stores and equipment awaiting allocation		2·1
Total		31·4

Resources.	£ million.
Receipts from Indian Treasury Bills, etc.	30·0
Imperial surplus	5·8
Provincial surplus	2·3
Net result of other transactions	0·6
Total	38·7

31. (1) The capital expenditure falls short of the Budget Estimate by £600,000, due mainly to lapses under railway expenditure at Home, which could not be fully made up by extra outlay here.

(2) The discharge of debt figure includes £570,000 in repayment—(a) of a temporary loan of £330,000 taken from the Maharaja Sindhia in 1914-15 and (b) of three instalments of £80,000 each of the Gwalior loan of 1887. In 1914-15 His Highness the Maharaja intimated to us in the most generous and patriotic way that he would postpone repayment of these instalments during the war, but in view of its prolongation it has been decided to take no further advantage of this concession.

The remaining amount (£2·1 million) is in respect of debt in London, and is for discharge of India Bonds (£500,000) and Railway Debentures which matured this year. It was originally proposed to renew the latter, but in view of the Secretary of State's favourable financial position they have been paid off.

(3) We have also had to incur expenditure to the extent of £2·1 million on the purchase of military stores and equipment in anticipation of demands either in India or from the Expeditionary forces. Pending their allocation to specific requirements, when the cost will be treated as expenditure debitable to Indian revenues or recoverable from the Home Government as the case may be, it has to be charged to a suspense head, thus reducing the resources available for general ways and means purposes.

(4) The Treasury Bills receipts and the Imperial and Provincial surpluses have already been explained, while the American 'credit' transaction is referred to later in paragraph 39.

32. The closing item in the 'Resources' column, which balances to £600,000, is the net result of transactions in respect of unfunded debt, special war receipts, credit for silver purchased but not yet obtained, and miscellaneous, which were shown separately in the statement in paragraph 28, and there totalled to £5·4 million.

* The discharge of debt is shown in statement C of the Financial Statement as amounting to £5·5 million: the difference between this sum and the figure given above represents rupee debt bearing interest at 3, 3½ and 4 per cent. which has been cancelled by the issue of a smaller face value of paper of the 5 per cent. long term Indian war loan 1929-1947 in connection with the conversion operations of 1917, and securities of the latter loan cancelled by purchase for the sinking fund constituted under the Loan notification. The amount of debt cancelled is shown in statement C as debt discharged by a per contra credit to the head "Deposits and Advances—Miscellaneous".

(1) Apart from transactions connected with the transfer of the provident funds of certain Railway companies to Government which result in a credit of £300,000, unfunded debt is now estimated to bring us in £300,000 only, against £1·9 million contemplated in the Budget, owing to reduction in postal savings bank deposits by reason of the superior attractions of cash certificates and the postal section of the ordinary loan. There is no reason to regret this as it is of advantage to us to have deposits which are practically at call transferred to more permanent indebtedness. Cash certificates, I may say, come technically under unfunded debt, but it is convenient to deal with them in connection with the war loan, as the amount realised thereby is credited to His Majesty's Government like our war loan receipts proper.

(2) The adjusting credit in regard to silver is now altered to a debit of £200,000, as the amount outstanding at the end of the current year will exceed that at the beginning.

(3) Special war receipts are now estimated to produce £200,000 only, by reason of smaller receipts in connection with the employment of enemy ships.

(4) Miscellaneous items balance to nil as against an anticipated credit of £1½ million. This is due to—

(a) The amounts recoverable from His Majesty's Government in respect of 1916-17 having been less than anticipated.

(b) The fact that no recovery has yet been made, pending more definite compilation and adjustment of accounts, of the sums which under present arrangements constitute the share of His Majesty's Government in respect of the cost of the South Persia Rifles—vide paragraph 16.

33. It will thus be seen that, apart from the £20 million to be invested in Home Treasury Bills, which I will explain directly, we are about £27⅓ million to the good as compared with original anticipations, a result obtained mainly—

(a) By our having a large (combined) Imperial and Provincial surplus of £8·1 million, whereas in the Budget we expected these two items to balance to nil.

(b) By our receipts from Treasury Bills, including the temporary loan from the Bank of Bombay referred to in paragraph 27.

These results would lead up to an aggregate closing balance in India and England of £44 million as against about £17½ million taken in the Budget.

We have, however, arranged with the Secretary of State, on whose side, as I shall presently explain, the greater part of this balance has accrued, to reduce it by the purchase of £20 million of Home Treasury Bills, to be realised later in order to meet the special liabilities which will then come upon us.

34. Apart from our Treasury Bills, which mature in the coming year and which we propose to pay off or renew then, our position as regards temporary debt is as follows. In 1920 we have to pay off the three-year War Bonds issued this year amounting to about £13 million. In 1922 we have to pay the five-year War Bonds of 1917, amounting to about £8 million. Our this year cash certificates, amounting to £6 million net (after deducting amounts already repaid), will also fall due in 1922. In 1923, again, we have to pay off the loan of 1915, amounting to £3⅓ million: we have the option, however, of paying this in 1920. Moreover, our borrowing programme for next year will in all probability include the issue of short term bonds, and if we repeat bonds for three and five years, the former will mature in 1921, and the latter, and fresh cash certificates, in 1923.

Lastly, when peace conditions permit the resumption of the Railway Capital Programme on a scale necessary to provide adequately for requirements—and this will involve making up a lot of leeway in respect of the compulsory cutting down of that programme during the war—we shall probably find some difficulty in raising, on reasonable terms, the amount of capital which would be required.

We propose therefore, as against our temporary borrowings on Treasury Bills here, and in view of the satisfactory financial position of India as a whole, to invest £ 20 million in Home Treasury Bills in order to provide for the liabilities which in one way or another will come upon us shortly after the war is over.

35. This investment will, of course, help the Home Government pro tanto in providing funds for the war. And counting in investments from the Paper Currency and Gold Standard Reserves, we shall thus have put £32 million of fresh money into Home Treasury Bills this year, making in all, in addition to the £35 million we had already put in up to the end of 1916-17, a total of £67 million lent to the Home Government, and quite outside our special war contribution, since the war began. This will be increased by £16 million in the coming year through the additional investment against the Paper Currency Reserve proposed in paragraph 70.

(2) India.

36. But though our position, taking India and England together, is a decidedly satisfactory one, there is a most marked difference between the position in the two countries, owing to the very large war expenditure which we have to meet here and for which the Secretary of State receives payment in London, while we have also to defray large Council drawings, which he issues in the interests of India's export trade, the bulk of which at the present time consists of commodities of national importance. Owing, again, to the high price of, and keen competition for, silver, the Secretary of State has not been able to make counter-remittances to us in this form (for coinage) to anything like the extent that we had hoped for, while the necessity of conserving the central gold resources of the Empire has precluded his making alternative counter-remittances to us in that metal. America, too, has prohibited the export of gold and silver except under special licence since September 1917. Accordingly, while the Secretary of State's balances have been exceedingly high, our position has been one of constant anxiety. We should indeed have been in a very parlous state but for the facts that—

(a) Our War Loan receipts proved far in excess of the most sanguine estimates that could have been framed in advance of the loan. And though the receipts ultimately go to His Majesty's Government, that takes place by adjustment between the India Office and the Treasury in London, so we get the primary benefit of the money subscribed here.

(b) We are, as already indicated, obtaining £30 million from Indian Treasury Bills or their equivalent.

37. The difficulties of our position in India will appear more fully from the figures which follow.

In the current year's Budget we estimated that we should have to incur a repayable outlay of £39 million for war purposes, including £2·7 million for remittances to East Africa and expenditure on behalf of Australia and the Ministry of Munitions. Leaving out minor miscellaneous adjustments, we proposed to find this amount to the extent of £24½ million from revenue, representing ordinary Home charges in respect of current and capital expenditure; £10 million from the proceeds of the War Loan, including cash certificates; and about £4 million through purchase of silver by the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State was to finance himself for his ordinary requirements from the recoveries he obtained from the War Office, etc., and we were unable to make any specific provision for Council drawings, barring a sum of £½ million representing the difference between estimated outstandings at the beginning and at the end of the year. For the current Council drawings we had to trust to further purchase of silver by the Secretary of State and further investment from the Paper Currency Reserve.

38. The present state of things, taking actuals so far as they are available and anticipations in respect of the remainder of the year, is as follows.

(1) The outlay on behalf of His Majesty's Government, including as before remittances to East Africa and expenditure on behalf of Australia, the Admiralty and the Ministry of Munitions, amounts to no less than £66 million.

(2) The Secretary of State's drawings are expected to amount to £34·8 million, inclusive of special allotments to the Exchange Banks to enable them to finance tea and rice purchases for His Majesty's Food Controller, and other payments which are practically equivalent to Council bills. The latter category covers special finance which we provided in India in respect of wheat purchases negotiated for the Royal Commission on food supplies.

(3) We have further to provide funds for the purchase of tea for the War Office in Ceylon and of foodstuffs for that Colony in India, for coinage undertaken in India on behalf of Egypt, and for special remittances in connection with the war to Jeddah and other places. These various items amount together to £2 million.

(4) We have to meet increased liabilities for the payment of money orders issued by foreign countries on India to the extent of £5·3 million.

We thus get to the gigantic total (for India) of about £108 million, representing, in effect, remittances to England and other countries.

39. To this we have to add a further sum of £2·7 million which, under arrangements between His Majesty's Government and the United States, we have had to provide here in credits to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for the benefit of American importers of jute and other Indian articles required in connection with the war, who would otherwise find it difficult to discharge their liabilities. This sum represents, in effect, an addition to the Secretary of State's ordinary Council drawings. On the other side, the American Government credits us with an equivalent amount in dollars, and we are assuming the realisation of this sum next year—vide paragraph 66 infra.

Our special liabilities for what may be called remittance purposes thus reach about £111 million, which is nearly half as much again as our total current revenue (Imperial) as now estimated, and about three and a half times as much as the Secretary of State's Council drawings in the last year of peace (1913-14), when we had, of course, no special war charges and the like to meet on behalf of His Majesty's Government and other British Administrations.

40. We have met, or will meet, this huge demand in the following ways—

(a) By proceeds in India of our War Loan, including £6 million (net) in cash certificates—about £34½ million. The loan produced an additional £1·1 million received in London under special conditions in the shape of Home Treasury Bills, but this is, of course, no use to us in India.

(b) By adding to £24½ million, put down in the Budget estimate as obtainable from revenue, the further sum of £7 million representing, approximately, improvements in revenue (Imperial and Provincial) arising in India : in all, therefore, £31½ million.

(c) By the obtainment of £30 million from Treasury Bills, including the special loan from the Bombay Presidency Bank referred to in paragraph 27.

(d) By fresh coinage of silver, or bullion awaiting coinage - £13·3 million.

(e) By profits from the Gold Standard Reserve in respect of rupee coinage—£1·4 million.

(f) By further investment in London on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve, which sets free rupees on this side—£8·7 million. We took power last April to increase our Paper Currency investments by £8 million and had £1 million still in reserve against previous investing powers. Against this investments have been made to the extent of £8·7 million, leaving a balance of £300,000 which is available for further investment hereafter.

41. We thus work up to a total of over £119 million as against remittance liabilities of £111 million. But we have likewise to take into account the worseness in our miscellaneous capital transactions as described in paragraphs 31 (3) and 32, and the net result is that we shall have a closing balance in India of £16 million against £12·2 million taken in the Budget. As will be seen later, this surplus will be fully required next year.

I have not taken any account in the above calculations of the measures adopted in respect of compulsory acquisition of gold coming into India, for we have to pay for this gold ourselves. The good it does us is not in any direct increase of our resources, but in the concentration of the gold in the Currency Reserve as against future possibilities, and also in the fact that some of the notes in which we pay for the gold will probably remain in circulation instead of coming back for encashment in rupees.

(3) England.

42. I next turn to the Secretary of State's position. His resources for the year are now estimated as follows :—

[In millions of pounds]

(1)	Receipts from Council Bills, and on account of analogous payments, vide paragraph 38 (2) *	35·3
(2)	Recoveries from the War Office and the Ministry of Munitions, etc.†	65·0
(3)	Special recoveries in respect of our disbursements or remittances of funds in respect of Ceylon, Jeddah, Egypt, etc.	2·1
(4)	Increased receipts from the foreign money order transactions referred to in paragraph 38 (4)	5·3
(5)	Subscriptions to Indian War Loan in London in the form of Home Treasury Bills	1·1
	Total	108·8

43. As against this the Secretary of State will have to meet the following disbursements :—

(1)	Ordinary Home charges including capital expenditure outlay	25·0
(2)	For purchase of silver ‡	13·5
(3)	Payments to the Treasury of the net proceeds of the Indian War Loan§	35·1
(4)	Investment in Home Treasury Bills on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve	8·7
(5)	Investment on behalf of Gold Standard Reserve from profits on coinage	1·4
(6)	Special investment of £20 million in Home Treasury Bills for the purpose indicated in paragraph 34	20·0
(7)	Discharge of India bonds and Railway debentures	2·1
(8)	Miscellaneous transactions	0·4
	Total	106·2

These transactions and adjustments lead up to a closing balance in London of £8 million.

Currency and Exchange Difficulties.

44. The figures I have cited in dealing with our ways and means operations during the course of this year evidence the nature and extent of the strain which these place on our resources. The subject is, however, one of such importance that I propose to turn now to its more general aspects, and to deal with the position more fully than by mere review of figures. The remittance operations to which I have referred have been on a scale abnormally huge as compared with the transactions of the country before the war. I will now explain as briefly as I can how these have tended to dislocate the mechanism of Government finance, and of trade finance also, owing to the intimate dependence of Indian trade on the financial machinery of Government. In normal times the remittances which the Secretary of State places at the disposal of trade through his Council drawings are required, so far as the

* This does not correspond exactly with the disbursement on our side estimated in paragraph 38, as the present figure includes some drawings which will be paid in India in 1918-19.

† This allows for sums which will be still outstanding at the close of the year.

‡ This figure differs somewhat from that given in paragraph 40(d) by reason of the fact that the Secretary of State pays for silver when he acquires it, whereas we do not get the benefit of it till it reaches India. Consequently, while the figures given in respect of his transactions relate to current purchases, those in respect of ours relate to receipts.

§ The gross receipts from our War loans in India and England together are shown at £36·1 million in paragraph 21, in accordance with the usual practice under which we credit the full face value of a loan under our Loans receipts, discount in respect of the actual rate of subscription being charged as interest expenditure which falls under current revenues transactions. But the net amount actually obtained, allowing for the fact that the long-term loan was issued at 95, and that our net cash certificate receipts are less than the gross by £600,000 (paragraph 24), is £35·1 million, and it is this amount that we pay over to the Home Government.

trade aspect of the matter is concerned, to settle only a portion of the surplus of exports of merchandise over imports, a substantial portion of the excess being discharged by the import of the precious metals by private agency. At the present time the position is aggravated not merely by the increased surplus of exports, but by the difficulty in effecting specie remittances. So, whereas ordinarily the primary object of the Secretary of State's Council drawings is to place him in funds to meet his expenditure in England, his large Council issues are at present made solely with the object of financing trade. His expenditure requirements would be covered nearly twice over by repayments made to him in London against the enormous disbursements made by us here on behalf of His Majesty's Government, these direct disbursements alone placing a very heavy strain on our resources.

45. Our primary difficulty, then, arises from the extent to which, as a result of these transactions, our resources have been transferred from India to England. In normal times it might have been possible for us, as it would be for the banks on behalf of trade, to deal with this problem by the import of specie, or, as a refinement on this method, by earmarking gold in London against the concurrent issue of notes from our Paper Currency Reserve in India. These expedients, or modifications of them, have indeed been adopted to an extent which is, I think, not generally realized. Our imports of purchased silver have, during 1916-17 and the current financial year, amounted to not less than £29 million. The maintenance of silver purchases, however, on a scale sufficient to settle the balance of indebtedness to India would obviously not have been a practical proposition, while since the outbreak of the war, the importation or the earmarking of gold by Government has been precluded by the interests of the Empire.

But though it has not been possible for us to earmark gold, we have adopted an alternative measure which, while it has a very similar effect from our point of view, is at the same time very helpful to the Home Government. We have taken powers to enable us, instead of earmarking gold for our Paper Currency Reserve against the issue of notes, to hold a portion of the Reserve in British Treasury Bills, which are the next best thing to gold. The effect of this transaction is that the Government of India provide, from their Indian resources, the money necessary for meeting the expenditure of the Home Government incurred in India, and they take repayment of a substantial portion of the amount so disbursed in the form of securities of the Home Government. In other words, we have lent to the Home Government for the time being the funds required for a considerable portion of their outlay in India, in the same way in which the United States grants loans to the Allies to cover the larger portion of their disbursements in America.

There is another and analogous method by which we have also to some extent been able to deal with the problem. I refer here to what I have previously said in regard to our War Loan, and to our Treasury Bills. The proceeds of these are received by us in India and are available for financing our disbursements here, while we are repaid in England for services against which these disbursements were originally made. A portion of the amount so recovered, representing the equivalent of the subscriptions to our War Loan is, of course, not lent to the Home Government, but is actually made over to them as a gift in cash.

46. It may perhaps be asked why we could not indefinitely continue the process of making payments in India in notes against purchases of British Treasury bills in England. The answer is, of course, that the extent to which we can issue notes is limited in two ways; in the first place by the extent to which the supplier of goods, or services, is prepared to receive notes in payment, while secondly we must maintain an adequate metallic backing to enable us to honour these notes promptly when presented. Any attempt to compel the acceptance of currency notes would react on public confidence and Government credit, and would result in the depreciation of our notes and the inflation of prices.

47. This fact brings me to another aspect of our difficulty. The great demand for Indian products and other services which has resulted in the large transfer of funds from India to England has also necessitated the issue in India of a large amount of currency to pay for such products, etc. The demand for these products at the same time tends to cause a rise in prices in India, in this way also affecting the amount of currency required. To the extent that these currency requirements can be met by notes they have been so satisfied. The total of our active note circulation (viz., excluding notes held in our Reserve Treasuries and by the head offices of the Presidency Banks), which is now 82 crores as against 50 crores before the war, is a definite indication of the progress which has been made in this way, and the further introduction of small value notes marks another definite step in the same direction. But ultimately the provision of metallic rupees is largely governed by the customs and prejudices of the Indian producer and artisan, and though these may be gradually modified, there is a definite limit to the extent to which a paper currency can in this country be substituted for coin.

Concurrently, then, with this large increase in our note issue, we must expect, and find, a very large demand for rupees. The net issues to the public during 1916-17 amounted to no less than 35 crores, while in the current year the net issues already amount to a further 24 crores, in addition to 8 crores (over £5 million) of sovereigns. That is 67 crores in all of issues of metallic currency since the commencement of the financial year 1916-17, or in rather less than two years. In normal years we could have hoped that a portion of the large volume of currency thus put into circulation for the purchase of agricultural produce and other supplies, for the payment of labour in mills and factories, and so on, would tend to return to the larger centres in payment for the imported commodities which the recipient classes consume. The contraction of imports caused by freight and other war difficulties, however, affects us in this way too, as well as from the point of view of our purely external exchange; and the net absorption would have been on an even larger scale had it not been for the fact that a certain quantity of our currency has returned to us in the form of subscriptions to our loans. Our requirements of silver have, therefore, been very great, and in attempting to satisfy them, the Secretary of State has been confronted with keen competition from other countries where also the economic position has entailed an increase in the silver currency. Such steps as we could take to eliminate competition by private importers with the Secretary of State we have taken, and I refer to them elsewhere. The fact, however, remains that the price of silver has in the last year been steadily advancing; and has for some time past, subject to some fluctuations, stood at a level at which the bullion value of the rupee exceeds its value as coin.

48. This advance in the price of silver involved an alteration in the exchange value of the rupee on the basis of the rates at which the Secretary of State sells his Councils. The immediate necessity for this measure arose out of the fact that it would be unjustifiable for Government to undertake, at material loss, the supply of the large amount of new rupee currency required at the present time; and I should like to emphasise that this action was reluctantly taken only when it became evident that the price of silver was unlikely for a considerable period to recede from a level at which loss would be entailed by the continued sale of Councils at 1*s.* 4*d.* It has been suggested that the potential loss was small and that it might legitimately be charged to the Gold Standard Reserve. I cannot accept either of these contentions. In the first place, the absorption of rupees during the years when the bullion value of the rupee was less than its face value affords no criterion of the probable demand on Government for rupees when, owing to a rise in the price of silver, it would become profitable to melt or to export them. In order to avoid loss from these causes as far as possible, we have, it is true, taken certain steps in the form of prohibitory legislation ; but though prohibitions of the kind may serve their object to some extent as temporary expedients, they cannot be expected to operate as a permanent check to the drain on our rupee currency which would certainly accompany a substantial and continued appreciation in the bullion value of the rupee over its face value. In fact the most important limitation which has previously existed on the possible demand on Government for the supply of rupees, viz., that it is unprofitable to export or melt them, would be entirely removed. The only safeguard that a rise in the value of silver above what I may call the 'rupee melting point' will not result in the disappearance of rupees from circulation is such a modification in their external exchange value as to make their export unprofitable. Apart from this safeguard an indefinite and unlimited liability would be entailed, and it would be indefensible for the Government of India to accept this liability as a loss either to the Gold Standard Reserve or to Indian revenues generally.

49. The references which certain of our critics have made in this connection to the report of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance are, as I said in Bombay last October, based on an entire misapprehension of the Commission's conclusions. The main danger which the Commission had in view was the possibility of the exchange value of the rupee falling below 1*s.* 4*d*, and their report lends no support to the view that the Gold Standard Reserve should be drawn upon to make good unflinchingly loss entailed by adhering to the 1*s.* 4*d.* rate in the case of such a contingency as that which has now occurred. I quote from paragraph 79 of their report:—The object of the Gold Standard Reserve, they said, "is only to provide a reserve sufficient to convert into sterling such amount of rupees as may at any moment seek export; in other words, such amount as the owners require to exchange for sterling in order to settle debts due in sterling." With this object in view, they definitely recommended that the whole of the Gold Standard Reserve should be held in London so as to make it as efficient as possible for the purpose, a portion of the Reserve then held in India being transferred to London at the earliest possible opportunity. I give these references to show that the dicta of the Commission did not envisage a situation such as that which has since arisen. Their conclusions presupposed a totally different set of conditions and cannot be appealed to in support of a plea that the measures which it has been necessary to adopt are inconsistent with the Commission's findings and would not be endorsed by them.

50. I much regret any hardship imposed on our export trade by the increase which it has been necessary to make in the rate for Council drafts, and I am, of course, well aware that a rise in exchange would in ordinary conditions be prejudicial to that trade, like the limitations which the Secretary of State has found it necessary to impose on the volume of his Council drawings. Consequently, as I have repeatedly stated, we embark on any such action with the greatest reluctance, and simply to prevent greater evils. At the same time, while a rise in exchange tends, under ordinary conditions, to prejudice the export trade, it must be remembered that a country like India, which normally exports a considerably larger volume of commodities than she imports in order to discharge her external obligations—such as interest on her sterling debt, Home administrative charges, and outlay on stores and plant—gains by a measure which requires her debtors to pay more for the rupees in which their payments must eventually be liquidated. Or, to put the matter in another way, a rise in exchange means that a smaller amount of India's commodities, as expressed in rupees, will have to be sent abroad in order to provide for a specified amount of payments in sterling, and that she herself will have to pay less for the imports she obtains.

51. Further, in considering the effect on India of a rise in exchange at the present time, allowance must be made for the effect of the abnormal conditions now prevailing. While an Indian exporter would doubtless, in normal circumstances, be prejudicially affected by a rise in the external value of the rupee, which would make it more difficult for him to compete with producers in other countries, this proposition does not apply when no keen competition on the part of other producing countries exists, when there is a large and an unsatisfied demand for many of India's more important products, and when, as a result of freight difficulties, exporters are able to ship practically all the goods for which tonnage can be provided. Even if it be granted that, as a result of the rise in exchange, exporters are receiving somewhat lower rupee prices than they would otherwise have secured, it is an undoubted fact that the actual rupee prices obtained are, in the case of most commodities, substantially in excess of pre-war prices and that, in spite of such restrictions as it has been necessary to impose, rupee prices within India have risen and not fallen. That this is the case is due to the great demand for India's products from abroad and to the enormous rise in prices which has taken place in almost every country in the world which consumes these products. It is indeed probably the case that but for the various restrictions which have attended the special external demands for India's products during the war, internal prices would have risen to a level higher than that at which they at present stand. Even as it is, the great increase in internal prices has become a serious hardship to the poorer classes within India, and special measures have been necessary to deal with some aspects of this problem.

52. There is yet a further point which I would like to emphasise. India is not peculiar in being affected by exchange difficulties. Practically every country in the world at the present time is undergoing embarrassment in some form or other in connection with its foreign exchanges; and I think we are entitled to take credit for the fact that, in spite of the special difficulties with which we have had to deal, our currency system has borne the strain on it so well, and that we have succeeded in regulating sterling exchange to the public advantage in a way which has been possible in very few other countries. Thus in the case of France, the present exchange rate as between Paris and London has not only departed from the normal gold point to at least the same extent as the external rupee exchange, but it is also liable to indefinite fluctuations. In Italy and many other countries the exchanges have diverged further from normal, and are liable to even greater fluctuations. In the case of India, if exchange had been left to find its own level under the normal laws of supply and demand, the rupee exchange would long ago have reached a far higher level than it has actually done.

I made observations of this description to the Indian Merchants' Chamber in Bombay last October, but I desire to repeat them here, through this Council, to a wider public.

53. In this endeavour to maintain stability in our exchange rate, we have received the valuable co-operation of the Exchange Banks and others. In particular, I can record with satisfaction that exports of national importance, to which, as is well known, special priority in finance is now given by the Exchange Banks, have not, in spite of difficulties, been retarded by any breakdown in the arrangements for their financing. We may yet have to call to a still larger extent for the co-operation of merchants and others who have homeward remittances to make, with the view of applying these more largely than in the past to the financing of these essentially national exports; and to such an appeal I have no doubt that we shall find an adequate response from those engaged in the import trade.

This co-operation being of the greatest value to us, we can, I think, reasonably require it to be given, and ask the banks and trade generally to submit in Imperial interests, and therefore for their own ultimate advantage, to a certain amount of control and inconvenience. After all, the bulk of the burden is being shouldered by Government. Apart from the £35 million which we have given outright to the Home Government in the form of cash in part liquidation of our war contribution, and in addition to our Gold Standard Reserve holdings and our ordinary Home Treasury balances, we shall by the end of the current year have accumulated in London £32 million of British Treasury Bills in the Paper Currency Reserve and £20 million in the special reserve referred to paragraph 34, or about £52 million of floating funds which we should be very glad to have in India.* Against these accumulations in England we have already undertaken in India a liability for about £30 million of short-term debt and £30 million of Treasury Bills. This "overbought position," as it would be described in banking terminology, will be further added to during the coming year. These facts are sometimes ignored by those who chafe under what they regard as arbitrary restrictions and who urge upon us that such restrictions could safely be removed or relaxed.

Budget Estimate for 1918-19. Current Revenue and Expenditure.

54. Assuming that next year's monsoon will be normal, the following statement compares the Revised Estimate for 1917-18 with the Budget Forecast for 1918-19.

[In millions of pounds.]

—	Revised, 1917-18.			Budget, 1918-19.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.
Revenue	76·677	33·724	110·401	73·999	34·348	108·347
Expenditure	70·852	31·468	102·320	71·708	34·443	106·151
Surplus (+) or deficit (−)	+5·825	+2·256	+8·081	+2·291	−·095	+2·196

* The £67 million referred to in paragraph 35 included Gold Standard Reserve transactions.

Revenue and Expenditure—Imperial.

55. It will thus be seen that we expect to be about £2⅝ million worse off under revenue, while the expenditure is about £800,000 more than in the current year, thus giving a surplus of £2·3 million against £5·8 million now expected for 1917-18.

56. The reduction in Revenue is primarily due to a decrease in Salt receipts (£1·9 million), and the elimination of gain by Exchange, estimated this year at £1 million net. To take credit for the latter would be gambling on a continuance of the present rates of exchange, which we have no desire to see maintained when the circumstances that justify them pass away, and we therefore, following precedent, leave it out of account in our budgetary anticipations.

The falling off under Salt is due to the stoppage of indents in Northern India, referred to in paragraph 11, which, in view of the state of stocks there, must continue for a considerable time.

57. As regards other heads, I give some remarks as to items which call for special comment.

The following table, which is on the lines of that given in paragraph 9 for the current year, shows the total Railway results for 1916-17, and those now estimated for 1917-18, and forecasted for 1918-19 :—

[In millions of pounds.]

—	1916-17.	Revised, 1917-18.	Budget, 1918-19.
Gross receipts	41·8	45·5	47·0
Working expenses, including payments of surplus profits to Railway Companies.	20·7	21·7	24·1
Net receipts	21·1	23·8	22·9
Add—Receipts from Subsidised Companies and miscellaneous receipts in England.	0·2	0·2	0·1
Total receipts	21·3	24·0	23·0
Deduct—Interest charges and some miscellaneous expenditure.	13·8	13·9	13·8
Net profit on Railways	7·5	10·1	9·2

In forecasting gross receipts for next year, we have to bear in mind that those of 1917-18 were swelled by an extraordinarily good monsoon, and that, with continued wear and tear of rolling-stock and absence of adequate facility for renewal, a time must come at which the railways cannot carry all the passengers and tonnage that they might otherwise convey. We think, therefore, that it is not safe to estimate for an increase of more than £1½ million on the Revised Estimate for the current year. On the other hand, we have to provide for an increase of nearly £2½ million under working expenses, including special renewals in order to provide, as far as circumstances permit us, for enabling the railways to bear the strain the present circumstances are putting upon them.

Taking minor alterations into account, we thus, as shown in the table, get to a final net profit on Railways of £9·2 million against £10·1 million now estimated for 1917-18 and £7·5 million in 1916-17—a decrease, that is, of £900,000 as compared with the current year.

58. Interest receipts show an increase of nearly £1½ million, with reference to the investment of £20 million in Home Treasury Bills indicated in paragraph 34, and the fact that the special Paper Currency Depreciation Fund, referred to in paragraph 13 (3), having now been made up to the total amount at present required, no further contributions thereto will be needed.

59. There is a decrease of £300,000 under Miscellaneous, the principal item leading to this result being £170,000 due to profits on the wheat scheme of 1915, which figure in the accounts for the current year and will not now recur. But so far as Imperial revenues are concerned, the decrease under this latter item will be counterbalanced by an almost like decrease in payments to the provinces under Transfers between Imperial and Provincial, since most of the wheat profits were passed on to the Local Governments under this head.

On the other hand, there is an increase here, by reason of a special recurring grant of £200,000 for the development of primary education, which we propose to make in supplement of that given this year for improving the pay and training of teachers in primary and secondary schools. We desire to give this fresh evidence of our concern for educational development, though the amount we can assign is but small by reason of the strain on our resources occasioned by the war. Apart from this too, as Your Excellency indicated in your opening speech, it is impossible to embark on large fresh commitments from Imperial funds till the future powers of local bodies, and the future relations of local, Provincial and Imperial finance, have been determined in connection with the scheme of Constitutional Reforms.

Nearly the whole of this grant will be distributed to the provinces, and these and other adjustments will result in the net payment from Imperial revenues under Transfers between Imperial and Provincial being about the same as in the current year.

60. (1) Under Customs, we anticipate about £410,000 less than now estimated for the current year, on the assumption that a decreased volume of trade, which will probably result from the shipping situation, will be largely countered by higher prices reflected in our ad valorem duties. It is necessarily a matter of increasing difficulty to forecast the manner in which war restrictions will affect our Customs revenue. We must, of course, expect the limitations imposed by freight scarcity and restrictions on production to continue in an accentuated form. On the other hand, the export restrictions from the United Kingdom may not impossibly be set off to an increasing extent by substitutes from other countries, e.g., we are obtaining a larger amount of provisions from America and Australia, and, still more, by the higher level of prices. On the whole, therefore, we have come to the conclusion that it will be safe to take a somewhat smaller figure than the Revised Estimate of the current year, allowing for the fact that we can expect no receipts from private imports of silver in 1918-19.

(2) As regards Income-tax and Super-tax (taken together) we estimate an increase of about £170,000 over the receipts of the current year as shown in the Revised Estimate.

(3) Posts and Telegraphs are estimated to give us £290,000 more. But this is more than set-off by an increase of £330,000 under expenditure, due to expansion of the operations of the Department, an increase in pay of establishments with reference to war conditions, and increased price of stores and stationery.

61. Turning now to the Expenditure side, the net outlay under Military Services is estimated in the current year at £28·8 million. But various items of this are non-recurring or will recur in smaller proportion next year. In the former category figures this year's expenditure on rifles and ammunition (£1,450,000); the latter covers diminished expenditure in connection with the North-West Frontier (£370,000), purchase of Hotchkiss and Lewis guns, manufacture of ammunition, etc. (£170,000), and smaller provision for Home stores, Military Works, and Railway charges, etc. (£510,000).

On the other hand we have to take into account:—

(a) £550,000 extra for increased pay concessions to British troops—vide paragraph 15, item (b)—for a whole year instead of for a few months only as in the current year.

(b) £200,000 for introduction of the Station Hospital system for India and improvements of hospitals.

(c) £250,000 for extension of Ordnance factories.

The net result of these various changes is to bring the allocated 1918-19 expenditure up to £27·3 million, and to this we add a reserve of £1·7 million for charges at present unforeseen, so as to be in a position to meet additional outlay consequent on the war such as has come on us after the Budget was framed in the last two years. The total provision for net Military expenditure is thus £29 million.

62. India's share of the total expenditure on the South Persia Rifles which, as stated in paragraph 16, is shown under Political, is estimated at £750,000 for next year, against £900,000 this. The decrease is mainly due to non-recurrence of the adjustment which had to be made this year in respect of charges of 1916-17, vide paragraph 16 supra. But allowing for increase in other Political expenditure in Persia, the total figures under this head are £350,000 more than in the Revised.

63. (1) Our total charges in respect of the War debt remain at £6 million, including sinking funds of £270,000 in connection with this year's long term Indian issue (vide paragraph 81 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement) and £470,000 in respect of the Home war debt taken over.

(2) Under Miscellaneous we get an improvement of £500,000 by reverting to the Budget figure for the current year and omitting the special increase in the Revised referred to in paragraph 17.

64. The final result, so far as it can at present be forecasted, is, as I have already said, a revenue surplus of £2·3 million. We shall need every penny of this—and more too if it should accrue to us—to meet our ways and means difficulties, and there can be no question, while war conditions continue, of reduction of taxation. On the other hand, as our difficulties arise on the way and means, and not on the revenue, side there is no present necessity for adding to the fresh imposts imposed during the last two years. We therefore keep our taxation on the existing level.

Revenue and Expenditure—Provincial.

65. The Provincial revenues are taken in the Budget at £34·3 million and the expenditure at £34·4 million. An increase of revenue is anticipated everywhere except in the United Provinces. The current year's revenue in these provinces has been inflated by special receipts from irrigation, and provision has been made for normal receipts in the coming year; part of the decline is also due to the omission of the non-recurring assignment made to provincial revenues in the current year from the profits of the wheat scheme. Assignments on the latter account have been made to other provinces also, but in their case the increase of revenue from normal growth is expected to exceed the deterioration arising from the omission of the assignments next year.

The result is, as I have said, that Provincial receipts and expenditure are nearly in equilibrium; but nevertheless the provinces can anticipate the spending of nearly £3 million more than they were able to lay out in the current year.

The financial situation has compelled us to keep in force the instructions to Local Governments I have referred to in previous speeches to refrain from new outlay which is not immediately necessary or remunerative, and to maintain their expenditure as far as possible within the limits of their current income. I have once more to acknowledge the loyalty with which the Local Governments are carrying out this policy, and the figures I have just cited show that the restriction has not been incompatible with reasonable increase in Provincial expenditure.

Budget Estimate for 1918-19. Ways and Means.

(1) India and England together.

66. Our ordinary capital transactions are estimated as follows:—

(In millions of pounds.)

Outlay.			Resources.
Capital expenditure—			From balances	3·6
Railways	4·2		Net revenue surplus (Imperial and Provincial)	2·2
Irrigation	0·5	5·0	Unfunded debt, excluding cash certificates	1·2
Delhi	0·3		Special war receipts	0·2
Discharge of debt		5·9	Credit for silver purchased in 1917-18	1·0
Total		10·9	Net balance under Miscellaneous	nil
			Repayment of credits placed at the disposal of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in 1917-18 —vide paragraph 39.	2·7
			Total	10·9

67. (1) The Railway and Irrigation expenditure follow the figures advised by the Departments concerned, the Railway outlay being put at about £1 million more than in the current year's Revised Estimate.

(2) Discharge of debt includes £3·1 million for payment of India Bonds and Railway Debentures which will mature in the coming year, £2·7 million for the repayment of the temporary loan taken from the Bank of Bombay in the current year, and £80,000 for the instalment of the Gwalior Loan of 1887.

(3) Allowing for the small Provincial deficit exhibited in paragraph 54, the net surplus, Imperial and Provincial, is £2·2 million.

(4) The statement includes nothing from Treasury Bills, as we assume that what we can thus obtain next year—say, about £27·3 million—will merely suffice to wipe out the similar obligations incurred during the current year.

Nor do we make any allowance here for ordinary loan receipts, since, as will be seen presently, it is proposed to apply what we can raise by loan in the coming year to the further liquidation of our £100 million contribution to the Home Government.

(5) Under Miscellaneous we provide for the anticipated recovery from the Home Government of their share of the expenditure on the South Persia Rifles for the period ending 31st March 1918—vide paragraph 32 (4) (b). But against this and other miscellaneous receipts, provision has to be made for the payment of Council bills amounting to £2 million which remain unpaid at the end of the current year. The final result is a nil adjustment in respect of Miscellaneous.

Our aggregate closing balance in India and England on the 31st March 1919 is estimated at £20½ million.

(2) India.

68. But though our position, taking India and England together, is quite satisfactory, the resources shown in paragraph 66 being the same as the liabilities, things are very different when we look at India alone. Our recoverable war expenditure for His Majesty's Government cannot be estimated at less than about £70½ million, while we have in addition to supply funds to East Africa to the extent of £2·8 million : in all therefore £73·2 million.

We shall also have to meet £2 million in respect of Council Bills drawn by the Secretary of State in the current year but not payable by us till after its close, and £2·7 million in respect of the temporary loan obtained from the Bank of Bombay which has to be repaid in 1918-19. Our liabilities thus come to £78 million.

69. Against this we have £22·1 million available from surplus of revenue over expenditure in India, and we anticipate getting £20 million by fresh borrowing, a measure on which I shall have more to say later. So far then, we have got £42 million, and are still £36 million to the bad, without making any allowance for fresh Council Bills.

70. We hope to meet this deficiency thus :—

(a) By specie remittances from the Secretary of State to the extent of £13 million, including £1 million in transit at the end of the current year.

(b) By further investment, as circumstances require it, of £16 million (24 crores) against the Paper Currency Reserve—or, if account be taken of the unutilised balance of our existing powers, of £16·3 million, thus giving us the command of an equal amount of money here. I shall later on introduce a Bill giving us the necessary power in this respect.

(c) By drawing £5 million from our balances in India which, as I have already stated, are expected to stand at £16 million at the close of the current year.

(d) We also expect that we shall obtain repayment during the next year of the credits for £2·7 million which we are placing at the disposal of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York during the current year. But that sum will be required for payments of foreign money orders, as remittances by this source must be assumed to continue next year, though, we may hope, not on the same scale as this year.

On these calculations and allowing for some minor adjustments, we should have a closing balance in India of about £11·1 million, which is a good deal less than the normal closing balance (£12¼ million) to which we usually look.

71. It will be observed that these calculations take no account of the Secretary of State's fresh Council drawings. We do not, of course, propose that these should be suspended—a measure which would produce very undesirable effects on Indian trade. On the contrary, we desire to meet Council drafts so far as we can, but the exposition I have given will show how difficult we shall find it to do this. All we can say at present, therefore, is that we shall endeavour to provide for Councils as far as our resources permit. We may, for example, be able to get more in the way of specie remittances than the figure mentioned above, and to the extent that acquisitions of specie will add to the proportion of metallic holdings in our Paper Currency Reserve, we may, as time goes on, be able to justify a further investment from this. Our loan transactions may give us more than it is at present safe to anticipate, and the same remark will apply, if the seasons are good, to our revenue receipts. But I have said enough, I think, to show how very uncertain is the position, and how absolutely necessary it is that we should conserve our resources as much as we possibly can.

(3) England.

72. Leaving out of account Council drawings, in regard to which, as I have said, we can make no definite provision at present, and allowing, for some recoveries from His Majesty's Government being still outstanding on 31st March 1918, the Secretary of State's resources for next year will consist of about £75 million in the shape of recoveries from His Majesty's Government for fresh and past war expenditure, and miscellaneous adjustments of an analogous character.

Against this he will have to make the following disbursements :—

	(In millions of pounds.)
Ordinary Home charges, including capital expenditure outlay . .	22·3
Payment to His Majesty's Government for proceeds of our new War loan .	20·0
Investment on behalf of Paper Currency Reserve	16·3
Payment for silver remittances (a)	12·0
Discharge of India bonds and Railway debentures	3·1
TOTAL .	73·7

There will thus be an increase in his closing balance, which is expected to stand at £9·3 million, as compared with £8 million with which the year opens. It is too early yet to contemplate definite utilisation of any portion of this balance by further special investment or otherwise.

Next year's borrowing.

73. I will conclude this portion of my speech with some further remarks as regards our borrowing next year. We propose, following this year's precedent, that the regular loan receipts, and those from cash certificates, shall all go to His Majesty's Government for the prosecution of the war in further redemption of our £100 million contribution.* We thus assist ourselves also, since the payment to His Majesty's Government is made by adjustment with the Secretary of State in London, while we get the primary benefit of the sums received in India.

74. As I have already said, the War Loan of this year, including cash certificates brought us in nearly £35 million in India. Next year's loan will again have no limit of amount, and I shall rejoice if we get results approaching to those of this year. The success of the 1917 loan was largely due to the splendid efforts made by Heads of Provinces and Provincial and Local Committees, and the Government of India look with grateful confidence to a renewal of these efforts in respect of the fresh War loan of 1918. But in framing Budget estimates I must proceed cautiously, and take into account that the very fact of this year's effort having been such a large one militates against the expectation of an equal harvest next year. It has to be remembered too that we also count on raising £27 million by Treasury Bills. For the purposes of the Budget estimates therefore and our ways and means calculations, and after consultation with my expert advisers, official and non-official, I do not think it safe to put down for the present a larger amount than £20 million for next year's War Loan, including cash certificates. But I repeat that this is regarded as a minimum amount, and that no one will be better pleased than I (and I can speak with equal confidence, on behalf of Your Excellency and the Government) if this estimate should be very largely exceeded, and India's effort should once more show that she derides the cautious calculations of her financiers.

I would impress on the Council and the public that the raising of a large war loan here produces three very material advantages to India and the Empire. First.—It gives His Majesty's Government fresh money for the conduct of the war in lieu of a mere readjustment of previous war expenditure, and thus makes India's war contribution still more useful. Second.—It assists the Government of India in obtaining funds for the financing of war expenditure here to meet the needs of His Majesty's Government. Third.—India profits economically by her war contribution being raised by internal borrowing, the interest on which is disbursed in this country, instead of by adjustment which involves payment of interest on a portion of the British debt.

The raising of a further sum of £20 million by loan in this country will bring our total contribution by fresh borrowing to more than half of the full £100 million for which we have made ourselves liable; and to the extent that we may obtain more than £20 million this proportion will be correspondingly increased. I may add that in order to eliminate as far as possible competition with our efforts in this direction, we shall shortly place restrictions on issues of capital in this country, except in so far as these are required for enterprises of national importance at the present time. I shall before long introduce the legislation necessary to give effect to this decision.

75. Having regard to present money conditions and the fact that we are obtaining funds at present by the issue of Treasury Bills, we do not propose to start the new loan immediately and it would be premature at present to commit ourselves as to the date of issue and the form which the loan shall take. I may, however, provisionally indicate that, having regard to the relative amounts obtained this year on the long term loan and from the short term war bonds, we are at present disinclined to issue a further long term loan in 1918. I think, after consulting those who are entitled to speak with most weight on this matter, that we shall be more likely to obtain an adequate response by concentrating ourselves on short term bonds. We might, for example, put out once more the 3-year and 5-year bonds, which were so successful this year, and add a further category of bonds having a somewhat longer period. We contemplate that outstanding Treasury Bills shall be received on suitable terms in subscription to the new loan.

The cash certificates will, of course, continue on their present footing.

76. I need only at present add a few words on the subject of premium bonds, which to some people seem a desirable method of adding to the attraction of our loans. I may say at once that I have no puritanical scruples in this matter, and that if I thought that the issue of premium bonds would bring us in any large amount of money which we should otherwise not obtain, I would do my best to get them sanctioned. I have, however, found that the general opinion of financial and commercial authorities entitled to speak with weight on this subject is that we should not obtain this result. It would primâ facie be impossible for us to issue a loan at a very small rate of interest (having regard to present market conditions) with the bulk of the inducements in prizes : that would be a gambling transaction which the Government ought not to take up. As regards the alternative of issuing a loan at a fair flat rate of interest, though somewhat below what we should otherwise have to pay, with supplementary prize inducements, the general opinion is that it would not work. Having regard to the present price of money, banks and serious investors are not likely to be satisfied with less than the rate of interest we had to pay this year on the remote chance of getting a prize ; while as regards those who like a flutter, the consensus of opinion is that they prefer speculative share investments, which involve a considerable degree of real or imaginary skill and give them the constant stimulus of following the ups and downs of the market. These views receive corroboration from the fact that the recent premium bonds issue in Ceylon was a complete failure.

We have also the fact that the Committee which the Home Government appointed to consider the question of premium bonds advised that it was doubtful whether the additional funds thus obtainable would justify controversial legislation. That is our feeling also as regards India. The expedient would undoubtedly be resented by many on what they hold to be moral grounds, and I do not think that we should be justified in ignoring such scruples on a very problematic chance of making material sums which would not otherwise be obtainable. I cannot, therefore, advise that we should try this experiment.

Paper Currency and Gold Standard Reserves, and Exchange.

77. The following statement gives the total and active note circulation on the 1st February of each of the last five years, the active note circulation excluding the notes held in reserve treasuries and headquarter offices of the Presidency Banks:—

[In crores of rupees.]

Year.	Total Circulation.	Active Circulation.
1914	63·9	51·9
1915	60·3	45·1
1916	62·4	54·1
1917	84·4	67·9
1918	104·8	82·1

It will be seen that the 1917 figures, which were at that time a heavy 'record', have now been far passed, thus affording further testimony to the confidence the people have in our note issues, and to the effect of the measures taken in recent years towards making our notes more easily cashable. For it is an easily understood paradox that the more you increase facilities for ready encashment of notes, the greater is the confidence in their value and the fewer the occasions on which they are actually presented for encashment. This expansion of circulation has been of material assistance to us in our ways and means difficulties by enabling increasing investment from the Paper Currency Reserve.

78. As the Council are aware, till lately our lowest denomination of notes was Rs. 5, but we have now made the experiment of issuing still smaller notes for Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ respectively. The former were issued on the 1st December 1917 and the latter on 2nd January last, and at the outset the issues in India were confined to the three Presidency cities; while in order to enhance confidence in the notes, we have given special facilities for their encashment at local post offices. The results so far have been very satisfactory, the total issues having reached a value of R45 lakhs, and the encashments of R11 lakhs only, leaving a margin of R34 lakhs worth of these small notes actually in circulation. The success of the experiment has already warranted its extension to some of the other large cities.

It should be understood that though the area of issue is as yet limited, the Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ notes are received anywhere in payment of Government dues, and are encashable at all currency offices and treasuries in the same way as our other universal notes.

We have also sent about R4 lakhs worth of these notes to Mesopotamia, where the people are accustomed to minute paper currency. We are likewise, at the request of His Majesty's Government, sending about £500,000 worth to East Africa.

79. As regards the metallic portion of our Currency Reserve, on the 31st March last we held about £8 million of gold here and about £4½ million in England, or in all £12½ million. The figures now stand at £19 million and £½ million respectively, or in all £19½ million. I shall speak presently of the main transactions that have led to this result.

As regards silver, our holdings in the Paper Currency Reserve, including bullion under coinage, amounted on 31st March last to about 19 crores (or nearly £13 million). They at present stand at about 13½ crores (£9 million).

80. The increase in our gold and silver holdings together in spite of a further investment from the Paper Currency Reserve thus amounts to about £3 million. This has of course been made possible by the increase in our currency note circulation, the total of which now stands at 105 crores (£70 million) against 86 crores (about £57 million) at the beginning of the year.

At the beginning of the year we had invested about 56 per cent. of our holdings against total note issues. The present percentage is still about the same figure, with the advantage that nearly all our gold is now held in India ; and this enables us to contemplate the further investment indicated in paragraph 70 above.

81. In paragraph 34 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement I explained that, with the object of relieving the strain on silver and of reducing the premium on gold, we had started selling a portion of the raw gold held at Bombay on behalf of the Bank of England, the gold bullion thus taken over by us being paid for by sovereigns from our Reserve in London. These sales were continued between 18th January and 26th April last, during which period we disposed of over £4 million of bullion. They were then discontinued because a transfer of gold to India from Australia and New Zealand, in exchange for our London holdings of gold, made it necessary for us to reserve those holdings for that purpose. The effect of these sales upon the silver position can only be vaguely estimated. Enquiries showed, however, that most of the gold which was sold found its way up-country and must have resulted in drawing into circulation a certain amount of rupees which those who ultimately acquired the gold would not otherwise have parted with.

82. Last April, again, in view of our then depleted stock of rupees we found it necessary to issue sovereigns in the hope of relieving the strain on our silver balances. The absorption of rupees in that month was over £4 million, and on 7th May our holding of silver in the Paper Currency Reserve amounted to about 13 crores only, which was the lowest point touched for over 10 years. What may be called the relief-issue of sovereigns, which continued till the end of August, amounted to about £5 million, the bulk being absorbed in the Punjab where they were utilised in the purchase of wheat. By that time our silver position had improved, and in accordance with our general policy of retaining our gold holdings as our second line of reserve, the necessity for further issues of gold thus disappeared. We have lately, however, had to recommence the issue of sovereigns with reference to a renewed depletion of our silver stocks.

83. Since June last we have been acquiring private imports of gold under the Gold Import Act, the provisions of which I explained in this Council on the 26th September 1917, and thereby raised our gold holdings by about £12 million. As I have already explained (paragraph 6) most of this gold has come to us from America and Japan. The gold so acquired was passed into the Paper Currency Reserve, an equivalent amount of notes being issued to the importers from whom it was obtained.

An analogous transaction, which has also had the effect of strengthening our gold holdings, is the arrangement recently arrived at between His Majesty's Government, Japan and ourselves under which, by the end of the current year, we shall have received £2 million of the Bank of England's gold held in Bombay. This amount is placed in the Paper Currency Reserve, and we issue against it an equivalent amount of notes to the nominees of the Japanese Government.

84. As the Council is aware, we have, besides taking over all private imports of gold, forbidden, since July last, the import and export of silver into or from India except on Government account. In respect of imports the object is to avoid private competition with the Secretary of State's purchases, and also to preclude private imports of this metal being used to obtain Indian money for the financing of exports not of primary war importance: as regards exports to conserve the stock of silver already in the country. We have, with a like object, forbidden the melting of rupees and sovereigns.

85. The Council is also aware that we have obtained permission from the Home Government to coin sovereigns in India, and although the establishment of a Gold Mint in Bombay for this purpose which will work as a branch of the Royal Mint in London, has been delayed owing to the necessity of satisfying conditions laid down by the Home Treasury, the construction of our Mint is now in hand, and we hope that it will be issuing sovereigns by May. Its operations will extend in the first instance to the coinage of foreign coins and refined gold, but arrangements have been made to enable it to take up the coinage of unrefined gold also. In the meantime we have got coinage done for us in Australia, in pursuance of the arrangements I explained to the Council in my speech on 5th September last introducing the Paper Currency Amendment Bill, which subsequently passed into law as Act XIX of 1917, and we are now entitled to treat as part of our Currency Reserve gold held on our account in any part of His Majesty's Dominions, or in transit therefrom.

86. As regards silver prices, these stood at an average of nearly 37*d* per ounce in April, and had risen to an average of nearly 51*d* in September, the high watermark of 55 being reached towards the end of that month. This latter figure, which was largely due to speculation, was however not long maintained. In October the average price had fallen to 44*d* and in November to 43, at which level it has practically stood since.

The increase in silver prices led to alteration in the price at which the Secretary of State sells his Councils. I have dealt with this matter already, and need only refer briefly here to what I said in the Legislative Council on the 24th September in answer to a question by the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg, when, under the authority of the Secretary of State, I explained the conditions by which he is guided in fixing his Council rates. These rates are being, and will continue to be, based roughly on the price at which he is able to buy silver. He cannot be expected to sell rupees at appreciably less than their actual cost, but he intends to apply this principle with considerable latitude so as to avoid changes as far as possible. Once again I must emphasise that the measures adopted to meet an abnormal increase in the price of silver, caused in their turn by the special circumstances of the war, must in no way be considered as implying the abandonment of the policy of a fixed and stable exchange; that by selling his Councils at fixed rates the Secretary of State did all he could to keep exchange stable; that he only raised those rates in August last when the bullion price of the rupee made this necessary; and that the rise in external exchange has not in any way affected the internal parity of rupees and sovereigns, which remains at the standard rate of 15 to 1.

87. The following statement shows the holdings in the Gold Standard Reserve on the 1st April last, at the date of the last published statement, and as we expect them to stand on the 31st March.

[In thousands of pounds.]

—	Book credit in India.	Gold held in India.	Cash placed by the Secretary of State for India in Council at short notice.	Invested in London.	Total.
1st April 1917 . . .	181	103	6,001	25,406*	31,691
31st January 1918 . .	...	...	6,019	27,798†	33,817
As estimated on 31st March 1918.	...	...	6,000	28,316†	34,316

The increase in the total holding is due in part to the fresh rupee coinage we have had to undertake from silver purchased in the earlier months of the year; and the interest on previous investments is, as usual, added to the assets of the Fund.

The average rate of exchange in the current year calculated on the Secretary of State's drawings, will amount to 16·55 pence per rupee against 16·15 pence in 1916-17.

* This represents the value of the securities as on the 31st March 1917.

† This represents the value as on 30th September 1917 (the date of the last valuation) of the securities then held and the cost price of securities purchased since that date.

REMARKS ON CERTAIN SPECIAL HEADS.

A.—Military Services.

88. The table below shows the gross and net expenditure on military services for the coming year and the four years preceding :—

	Gross.					Net, i.e., deducting receipts.
	Army.	Marine.	Military Works.	Special Defences.	Total.

89. I have already indicated in paragraph 15 the more important causes contributing to the increase in the Revised Estimate for 1917-18 as compared with the Budget. These account for about £3·2 million, and other minor factors for a further increase of about £0·8 million. On the other hand, there have been some savings, the most important of which are the lapse in the Home provision for construction of vessels for the Royal Indian Marine and credit for a dredger taken over by the War Office, amounting together to £157,000 ; reduction in food charges ; and reduction in the non-effective charges in India and England. The reserve of about £700,000 included in the current year's Budget to meet unforeseen expenditure must also of course be set off against the increase in specific expenditure to which I have referred.

90. The receipts have risen by £175,000, which is mainly accounted for by large sales of dairy produce to overseas forces, war hospitals, etc., and by the recovery of departmental charges on stores supplied by the Indian Munitions Board.

91. The Budget provision for next year has been fixed at £29 million. I have already (paragraph 61) explained the need for this large provision. It includes a reserve of £1,677,000 to meet charges which we cannot yet specifically foresee, but which, as the experience of preceding war years shows, are likely to come upon us in one way or another.

The head 'Special Defences' has been abolished with effect from 1st April 1918, and any remaining transactions will be adjusted under the head 'Military Works'

92. The total cash contributions from Indian Princes and others towards the cost of the war received this year amount to £428,000. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has also continued to receive considerable sums for the provision of motor ambulances and the like and the supply of comforts to the troops at the front.

93. The gross amount contributed from Indian revenues on account of the normal pay and charges of the military forces despatched out of India up to the end of 1917-18 may be taken at £28 million. Against this, however, must be set the cost of maintaining substituted British troops (Territorial and Garrison battalions) actually serving in India, which is borne by His Majesty's Government under the Resolution of the Houses of Parliament referred to in paragraph 39 of my last year's speech. Taking this into account, our total net contribution towards the cost of the war in respect of the Expeditionary Forces is about £15¾ million to the end of the current year, to which another £4¾ million should be added in respect of 1918-19. And outside these adjustments, and taking our normal net military expenditure, on the basis of the 1913-14 figures (£19·9 million), at £20 million, we have had to incur an additional outlay, due almost entirely to the war, amounting to £16½ million up to the end of the current year, and £25½ million including the estimated expenditure for 1918-19.

B.—Expenditure from special grants for education, sanitation, etc., and financial position of Local Governments.

94. I give below a table similar to that in paragraph 111 of my speech last year, showing special grants made for these purposes from 1911-12 onwards and the extent to which they have been utilised.

(In thousands of pounds.)

—	Total grants given (1911-12 to 1918-19).		Total expenditure (1911-12 to 1918-19).	Balance expected to be available on 1st April 1919.

In view of war conditions, we have again had to ask Local Governments to restrict drawings on their balances, which include the unspent remainder of these special grants. But any outlay thus postponed is merely deferred till normal times return.

95. I have already reviewed in bulk the estimated Provincial receipts and expenditure for the current and the coming years. The total Provincial balances stood at £9·9 million on 1st April 1917 and are expected to amount to £12·1 million on 31st March 1919, the increase being due to excess of current revenue over expenditure in the present year. It will thus be seen that the provinces will have large scope for special beneficent expenditure when the war conditions which necessitate the conservation of their balances have passed away.

Moreover, we have under consideration, for application after the war is over and in connection with the scheme of Constitutional Reforms, a material advance in the direction of separating Imperial and Provincial finance, which will give the provinces larger and more independent resources, with further powers of supplementing these by taxation when such may be found necessary.

96. As I explained in connection with the Budget for the current year, we have taken steps to give the provinces more powers in the matter of specific items of expenditure, and we have under consideration, in connection with the scheme I have mentioned, the question of adding to these powers still further.

* Non-recurring figures only are given as the recurring grants are treated as having been fully worked up to, any savings obtained from those grants in particular years being added at the foot of the statement.

(a) Decrease as compared with last year's figures due to the Revised Estimate figure for the current year being less than the Budget forecast.

C.—Railways (Capital Outlay).

97. The following statement gives the figures of Railway capital expenditure, on State-owned lines included within the Railway programme, for the coming year and the four years preceding :—

——	1914-15.	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18, Revised.	1918-19, Budget.

Total	11,433,100	4,491,300	1,978,700	3,149,700	4,202,300

98. The Revised Estimate for 1916-17 provided for a total outlay of about £1⅓ million as against a Budget allotment of £3 million. The actuals however come to nearly £2 million, as it was found possible, in the closing weeks of the year, to lay out more money than had previously been thought feasible.

In the current year we provided £3·6 million, but are not able to work fully up to this owing to the extreme difficulty of obtaining materials from England. Next year we provide £4·2 million, which represents the limit of what can be expended having regard to the present special conditions.

99. As was the case this year, it has not been possible to provide for the construction of any new lines, and our construction expenditure is almost entirely restricted to the completion of certain projects of military importance which were commenced during the current year.

We propose to spend £3⅔ million on open line capital works and equipment. A large proportion of this expenditure will be devoted to rolling stock, and the remainder to works of open line improvement necessitated by a heavy and increasing traffic.

100. The difficulties attendant on the raising of capital in the open market which I referred to last year still continue, with the result that new construction by Branch Line companies has now been altogether suspended, and work on certain projects already sanctioned, such as the Tinnevelly-Tiruchendur and Trichinopoly-Pudukottai lines, has had to be deferred.

The policy of proceeding as far as possible, i.e., up to a stage short of actual flotation, with negotiations for the promotion of Branch Line companies after the war is being continued, and steps have also been taken to carry out surveys of new lines with a view to such projects being undertaken as soon as possible after the return of normal conditions.

101. The following figures show the capital outlay on all State lines up to the end of each year from 1914-15, and the net return obtained after deducting working expenses and interest charges :—

[Capital and profit figures in thousands of pounds]

——	1914-15.	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18, Revised.	1918-19, Budget.
Capital at charge at end of each year	361,560	364,858	365,483	367,310	370,114

Percentage of same to capital outlay	·60	1·12	2·05	2·77	2·49

102. The return on railway capital (excluding interest charges) was estimated in the current year's Budget at 5·47 per cent. We now estimate it at 6·52 in consequence of the large increase in net railway earnings which I have already dealt with in my review of the Revised Estimate. For next year we put it at 6·19 consequent on the smaller estimate of net earnings arrived at in the Budget.

The charges for interest in the current and ensuing years work out to 3·75 and 3·70 per cent. respectively on the capital outlay, so that the final net profit on railways is about 2¾ and 2½ per cent, respectively. These interest charges include certain annuity and sinking fund payments which really go to the discharge of debt.

D.—Irrigation (Capital outlay).

103. The financial position of our great irrigation undertakings may be gathered from the following table which brings up to date the information given in connection with previous Financial Statements. The figures are in thousands of pounds :—

104. The total length of main and branch canals and distributaries which had been constructed on irrigation works of all classes up to the end of the year 1916-17 amounted to 65,000 miles, and it is expected that this will have been increased by nearly 600 miles by the close of the present financial year. These channels command an area of about 52 million acres of culturable land, of which more than half was irrigated in 1916-17. It is estimated that some 25 million acres, or about a million acres less than last year, will be irrigated in the current year, the decrease being due to the copious monsoon, which diminished the demands on artificial irrigation.

105. In addition to the works actually in operation, 34 major works are either under construction, awaiting sanction or being examined by the professional advisers of Government. These are designed to command an additional culturable area of approximately 27 million acres, of which it is estimated that 11¼ millions will be irrigated annually, the capital cost involved being about £33 million.

106. Owing to the present financial stringency no new irrigation works of any magnitude were sanctioned during the current year. The investigation of several large projects was, however, continued, the most important being those relating to the Sukkur barrage on the Indus (Sind), the Sind Sagar Doab Canal (Punjab) and the Bhakra dam on the Sutlej (Punjab).

107. The Triple Canal project in the Punjab was declared complete on the 31st March 1917. It is anticipated that there will be a saving on the revised estimate of this work, amounting to about £690,000, and at the beginning of 1917 over a million acres had already been irrigated from these canals.

108. Development of important protective works in the Bombay Deccan continues to be hampered by difficulties in connection with the war, but good progress has been made on the Bhandardarra and Bhatgarh dams, as also on the Nira Right Bank canal.

Work on the Upper Swat canal in the North-West Frontier Province is practically complete, and the construction estimate will be closed on the 31st March 1918. The Tandula canal in the Central Provinces is also rapid y approaching completion.

109. In my speech of last year I referred to a project for the utilization of a portion of the water of the Sarda river in the United Provinces. The Local Government has recently sent up a comprehensive scheme for the utilization of the whole supply of the river in extensions of irrigation in Rohilkhand and Oudh. The estimated direct cost of the necessary works is over £5 million, and it is anticipated that the project would add more than 2 million acres to the irrigated area of the province.

E.—Delhi Expenditure (Capital outlay).

110. The expenditure during the current year under Head 51 is expected to amount to about £250,000 (Rs. 37 lakhs) as compared with a budget provision of £267,000 (Rs. 40 lakhs). The reduction is due to credits received for sale or transfer of materials to heads other than 51.

During the current year the aim has been to confine operations to such work on the central buildings and other features of the New City as can be carried out without the use of materials the price of which has been seriously affected by the war. A moderate rate of progress has been maintained in the case of Government House, the Secretariat buildings, the Viceroy's Court, and the great Place. Work has been put in hand on the construction of the Central Vista and on the erection of residential quarters for Indian clerks. A start has also been made on such portions of the storm water drainage scheme as do not involve the use of imported material. The larger schemes of sanitation, water supply, electric lighting and irrigation, which require the use of imported materials, have been left untouched. Considerable addition has been made to the stock of materials and tree planting operations on the roads have been pushed on.

It is expected that £267,000 (Rs. 40 lakhs) will be needed to carry on work on similar lines in 1918-19.

Retrospect and Conclusion.

111. This is the last Financial Statement which I shall have the honour to present to the Council. My tenure of office as Finance Member is drawing to its end, and it has been a particularly difficult and arduous one. When I took up my post I hoped that I might share the good fortune which my distinguished predecessor enjoyed in such ample measure. But dis aliter visum: in my first year I was beset with troubles arising out of the bank failures in 1913 in Northern India and an unsatisfactory monsoon; soon after that the war came upon us; and since then I have had to face a constant succession of difficult and abnormal circumstances.

I propose now to give a short summary of the most important events which have marked my term of office, for I think it is useful to have a retrospect of this sort, as showing us more clearly how we stand, not merely from year to year but taking a backward glance over the past.

112. I must ask the indulgence of the Council if, in this presentation of some of the events of the years during which I have had the honour of administering the finances of India, I permit myself to touch a personal note. When in July 1913 I took up the post which I shall ere long relinquish, I envisaged various problems the solution of which I hoped to be able to advance during my tenure of office. Like almost all financial problems they were closely inter-related, and progress in any one direction was bound to react on the general situation as a whole and facilitate the solution of the remainder.

The first of these questions arose out of the periodical money stringency which is a characteristic of the busy trade months of the year. The problem is a complex one, and not capable of solution by the application of any single method. But it can be materially influenced by the more liberal release of Government funds at the busy time of the year so that these may then be available for trade. In presenting my first Budget, after a few months' tenure of office, I was able to inform the Council that we had secured the assent of the Secretary of State to a policy of making loans from our balances to the Presidency Banks during the busy seasons. As I then explained, it can only be through the agency of these Central banking institutions that Government can hope to secure an effective and wise application of such resources as they can make available at times of stringency. By continued action in this direction, as also by the creation and maintenance of more intimate relations with these leading institutions, it was my hope that it might be possible to help in the further development of the trade and commerce of the country.

A second set of questions was connected with our currency note system. The expansion of our note circulation, satisfactory as it was, was still impeded by certain restrictions. Apart from any other consideration, it was in any case imperative in a country like India, where the cheque is not likely for many years to attain any large vogue up-country, to encourage the use of the currency note as a medium of exchange.

Thirdly, as I indicated in connection with my first Budget, I recognised that if, as I hoped, my tenure of office as Finance Member was to see a vigorous programme of capital expenditure on Railways and Irrigation, a courageous policy of borrowing in India was indispensable. It was clear that the traditional method of relying solely on a handful of wealthy investors or on the established banking institutions would no longer suffice ; that it must give way to a policy which would establish a direct nexus between the State and the small investor; and that the attraction to fructifying purposes of the small savings of small people must form one of the objects to which our efforts should be bent.

113. Let me now endeavour to indicate briefly how far these hopes have been realised, and how far the events of the last three and a half years of war have assisted or impeded their realisation, or have compelled their modification or postponement.

I am able to record with satisfaction the measure of success which has attended my efforts to demonstrate the readiness of Government to secure, by a more liberal utilisation of its funds, relief to commercial and financial interests in times of stringency. It has been my consistent policy to give proof of this desire by making temporary loans (as has been done on occasion) to the Presidency Banks ; by leaving in deposit with them, till actually required by us, the proceeds of our public loans ; by avoiding as much as possible the lock-up of funds in our reserve treasuries ; and by the maintenance with the Presidency Banks of balances at all times considerably, and at certain periods far, in excess of the standards previously observed. It is largely owing to action of this character that it has been possible to secure the money market against the strain to which our war finance must otherwise have exposed it, and in particular to raise the large sums we have recently obtained by way of loan without materially inconveniencing the market. A striking feature of our financial operations in the last year has been the way in which money has tended to return to the larger trade centres, in other words the extent to which there has been an increase in the supplies of floating capital in these centres. It would be premature to attempt to analyse the causes of this change in Indian money market conditions, but I think it can reasonably be hoped that this change has come to stay, and that one result will be that it will tend to eliminate to some extent the excessive seasonal stringency which has been in the past a characteristic of our money market during certain months of the year.

114. It also justifies the hope that greater dependence may hereafter be placed on the Indian money market for the raising of the funds necessary for the development of our railway and irrigation works, and it will likewise pave the way for the solution of the somewhat kindred question of the greater development of banking throughout the country. Let me here gratefully record my acknowledgment of the response which the Presidency Banks have extended to my desire to see the establishment of cordial and close relations between Government and them as representatives of the financial interests of the country. I have always looked on their Secretaries as non-official comrades, to be freely consulted in respect of loans and other matters affecting the money market, and I have met with ready and very valuable response in such cases.

115. An even greater degree of success than I dared hope has attended our efforts to secure the expansion of our currency note system. In the early months of the war, as the Council will recollect, the general dislocation of trade and finance brought about a temporary, though successfully met, run on our notes, while the restoration of confidence which followed on free and unrestricted payments in silver, pointed to the general soundness of our system and to the possibility of its further expansion by increases in the facilities for encashment. Accordingly, as I explained in my speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1916-17 (paragraphs 108-109), we proceeded with measures to secure the widest facilities for the exchange of silver against notes, not merely, as the law requires, at special currency centres, but at all district treasuries ; while we also made arrangements with the Presidency Banks for the issue and prompt encashment of notes at a number of their branches.

The results of these measures have been most gratifying, not only because they have made our currency notes more popular, but because they have enabled us to rely with greater boldness on this portion of our financial system to meet the added and continually growing demands on Government funds for the carrying on of the war and of our trade. Taking the figures as on 1st February, our gross circulation has increased, in round figures, from £42½ million in 1914 to £70 million in 1918; while the active circulation i.e., that portion of the note circulation which is held outside the reserve treasuries and the head offices of the Presidency banks, has grown between the same dates from £34½ million to £54¾ million.

We have now initiated the experiment of issuing small notes for Rs. 2½ and Re. 1 which, as I have already said, promise to prove a material success The popularity of these notes will, I trust, increase as time goes on.

116. The metallic portion of our Paper Currency Reserve represented on the 1st February nearly 53 per cent. of the active circulation, which compares with a 96 per cent. proportion on the same date in 1914. This evidences the fact that we have, under the stress of war finance, travelled far beyond the recommendations of the Chamberlain Commission in regard to the composition of the Reserve. The total invested portion now stands at £ 41 million as compared with £9·3 million in 1914, and we contemplate, as I have already explained, a further increase to £57 million. With the return of normal conditions, the permanent composition of the Reserve will need to be considered with reference to the recommendations of the Commission; for the investments in British Government Treasury Bills made in recent times are only as a temporary war measure. Meanwhile, as regards the pre-war holding of consols in the Paper Currency Reserve, we have provided by the establishment of a depreciation fund against loss in present value as compared with their purchase price

117. Equally gratifying are the results which have attended our efforts in relying on the Indian market for our capital borrowings. In 1913-14, allowing for repayment of maturing obligations and including the borrowing transactions of railway companies managing State owned lines, we raised in all £4·7 million, of which £2·8 million were borrowed in England. In the current year, as in 1916-17, we have kept completely out of the London market. Indeed, we have gone further. We have this year discharged £2 million of previous sterling debt, while the sum total of our net Indian borrowings has reached what would have been in normal times a great figure for any country, and is a gigantic one for us, viz., £65 million. I readily recognise that the borrowings of the current year have been abnormal, and specially stimulated by the patriotic consideration that—except as regards Treasury Bills, which are a new feature in Indian finance—the proceeds were to be handed over to His Majesty's Government for war purposes. It is also the case that the large and constant war disbursements by Government during the last two years have facilitated our borrowing operations. But even making allowances for these special features, there is a most striking contrast between the borrowings of 1917-18 and those of 1913-14. And if we take the figures for a wider period—for the four years ending 1913-14 as compared with those for the four years ending 1917-18—and omit from the latter our short-term Treasury Bills, the contrast is still very marked. In the first period our net borrowings were £4·8 million in England and £5·9 million in India—in all £10·7 million. The second period gives a total of £49 million, of which all but £3 million have been raised in India.

Next year again, as I have already informed the Council, we hope to draw on the Indian loan market to the extent of at least £47 million in respect of our war borrowing and fresh Treasury Bills, the latter representing the discharge value of the bills outstanding at end of 1917-18.

118. We have further opened up new borrowing sources, and I refer here specially to the postal sections of the last three loans and to the cash certificates. The former method of utilising the Post Office to get into touch with the small investor was introduced for the first time in 1915-16 when it gave us £⅓ million; while in 1916-17 it yielded a little less. But this year the postal section of the War Loan produced nearly £3 million, a larger sum than we raised by ordinary methods in any year between 1907-08 and 1913-14; while the cash certificates will have given us in this first year of their issue about £6½ million (gross), a result exceeding those of any of our public loans before the present year. In all, in the three years since we started borrowing through the Post Office, we have been able, through this innovation, to attract funds to the extent of over £10 million, the bulk of which is new money which would not otherwise have found its way into the Government loan chest and has to a considerable extent been drawn from hoards and current savings. I should like in this connection to express to Sir William Maxwell and his Post Office staff my warm appreciation of the zeal and success with which they have co-operated with the Finance Department in the working of these new schemes.

119. Some portion of the funds thus obtained no doubt represents money which has been deflected from the ordinary postal savings bank deposits, and in so far as this cause accounts for the decrease in these latter deposits as compared with the pre-war figures, there is no need to regret diversion to a more permanent form of investment. Post Office deposits, it will be remembered, suffered considerably from the dislocation caused by the outbreak of the war, and though the ground lost has not yet been fully recovered, the present figure (£ 10·4 million) is already somewhat in excess of the amount at the close of 1914-15. This result has been facilitated by an increase in the permissible limit of individual depositors' holdings which was introduced in the first year of my tenure of my office.

120. In reviewing the events of the last four years, I have unfortunately to record a decrease in the provision for capital expenditure. In 1913-14 this provision was £14 million: in the year which is coming to a close we expect to spend less than a third of that amount, namely, £3·9 million. Irrigation capital outlay has dropped from £1·3 million to £½ million, owing to the completion of large projects, such as the Triple Canal scheme in the Punjab, and to the fact that further projects involving heavy outlay are not yet ready for execution. Under Railways the provision for capital outlay has fallen from £12·3 million in 1913-14, the highest figure yet touched, to £3·1 million in the current year and £4·2 million in the Budget for 1918-19. This is, of course, a consequence of the great struggle in which the Empire is now engaged. The war imposes on us the necessity for conservation of our resources, and it also precludes us, even if we had the funds, from obtaining the material we should require for a large railway programme. I have always regarded these necessities with profound regret. In connection with the Budget for 1914-15 I explained the efforts we had then made to keep the railway programme up to a standard of £12 million, and I had hoped that if times had remained peaceful and prosperous we should be able during my tenure of office to go beyond that figure; but here again Fate has willed otherwise. One of the main problems which will face my successor when peace returns will be consideration of the way to find money for making up the necessary lee-way under railways, more especially in view of the strain to which our present equipment has been exposed by the heavy traffic demands, and the impossibilities of regular and thorough renewal of lines and rolling stock. So far as it has been in my power I have endeavoured to assist in the solution of this problem. The special investment of £20 million in Home Treasury Bills, to which I have referred in paragraph 34, has been made largely with a view to this contingency, so that it may provide a means of meeting the liabilities which will in one way or another come upon us after the war is over.

121. I will now make a few remarks on the various financial problems which have beset us during the last 3½ years. Briefly, the history of our war finance may be divided into two periods. The first period was marked, in India as elsewhere, by a general dislocation of trade and finance. We experienced a serious run on our savings bank deposits, and some panic encashment of our currency notes. There was a considerable demand for the remittance of money to London, and sterling drafts on London to the extent of £8¾ million had to be sold between August 1914 and January 1915 to maintain the exchange value of the rupee. This temporary want of confidence soon passed away, though it left as a legacy £14 million of temporary debt which we had to raise to meet our current requirements, viz., £7 million from the Gold Standard Reserve, and £7 million raised by the Secretary of State in India Bills in lieu of a permanent loan of £4½ million which he had contemplated when the Budget for 1914-15 was framed. But it was not until the autumn of 1915, that is to say when rather more than a year had elapsed since the outbreak of the war, that the tide set in which was to bring with it entirely different, and by reason of their novelty peculiarly difficult, problems.

122. The first period, then, was one calling for the consolidation and conservation of our resources. With a serious decline in the values of and demand for our leading exports, with prices of foodstuffs at an abnormally high level, with trade in a state of general depression, and with public confidence only lately recovered from the first shock of the war, prudence clearly dictated postponement of additional taxation in spite of a considerable temporary deficit. Meanwhile we did what we could in the form of indirect assistance to the mother country. During 1915-16 we reduced our net Home borrowings for capital expenditure from an estimated sum of £5½ million to about £2 million, and we also paid off £3 million of our borrowings from the Gold Standard Reserve. The object which we set before ourselves during the first period of our war finance was to abstain as far as possible from drawing on the resources of the London market, and to make provision, by the curtailment of expenditure in this country, to meet possible military contingencies.

123. By the autumn of 1915, the effects of the dislocation which set in on the outbreak of the war had passed away. A considerable demand made itself felt, mainly as a result of war conditions, for the products of this country, and the export trade, which had been seriously curtailed, began to show a marked and growing revival. The circumstances attending this restoration of active trade conditions rendered possible not only a continuance of the policy of abstaining from borrowing in London, but also the imposition of additional taxation in India. Accordingly we proceeded to strengthen our position by a programme of taxation, introduced in the Budget of 1916-17, which included the revision of our import tariff, save as regards the important item of piecegoods ; the imposition of new duties on the exports of jute and tea ; a small addition to the salt tax ; and the enhancement and graduation of the income tax. And as a logical sequence of the last mentioned measure, the Council has now before it a Bill for the material improvement of our Income Tax machinery. We abstained from any fresh borrowing in England and paid off the £7 million of India Bills referred to above (paragraph 121) as well as some India Bonds which fell due for redemption in the ordinary course. We also cleared off the £ 4 million which we still owed to the Gold Standard Reserve.

124. We had now cleared the decks for further action, and in 1917-18 we felt able to take the step, which we had always hoped we might be in a position to take, of making a direct pecuniary contribution by India towards the prosecution of the war. As I have said, we had now discharged the temporary debt liabilities which we had been compelled to undertake by the dislocation of our finances caused by the war. The additional taxation imposed in the previous year had materially added to the strength of our finances, while the insistent demand for exports from this country made it clear that we need not anticipate the prejudicial effect on exchange which would otherwise have been caused by borrowing a large amount in this country for the purpose of remittances to London. We were thus able, with general approval, to offer a special capital contribution of £100 million to His Majesty's Government towards the expenses of the war, and to meet the recurring charges which this offer entailed by the imposition of additional taxation estimated to produce at the outset £3⅓ million, the balance being provided by the surplus revenue which was accruing to us through the taxation of 1916-17. The new taxation took the form of :—

(a) A super-tax on incomes.

(b) An increase in the export tax on jute.

(c) A small surcharge on railway goods traffic.

(d) Raising of the import duty on cotton piecegoods to the general tariff rate, while maintaining at the lower previous level the excise duty on local cotton manufactures.

This last measure had the effect of removing, at any rate in large part, a grievance which had been felt for many years in India.

125. These new sources of revenue account in considerable measure for the fact that our Imperial revenue receipts in the current year are about £22 million more than in 1913-14. Of this increase about £9½ million is due to the additional taxation of the last two years, and of the remaining £12½ million about two-fifths is accounted for by increase in net profits on Railways, which have grown from about £4¾ million in 1913-14 to £10 million in 1917-18. Concomitantly with this increase in our revenue, we have, of course, to record an increase in Imperial expenditure, which is now £19 million higher than the figure for 1913-14. £9 million of this accrues under Military charges and is almost entirely due to the war, and £6 million represents the interest and sinking fund charges in respect of our war contribution of £100 million to His Majesty's Government. There is also an increase of over £1 million under Political charges, due to the war, including special expenditure in Persia and the cost of militia employed on the North-West frontier. Put in other words, a growth of £16 million in what may be called war charges has been met to the extent of £9½ million by taxation, while the balance has been found from other expansion of revenue.

126. This brief review of our war finance would be incomplete without reference to the magnitude and difficulty of our ways and means operations in the last two years. I have, however, dealt at some length with this matter in an earlier portion of my speech, and I need only now cite certain salient figures which will show how heavy this burden has been. War expenditure for His Majesty's Government and analogous items have involved us in a net outlay in India of £128 million during the last 3½ years. At the same time, we have had to meet heavy Council drawings representing the demand of trade for fresh funds in this country. These increased from £20 million in 1915-16 to £33 million in 1916-17, and will this year amount to about £35 million.

Repayment in respect of these transactions has been in England, and to find the requisite funds for our disbursements here has been a matter of great and growing difficulty and anxiety. A large portion of the sums reimbursed to us in London by His Majesty's Government on account of war outlay has been re-lent to them for war purposes by investment in their Treasury Bills. As I stated in an earlier part of my speech, these investments, which are of course quite apart from our gift of £100 million, will amount to £67 million at the end of the current year, while the further investment from our Paper Currency Reserve contemplated next year will add £16 million more.

127. I have already described the present composition of the Paper Currency Reserve, and need only add now that our Gold Standard Reserve at present stands at £34 million against £25½ million in 1913-14. This increase is, of course, mainly due to the coinage of silver in the last few years. Every effort has been made to obtain as ample supplies of silver for India as were available, and our recognition of the probable requirements in this respect was made at a date considerably earlier than is generally known. In all, we have in the last four years coined £33 million worth of fresh rupees, which is double the amount coined in the similar period ending with 1913-14. That none of this coinage has been redundant is shown by the prompt way in which it has been absorbed.

128. It will be seen from these figures and remarks how much ground we have traversed during the last few years; and what strikes one first and last is the way in which the war has brought out the financial strength of India. No one could have imagined, for example, three years ago that we should be able, with a moderate increase of taxation, to offer His Majesty's Government £100 million as a special war contribution over and above the additional charges which the war has entailed on our own military budgets; that we could borrow in India anything like as much as we have done, raising, for example, more than one-third of the £100 million war contribution by direct loan in this country in a single year; or again, that we should have found it possible to meet, as we have done, the enormous demands for war supplies to His Majesty's Government and the immediate outlay they have involved. Generally favourable monsoons (taking the period as a whole and India as a whole) have assisted in bringing about this result. Our trade conditions, again, have been wonderfully prosperous, considering all the adverse circumstances which had to be faced, and have indeed led to the paradoxical result that the pecuniary resources of the Government of India have had to be strained to the utmost to meet the demands on us necessitated by the Secretary of State's Council drawings for the assistance of trade, coming as these did on the top of large war expenditure on behalf of the Home Government repaid in London.

129. My present speech and previous utterances of mine have given the Council some idea of the difficulties and anxieties which the war has brought about in the realm of Indian finance and the special expedients which had to be resorted to in order to meet a succession of most difficult and constantly changing situations, based on circumstances for which there was no precedent in the period of pre-bellum finance. I say some idea advisedly, because transactions which can be very briefly described in our annual Budget chronicles or in Press communiqués have often been the fruit of long and detailed labour and thought. For example, as regards the action taken in respect of the amount of the Secretary of State's weekly Council drawings and rates of exchange, communications exchanged at various times between us and the India Office would fill a respectable little book. I may say without the least exaggeration that since the war began I have never been free from acute anxieties in regard to one or more important matters with which the Finance Department is directly or indirectly concerned, and decisions have often had to be taken at very short notice. Looking back with present knowledge on this crowded past, I do not, of course, claim that everything that has been done was done in the best possible way.

'That man was vain, and false as vain,
Who said, were he ordained to run
His whole career of life again,
He would do all that he had done.'

And this applies equally to the short official life of the holder of a high office such as mine, especially in the circumstances of this kaleidoscopic war time when, in the financial sphere as well as in the military, the events of one year mock at the fears or hopes of the year before. But I have done my best to serve India in these troublous times: and I think I can claim that her interests have not suffered at my hands; that the difficulties which beset us have been adequately met; that our financial structure has well withstood the storms which have beaten upon it; and that efforts have been successfully made to strengthen its walls and foundations.

130. I should like to add that such credit as may be accorded to me in respect of the policy and actions of the last few years must be shared by my able lieutenants in the Finance Department. I owe a great deal, as I have always acknowledged, to their loyal and efficient co-operation, and they, in their turn, have been most ably seconded by those who work under them. I am indeed proud of the Department I am shortly to quit and in which I have myself served in a subordinate as well as in a directing capacity.

I must also acknowledge with grateful thanks the constant help and support I have received from Your Excellency and Lord Hardinge, and from my colleagues, past and present, on the Executive Council. For, though the fact seems to be rather ignored in some quarters, while the Finance Member has to propose action in respect of important questions of financial policy, the final decision, on this side, rests with the collective Government.

Lastly, I have to acknowledge with gratitude the support I have received from my non-official friends in the Legislative Council. Some of them have every now and then differed from me in regard to particular matters, but they have given me most welcome and helpful support in respect of financial policy as a whole, recognising that I love India and that her interests have ever been foremost in my thoughts.

All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901 :—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777—79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

* The figures under "Rice, husked" represent the prices of common rice

NOTE.—These statistics are compiled from the fortnightly returns furnished by District Officers to Local Governments and Administrations, etc. They relate to the wholesale prices in the principal markets (not necessarily district headquarters) in each province on the last (or nearest mart) day of each fortnight.

(The figures state prices in rupees per ten maunds)

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 16, 1918.

Final General Memorandum on the COTTON crop of 1917-18

This memorandum is based on reports furnished by provinces, which comprise the entire cotton area of India. It deals with the final reports on both the early and the late crops of the season.

The total area reported is 24,781,000 acres, which is 3,036,000 acres, or nearly 14 per cent more than the revised figure of last year. The total estimated yield is 4,036,000 bales of 400 lbs each, which is 10 per cent below the revised figure of last year. The detailed figures for each of the provinces are stated below (in thousands) :—

A statement showing the present estimates of area and yield according to the recognised trade descriptions of cotton is given below. Of the total yield Oomras represent 34 per cent, Bengal-Sind and Dholleras 16 per cent each, Broach and Coompta-Dharwars 8 per cent each, Salems (including Cambodias) 6 per cent, and Westerns and Northerns 5 per cent.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Bombay (26·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The latest reports show the total area under both early and late cotton to be 7,312,000 acres (3,217,000 acres being in the Native States excluding Baroda), which is 15 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 1,331,000 bales (612,000 bales being in the Native States excluding Baroda), showing a decrease of 10 per cent as compared with that of last year. Since the publication of the December report, the crop in Gujarat has, to some extent, improved but owing to excessive late rains the late crop is only just showing bolls, and its picking is not expected to begin before March. The Deccan crop has all been picked except in Satara, where it is still in bolls. The excessive late rains had spoiled the crop, particularly in the black soil tracts of Khandesh, Nasik, and Nagar, and the yield has been considerably below the average. In the Karnatak the crop is improving everywhere under favourable weather conditions, and is bearing flowers and bolls. The area and outturn of cotton by trade descriptions in the Bombay Presidency (including Baroda but excluding Sind) are :—

		Acres	Bales
Oomras	Khandesh	1,403,000	187,000
	Barsi and Nagar	164,000	21,000
Dholleras . .		3,309,000	660,000
Bengal-Sind (Rajputana)		68,000	20,000
Broach . .		1,348,000	315,000
Coompta-Dharwars .		1,474,000	303,000
Westerns		461,000	65,000

Central Provinces and Berar (20·4 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown is reported to be 4,582,000 acres (3,214,000 acres being in Berar), which is 4 per cent above the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 591,000 bales (428,000 bales being in Berar), which is 14 per cent short of last year's yield. The weather conditions have been on the whole unfavourable for the crop, owing to the excessive rains of September and October.

(a) Including Native States.

(b) Includes Hyderabad. A revised classification of Hyderabad cotton is still under consideration.

Madras (10·9 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown up to 1st February is estimated at 2,592,000 acres, which is nearly 20 per cent above the final figures of last year. The increase is mainly due to extensive sowings of 'Cambodia' cotton stimulated by high prices obtained last year. Late sowings of the same variety, as a second crop after rice, are still going on in the south. There has also been an increase in the area under 'Northerns and Westerns,' especially in Anantapur and Cuddapah where cotton has replaced groundnut. The total yield is estimated at 569,000 bales, which is 64 per cent above the finally revised figure of last year. The early sown 'Tinnevelly' crop was damaged by unprecedented heavy rains in January, but will probably recover; the late sown crop has not been damaged and may be expected to yield a good crop. The 'Cambodia' crop is generally good and is excellent in the Trichinopoly district. The 'Northerns' crop will be almost a bumper one. The 'Westerns' crop has suffered from the effects of the heavy rains of the last two years, which have made the black soil very foul with weeds, but may be expected to give an average outturn. The 'Cocanadas' crop is a little below normal owing to excessive rain. The area and outturn of cotton according to trade descriptions are as follows:—

	Acres	Bales
Tinnevellys . .	577,000	136,000
Salems . . .	174,000	29,000
Cambodias . .	471,000	203,000
Northerns and Westerns	1,089,000	152,000
Cocanadas . . .	261,000	47,000
Others . . .	20,000	2,000

Punjab (7·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is now reported to be 1,799,000 acres (158,000 acres being in the Native States), which exceeds last year's area by 55 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 271,000 bales (29,000 bales being in the Native States), which is 19 per cent below last year's yield. The season was not favourable, owing to the abnormally heavy rains and floods after the middle of August.

United Provinces (5·5 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown is reported to be 1,316,000 acres (10,000 acres being in the Rampur State), which is 11 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 198,000 bales (including 2,000 bales in the Native State), which is 36 per cent below last year's yield. As stated in the December forecast the crop was seriously affected by continuous and excessive rainfall.

Sind (1·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 245,000 acres (4,000 acres being in the Native State of Khairpur), which is 2 per cent above the area of last year. The crop is reported to have suffered from excessive rains, late inundation, and deficient water supply, and also from frost at the end of December. According to district returns the yield is estimated at 48,000 bales, as against 78,000 bales last year, but the provincial Director of Agriculture remarks that, considering the character of the season and the condition of the crop, the district estimates appear somewhat low and that the crop is probably considerably larger than what the district returns indicate. In view of these facts the total outturn of the present crop, as estimated in this Department, will not be far short of 67,000 bales.

Burma (1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is now reported to be 246,000 acres, which is 10 per cent above that of last year. The increase is attributed to good prices realized last year and also to a favourable season. The yield is estimated at 54,000 bales which is 35 per cent above last year's yield. At the beginning of the season sowing was somewhat delayed owing to a shortage of rain, and in places untimely middle and later rains were expected to affect the outturn. The crop has, however, turned out well.

Bihar and Orissa (0·4 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area under both early and late crops is estimated at 69,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 17,000 bales, which is 6 per cent above that of last year. Weather conditions have, on the whole, been favourable, although the crops were somewhat damaged by excessive rain and floods in places.

Bengal (0·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown with both early and late crops is estimated at 71,000 acres, which is 3 per cent below that of last year. The yield is estimated at 19,000 bales, which is 5 per cent less than last year's yield. The weather conditions were generally unfavourable, chiefly owing to excessive rainfall in June, July, and October. The early crop has suffered most, and a reduced outturn is expected. The condition of the late crop is reported to be fair. The area and outturn of cotton according to trade descriptions are:—

	Acres	Bales
Bengal-Sind	4,000	1,000
Comillas	67,000	18,000

North-West Frontier Province (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is reported to be 38,000 acres, which is 36 per cent in excess of that of last year. The yield is estimated at 10,000 bales, which is 67 per cent above last year's yield.

Assam (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is estimated at 32,000 acres, being the same as last year's area. The yield is estimated at 12,000 bales, which is 9 per cent above that of last year. The increase is attributed to favourable weather everywhere except in Nowgong.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India) reports 70,000 acres and 14,000 bales as compared with 47,000 acres and 48,000 bales last year. The crop was damaged by abnormally heavy rains.

Hyderabad (14·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is reported to be 3,451,000 acres, which is 8 per cent more than last year's area. The estimate of yield stands at 450,000 bales as against 500,000 bales last year. Some rain has of late fallen in the Dominions, but it is not likely to change the conditions.

Central India (6 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total yield is estimated at 116,000 bales on an area of 1,454,000 acres. These figures indicate a decrease of 63 per cent in yield, but an increase of 2 per cent in area as compared with last year. The crop was damaged by excessive rain. The detailed figures of area are:—

Baroda (3·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India) reports 915,000 acres as compared with 707,000 acres last year, or an increase of 29 per cent. The yield is estimated at 240,000 bales, which is 40 per cent above that of last year.

Rajputana (1·6 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area and yield are estimated at 435,000 acres and 54,000 bales, as against 334,000 acres and 128,000 bales last year. There is thus an increase of 30 per cent in area, but a decrease of 58 per cent in yield. The crop was seriously affected by excessive rain. The detailed figures of area are :—

Mysore (0·5 per cent of the total area under cotton in India) reports 154,000 acres as compared with 126,000 acres last year. The yield is estimated at 23,000 bales, which is 44 per cent above tha of last year. The area and outturn of cotton according to trade descriptions are :—

Production and Consumption, etc.—The following statement compares the estimates of the total outturn of cotton in India for the last three years with the sum of net exports and internal consumption, this latter being computed on a basis arrived at in agreement with the Bombay Cotton Trade Association (the figures are in thousands of bales of 400 lbs each).

Estimates of the 'carry over' from one year to another are not taken into account.

Chart.—The chart below shows the present estimates of area and yield for all India as compared with the finally revised figures of the preceding nine years.

The cotton crop in foreign countries.—The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, regarding the cotton crop of 1917 in foreign countries may be summarised as follows :—In the United States of America the area sown is 34.586,000 acres and the approximate estimate of yield about 15,027,000 bales of 400 lbs (or 12,022,000 bales of 500 lbs each). as compared with 35,224,000 acres and 14,516,000 bales of 400 lbs (or 11,613.000 bales of 500 lbs) in 1916. In Egypt the area sown is 1,740,000 acres, as against 1,718,000 acres last year.

From un-official sources it appears that during October the temperature in Lower Egypt was generally favourable, notwithstanding the prevalence of cool nights. Boll-worm continued to cause damage. In Upper Egypt and Fayoum the temperature was generally irregular, rather cool during the first fortnight, but better towards the end of the month. Dews have been frequent. The pods of second pickings suffered from pink worm. The yield is estimated at about 1,600,000 bales of 400 lbs each.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 14, 1918

Final General Memorandum on the GROUNDNUT crop of the Season 1917-18.

This memorandum is based upon reports received from the three provinces of Madras, Bombay, and Burma, which comprise 99 per cent of the entire groundnut area of British India.

The total area returned is 1,894,000 acres as compared with 2,334,000 acres (revised figure) for 1916-17, or a decrease of 19 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 1,042,000 tons of nuts in shell as against 1,196,000 tons (revised figure) for last year, or a decrease of 13 per cent. Climatic conditions have not, on the whole, been favourable for the crop. Failure of rains at sowing time restricted the area sown, while excessive rains damaged the crop in parts of Bombay, and of Burma. The fall in prices, due mainly to lack of freight for export is also responsible for the smaller area put under the crop this year.

The details for the provinces are given below :—

Final Estimate

Province	Estimated total yield		Area		Average yield per acre
	1917-18	1916-17	1917-18	1916-17	1917-18	1916-17
	Tons	Tons	acres	acres	lbs.	lbs
Madras . . .	707,000	825,000	1,412,000	1,793,000	1,122	1,031
Burma . . .	102,000	111,000	248,000	265,000	921	938
Bombay (including Native States)	233,000	260,000	234,000	276,000	2,230	2,110
Total .	1,042,000	1,196,000	1,894,000	2,334,000	1,233	1,148

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Madras (76·2 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The total area up to the end of January is estimated at 1,412,000 acres as against 1,793,000 acres, the final area of last year, or a decrease of 21 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 707,000 tons, which is 14 per cent below the estimate of last year. The greatest decrease in area has taken place in the Deccan, where the area is little more than half of that grown last year. Here a failure of rain at sowing time, combined with the fall in prices, led cultivators to substitute cotton and cereals for groundnut. The crop in South Arcot is somewhat below normal, while in Madura and Ramnad it is reported to be good. Elsewhere average crops are reported.

Burma (12·4 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The total area is estimated at 248,000 acres, which is 6 per cent below the final estimate of last year. The total yield is estimated at 102,000 tons as against 111,000 tons, the revised figure of last year, or a decrease of 8 per cent. The decrease in area is due to the low price fetched by the crop last year, and also to the substitution of beans for groundnut, where possible. Want of early rain delayed sowing operations and subsequent untimely rains slightly damaged the crop in Pakokku.

Bombay (10·5 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The total area is reported to be 234,000 acres (56,000 acres being in Native States) which is 15 per cent below the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 233,000 tons (49,000 tons being in Native States) which is 10 per cent less than last year's yield. Continuous heavy rains in Gujarat damaged the crop to some extent and it had to be removed in places. Elsewhere it did fairly well. In the Deccan both the irrigated and the unirrigated crops throve well under the favourable rains of August and September, but the subsequent heavy rains injured it in places, particularly in the east and south, where it is principally grown. The condition of the crop is generally reported to be fair to good. In the Karnatak the early crop suffered somewhat from excessive late rains, but the late crop is doing fairly well.

Exports.—The quantities exported by sea to foreign countries during the ten months (April to January) of the official years 1916 17 and 1917-18 and during the whole of the preceding four official years have been as follows :—

—	From Madras.	From Bombay	From Burma.	From other provinces.	Total.
	Tons	Tons	Tons	Tons	Tons
1913-14 . . .	197,300	53,700	26,900	..	277,900
1914-15 . . .	115,200	21,100	1,900	100	138,300
1915-16 . . .	151,200	24,100		100	175,400
1916-17 . . .	66,900	74,400	2,200	300	143,800

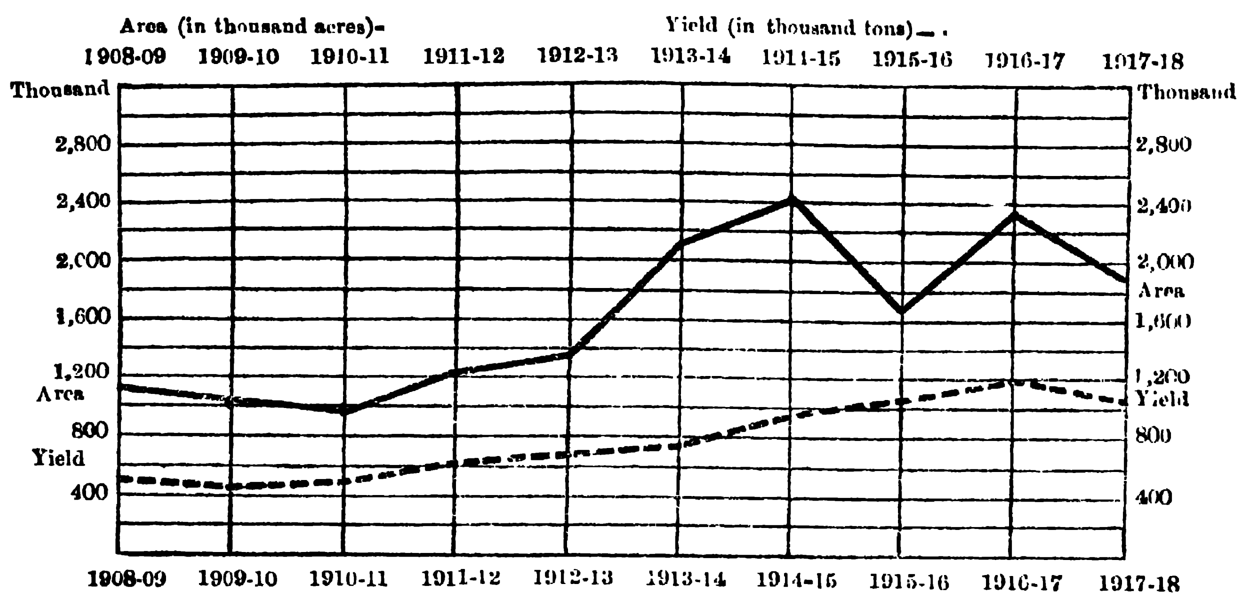
1917-18 (ten months)	46,100	45,800	700	3,600	96,200

Prices and Freights.—The figures below show the prices (per cwt) of groundnut at the end of January 1918 and at the same date in the four preceding years :—



I.—Prices.

End of January	Madras per cwt.	Bombay per cwt.	Rangoon per cwt.

1917	5 13 2	9 10 0	5 6 0
1918	6 1 5	8 5 0	5 12 1

II.—Freights.

Freights per ton from Madras to Marseilles (which receives nearly four-fifths of the total exports) were £16-0-0 in January, 1918, against £12-5-0 and £8-0-0 in the same month of 1917 and 1916, respectively. The quotations are all nominal.

Chart.—The chart below shows the present figures of area and yield as compared with the finally revised figures of the preceding nine years.

Joint Stock Companies.

JANUARY, 1918.

During the month under report, 21 companies were registered with an authorised capital of R1,24 lakhs, Bombay alone accounting for R78 lakhs. For the ten months, April 1917 to January 1918, there were 204 companies registered, as against 151 companies in the corresponding period of the previous year. The authorised capital of these 204 companies was R23,58 lakhs, as against R13,14 lakhs for 151 companies floated in the same period of 1916-1917. The largest flotation in January was that of the Great India Fire Insurance Company, Bombay (R50 lakhs), followed by the Bombay Stock Exchange, Bombay (R25 lakhs), and the Mussoorie Development Company, Calcutta, (R20 lakhs).

NOTE 1. Where a person or firm mentioned in the List has more than one address in the country or group of countries under which the name of the person or firm appears all dealings in that country, or in any country in the group with such person or firm are prohibited, even in cases where one only of the addresses, or one only of the countries, is specifically mentioned.

NOTE 2. Trading is prohibited under the Trading with the Enemy Proclamations of 25 June, and 10 November, 1915 (which were republished by the Government of India as notifications in the Commerce and Industry Department, Nos. 12221-W and 861-W., dated respectively the 24th July and 11th December, 1915), with any person or firm of enemy nationality resident or carrying on business in China, Siam, Persia, Morocco, Liberia or Portuguese East Africa. Persons or firms are therefore prohibited from trading with any person or firm of enemy nationality in any of those countries, even though such person or firm is not mentioned by name in the above Schedule.

NOTE 3. It is not unusual for firms in Holland and the Netherland East Indies to be registered under names commencing with descriptive terms such as "Handel Maatschappy" (Trading Company) or "Naamlooze Venootschap" (Limited Liability Company). In such cases it has been found more convenient to publish the firm under its proper name followed by the general descriptive term "Handel Maatschappy" or "Naamlooze Venootschap" (N.V.) as in the case of an English company. For instance, Handel Maatschappy van den Berg & Company, and Naamlooze Venootschap de Komeet v/h Dumonceau Frères will be found under "Berg" and "Komeet" respectively, and not under "Handel" or "Naamlooze."

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 27th February, 1918, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. I OF 1918.

An Act further to amend the Indian Forest Act, 1878.

VII of 1878.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Forest Act, 1878 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Indian Forest (Amendment) Act, 1918.

VII of 1878.

Amendment of section 29, Act VII of 1878.

2. In clause (b) of section 29 of the Indian Forest Act, 1878 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), for the word "twenty" the word "thirty" shall be substituted.

Insertion of new section 52A, Act VII of 1878.

3. After section 52 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Power to release property seized under section 52.

"52A. Any Forest-officer of a rank not inferior to that of a Ranger who, or whose subordinate, has seized any tools, boats, carts or cattle, under the provisions of section 52 may release the same on the execution by the owner thereof of a bond for the production of the property so released, if and when so required, before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the offence on account of which the seizure has been made."

Amendment of section 63, Act VII of 1878.

4. In section 63 of the said Act after the words "without unnecessary delay" the words "and subject to the provisions of this Act as to release on a bond" shall be inserted.

Insertion of new section 63A, Act VII of 1878.

5. After section 63 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Power to release on a bond a person arrested.

"63A. Any Forest-officer of a rank not inferior to that of a Ranger who, or whose subordinate, has arrested any person under the provisions of section 63 may release such person on his executing a bond to appear, if and when so required, before the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of the nearest police-station."

Amendment of section 78, Act VII of 1878.

6. (1) Section 78 of the said Act shall be re-numbered section 78 (1), and in the same section for the words "shall assist any Forest-officer or Police-officer—

(a) in extinguishing any fire occurring in such forest;

2. After section 22 of Act II of 1864 (An Act to provide for the administration of civil and criminal justice at Aden) (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Power to appoint Additional Sessions Judge.

"22A. (1) The Governor of Bombay in Council may appoint any Assistant Resident to be an Additional Sessions Judge.

(2) Subject to the provisions of this Act, an Additional Sessions Judge shall exercise the same criminal jurisdiction as is conferred by this Act on the Resident, and the provisions of this Act regarding criminal procedure shall apply to him in the same way and to the same extent as they do to the Resident.

(3) An Additional Sessions Judge shall try only such cases and appeals as the Resident by general or special order may direct him to try.

(4) Nothing in section 19 of this Act shall apply to cases tried by or the proceedings of an Assistant Resident when exercising the powers of a Court of Session."

Amendment of section 31 of Act II of 1864.

3. In section 31 of the said Act, after the words "Court of the Resident", wherever they occur, the words "and the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge" shall be inserted, and for the words "said Court" the words "said Courts" shall be substituted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of the Bill is to enable the Bombay Government to appoint an Assistant Resident at Aden as an Additional Sessions Judge. Under Act II of 1864 the powers of the Court of Session are vested solely in the Resident, who is at the same time General Officer Commanding at Aden. Statistics show that an increasing amount of judicial work falls on the Resident, and it is thought desirable to relieve him of this burden. The Bill provides, by an amendment of Act II of 1864, that the Additional Sessions Judge shall try only such criminal cases as are made over to him by the Resident, and that his powers and jurisdiction shall be subject to the same limitations as those of the Resident.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 1st March 1918 :—

No. 5 OF 1918.

A Bill to amend the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1917.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1917; It is hereby enacted as follows :— XIX of 1917.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1918.

Amendment of section 2, Act XIX of 1917.

. In section 2 of the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1917, for the words "four hundred and twenty millions" the words "six hundred and sixty millions" shall be substituted. XIX of 1917.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

BY section 2 of the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act of 1917 (XIX of 1917), amending section 3 of the Indian Paper Currency (Temporary Amendment) Act, 1917 (XI of 1917) the maximum limit for the issue of currency notes against Treasury bills is at present fixed at 42 crores of rupees. The present Bill provides for an additional power of investment in Treasury bills to the extent of 24 crores of rupees. This legislation will have operation only during the continuance of the war and for a period of six months thereafter.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of Cinematographs was presented to the Indian Legislative Council on the 27th February, 1918 :—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of Cinematographs was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

Paper No. 1.—From Chief Commissioner, Delhi, No. 8285-Home, dated 27th September, 1917; from Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara, No. 1304-C.—690, dated 6th November, 1917; from Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 3540, dated 7th November, 1917; from Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 93-K.-XIX, dated 19th November, 1917; from Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 449-T., dated 24th November, 1917, and enclosure; from Government, United Provinces, No. 3125, dated 26th November, 1917; and from Government, Punjab, No. 22095-Genl., dated 27th November, 1917, and enclosure.

Paper No. 2.—From Government, Bihar and Orissa, No. 105-A.—23-J. T., dated 5th December, 1917; from Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, No. 5035-G., dated 20th December, 1917; from Government, Madras, No. 2724, dated 23rd December, 1917, and enclosures; from Agent to the Governor-General and Chief Commissioner, Baluchistan, No. 3687-R., dated 27th December, 1917; and from Government, Burma, No. 574-4-L.--6, dated 13th December, 1917, and enclosures.

Paper No. 3.—From Government, Bombay, No. 62, dated 5th January, 1918, and enclosures; from Manager, Educational Kinematograph, Hyderabad, Sind, dated 8th November, 1917, and enclosures, and from Government, Bengal, No. 460-P., dated 14th January, 1918.

Paper No. 4.—From Calcutta High Court, No. 525, dated 1st February, 1918.

2. We have accepted the recommendation of the local administration and have altered sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill so as to make the Bill apply to British Baluchistan proprio vigore.

3. We think that it is desirable that there should be an interval between the enactment of the Bill and its coming into force in order to enable the necessary machinery to be established. We have therefore provided by the addition of a new sub-clause to clause 1 that the Act shall come into effect from such date as the Governor General in Council may notify. We understand from the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill that it will not be brought into force earlier than the 1st of July.

4. In clause 4 we have inserted a reference to the town of Rangoon as we believe the powers conferred by that clause would appropriately be exercised in that place by the Commissioner of Police.

5. We think that the licensing authority should be subject to the general control of the Local Government, and we have provided for this by a slight addition to the last sub-clause of clause 5.

6. In clause 6 we have, in addition to the owner, made the person in charge of a cinematograph, liable for using it or allowing it to be used in contravention of the Act. We have substituted for the word 'allows' in the second place where that word occurs, the word 'permits' as we wish to make it clear that it is authorised use and not unauthorised use that determines the liability of the owner of the place where the exhibition is given.

7. We understand that the authorities to be constituted under clause 7 will, as a rule, be authorities whose certificates will be valid throughout British India. It has been pointed out to us that cases may well arise where a film the exhibition of which might not be objectionable in many parts of India would, owing to local conditions, stand on a different footing in other parts, and we have therefore inserted a provision enabling any certificate to be restricted by the Local Government either generally in its province or in any part thereof.

8. We think that the power to make rules for the purpose of securing the public safety might well in some cases be delegated to the Local Governments concerned, and we have therefore added a provision to the rule-making power in clause 8 to provide for this.

9. In deference to a considerable body of opinion we have omitted clause 10 of the Bill as we think there is some force in the contention that specific legislation should be undertaken, if necessary, to deal with the class of performances referred to in that clause.

10. We have made a few minor drafting alterations in the Bill to which we need not allude in detail.

11. We do not think that the Bill has been so altered as to require re-publication.

12. The Bill was, as ordered by the Council, published in the Gazette of India on the 8th September, 1917.

BILL No. 11 OF 1917.

[AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of Cinematographs.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of cinematographs; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Cinematograph Act, 1917.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India including British Baluchistan.

(3) It shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

"Cinematograph" includes any apparatus for the representation of moving pictures or series of pictures;

"Place" includes also a house, building, tent or vessel; and

"Prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act.

Cinematograph exhibitions to be licensed.

3. Save as otherwise provided in this Act, no person shall give an exhibition by means of a cinematograph elsewhere than in a place licensed under this Act, or otherwise than in compliance with any conditions and restrictions imposed by such license.

Licensing authority.

4. The authority having power to grant licenses under this Act (hereinafter referred to as the licensing authority) shall be the District Magistrate, or, in a Presidency-town or in the town of Rangoon, the Commissioner of Police:

Provided that the Local Government may, by notification in the local official gazette, constitute for the whole or any part of a province such other authority as it may specify in the notification to be the licensing authority for the purposes of this Act.

Restrictions on powers of licensing authority.

5. (1) The licensing authority shall not grant a license under this Act unless it is satisfied that—

(a) the rules made under the Act have been substantially complied with; and

(b) adequate precautions have been taken in the place in respect of which the license is to be given to provide for the safety of persons attending exhibitions therein:

(2) A condition shall be inserted in every license that the licensee will not exhibit, or permit to be exhibited, in such place any film other than a film which has been certified as suitable for public exhibition by the prescribed authority, and which, when exhibited, displays the prescribed mark of that authority, and has not been altered or tampered with in any way since such mark was affixed thereto.

(3) Subject to the foregoing provisions of this section, and to the control of the Local Government the licensing authority may grant licenses under this Act to such persons as it thinks fit, and on such terms and conditions and subject to such restrictions as it may determine.

Punishment for contravention of this Act and rules made thereunder.

6. (1) If the owner or person in charge of a cinematograph uses the same or allows it to be used, or if the owner or occupier of any place permits that place to be used, in contravention of the provisions of this Act or the rules made thereunder, or of the conditions and restrictions upon or subject to which any license has been granted under this Act, he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees and, in the case of a continuing offence, with a further fine which may extend to one hundred rupees for each day during which the offence continues, and his license (if any) shall be liable to be revoked by the licensing authority.

(2) If any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Act committed by him in respect of any film, the convicting Court may further direct that the film shall be forfeited to His Majesty.

Certification of films.

7. (1) The Governor General in Council shall, by notification in the Gazette of India, constitute as many authorities as he may think fit for the purposes of examining and certifying films as suitable for public exhibition. The certificate of any such authority shall be valid in such area as may be specified in the notification.

(2) If any such authority after examination considers that a film is suitable for public exhibition, it shall cause the film to be marked in the prescribed manner.

(3) If the authority is of opinion that a film is not suitable for public exhibition, it shall inform the person applying for the certificate of its decision, and such person may, within thirty days from the date of such decision, appeal for a reconsideration of the matter by the Local Government whose decision shall be final.

(4) Where the area for which a certificate has been granted includes territory in more than one province the appeal shall lie to such Local Government as may be specified in that behalf in the notification under which the certifying authority is constituted.

(5) The District Magistrate, or in a Presidency town or in the town of Rangoon, the Commissioner of Police may, after recording his reasons in writing, by order suspend the certificate of any film pending the orders of the Local Government, and during such suspension the film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in that district or town. He shall forthwith forward a copy of his order to the Local Government to which he is subordinate and such Local Government may, in its discretion either discharge his order or, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that the film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole or any part of the province.

(6) The Local Government may, of its own motion, by notification in the local official Gazette direct that a film covered by a certificate valid in the province shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole or any part of the province.

(7) The exhibition of a film to which any order or direction under sub-sections (5) or (6) is for the time being applicable shall, in the area to which such order or direction relates, be deemed to be a contravention of the condition mentioned in section 5 (2).

Power to make rules.

8. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, rules under this section may provide for—

(a) the regulation of cinematograph exhibitions for securing the public safety;

(b) the procedure of the authorities constituted for examining and certifying films as suitable for public exhibition and all matters ancillary thereto, and the fees to be levied by those authorities; and

(c) any other matter which by this Act is to be prescribed.

(3) The Governor General in Council may delegate to a Local Government the power to make rules regarding the matters mentioned in sub-section (2) (a) so far as regards the territories subject to that Government.

(4) All rules made under this Act shall be published in the Gazette of India, or the local official Gazette as the case may be and, on such publication, shall have effect as if enacted in this Act.

Power to exempt.

9. The Local Government may by order in writing exempt subject to such conditions and restrictions as it may impose any cinematograph exhibition or class of cinematograph exhibitions from any of the provisions of this Act or of any rule made thereunder.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Wednesday, the 20th February, 1918.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble Sir GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C.S.I., K.C., Vice-President, presiding, and 56 Members, of whom 49 were Additional Members.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following Additional Member made the prescribed oath of allegiance to the Crown :—

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay, K.C.I.E., C.S.I.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Silver purchased for India.

1. " Is it true that out of the 100 million of ounces of silver contracted, according to the circular of Messrs. Montagu and Company, for November last, by the Government of the United States from American producers, on behalf of the Allied Governments, 60 million ounces are for India, costing about 40·11 pence per standard ounce in New York, including exchange ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" The Government of India have no information which would bear out the statement said to be contained in a circular of Messrs Montagu and Company. As was indicated in a Press Communiqué, dated the 30th November, 1917, certain discussions are in progress with the United States Government on the subject. These discussions are still proceeding, and no settlement has yet been reached. It is, therefore, not possible to add anything to the statement then made."

[Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Sir George Barnes.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Dwelling-houses for the working classes.

2. "(a) Is it a generally recognised maxim that it is the duty of the State to provide suitable and healthy dwelling-houses for the working classes?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, they have taken towards achieving that object; and if no such steps have been taken, whether any well-reasoned-out scheme dealing in a practical manner with this vital problem is in contemplation?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) The Government of India have not yet recognised it as their duty to provide suitable and healthy dwelling-houses for the working classes, but the State in India has, as occasion offered, given assistance to the efforts of local bodies and private persons to provide suitable and healthy dwelling-homes for these classes.

(b) The steps taken by the State in India towards providing proper housing accommodation for the poorer classes in cities and large towns will be set out in a reply which is still under preparation to a similar question put by the Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri on the 12th September 1917."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Postal peons strike in the city of Bombay.

3. "Will Government be pleased to state the real causes which led to the serious strike of postal peons in the city of Bombay during the month of September last?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The main causes of the strike of postal peons in Bombay in September last are probably to be found in the rise in the cost of living and of house rents in Bombay and in the general labour unrest in Bombay produced by these causes."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Cost of the strike of postal peons in Bombay.

4. "Will Government be pleased to state the actual extra cost (if any) with full particulars, which the post office in the city of Bombay incurred in order to carry out the daily postal service during the three weeks of September last that the postal peons were on strike?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"A statement* showing the expenditure incurred under different heads is laid on the table for the Hon'ble Member's information."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Increase in pay of postal employes in Bombay.

5. "Is it true that Government have been appealed to during the last three years by certain postal employés in Bombay city and elsewhere for an increase in their pay and improvement of their prospects while in service? If so, will Government be pleased to inform the Council of the number of such employés, with their names, the nature of their respective work and the salary or wages drawn by each of such applicants?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The answer to the first part of the Hon'ble Member's question is in the affirmative.

The detailed information asked for in the second part of the Hon'ble Member's question cannot be supplied except by an expenditure of time and labour which would be wholly incommensurate with the result. The substance

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir George Barnes; Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Sir Claude Hill.] of what the Hon'ble Member wishes for appears in a statement* showing the number and rates of pay of employés in the Postmaster-General's office and in the Post Office of the Bombay city, all of whom submitted applications. This statement* is now laid on the table for the Hon'ble Member's information."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Government control over food prices and rentals.

6. "Will Government be pleased to state whether, in view of the growing dearness, during the last few months, of the necessaries of life and house-rent, more or less, in the different Provinces of India, any legal or other measures are about to be taken soon to regulate and control such food prices and rentals so as to ameliorate to a reasonable extent the prevailing economic condition ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The answer which I gave on the 6th February last to the question by the Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda answers that part of the Hon'ble Member's question which relates to the necessaries of life.

The regulation of house-rents, where necessary, is properly a matter for legislation in the Legislative Council of the Province where the need occurs. The Bombay Government have, however, represented to the Government of India that the matter is of pressing urgency in the City of Bombay, and that their Legislative Council is not sitting. The Government of India have accordingly, to meet this emergency, taken powers by a new rule under the Defence of India Act to control and regulate the housing of artizans and labourers and their families in any defended harbour notified in the Gazette of India by the Governor General in Council. Bombay is one of the defended harbours, and has been duly notified. The rule gives the Government of Bombay power to fix maximum rents in respect of houses which, in the opinion of the Local Government, were in the year 1914 let, or capable of being let, at rents not exceeding Rs. 10 a month."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Increased cultivation of food-crops.

7. "(a) Is a world shortage of cereals apprehended during the next three years ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state (i) whether it is intended to stimulate in all the Indian Provinces greater cultivation of food crops for consumption and export ? (ii) if so, how far prospects of such production can be realised, assuming normal rains; and (iii) whether, under the circumstances, it may not be necessary to construct by State or private enterprise light railways in those areas whence at present it is found difficult to convey food grains to the nearest towns for marketing ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"(a) The Government are not prepared to offer an opinion in regard to the world's supply of, and demand for, cereals over as long a period as the next three years.

(b) (i) As I informed the Hon'ble Member in reply to a similar question which he asked on the 12th September last, the Local Governments of the chief wheat-growing provinces were asked to take special steps to stimulate the cultivation of wheat and other food grains during the current season.

(ii) I cannot prophesy what the result will be at the time of the harvesting, but the Hon'ble Member has no doubt observed that in the first published forecast of the coming wheat crop the estimate of the area sown exceeds the final estimate of last year by 972,000 acres.

(iii) In view of the difficulty of obtaining railway materials, no large extension of light railways can be undertaken at present. But in considering any projects that may be put forward due weight will be attached to the desirability of facilitating the transport of food-grains from areas which could add to the supply available for consumption and export."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Postal revenue in the different provinces of Bombay.

8. " Will Government be pleased to state what has been the net surplus of postal revenue in the different provinces of Bombay for the three years ending 31st March, 1917 ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" The information asked for by the Hon'ble Member cannot be furnished by circles or provinces separately. For the whole of India, however, the net surplus of postal revenue for the three years in question was as follows :—

	Rs.
1914-15	29,73,847
1915-16	32,11,261
1916-17	56,39,292 "

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

The paper industry in India.

9. " (a) Will Government be pleased to state the result of the experiments for the production of pulp in India for the manufacture of paper ?

(b) Is it a fact that there has been an increase in the price of paper due to the war, and will Government take any steps to help the paper industry in India ?

(c) Are Government aware that in the publication named ' The work of the Forest Department in India ' it has been stated that ' the enormous available supplies of bamboos and elephant grasses could be utilised for the manufacture of the 50,000 tons of paper and paste boards which India now imports annually ' ? Will Government take steps to utilise this forest product in the country ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a) The results of the experiments referred to are given in some of the Indian Forest Records. These publications are too lengthy for me to summarise, but I shall be glad to show them to the Hon'ble Member.

(b) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As I said in reply to a similar question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjee on 9th March 1916, the possibility of fostering the paper pulp industry in India has formed the subject of detailed inquiry both by the Government of India and by Local Governments for some years past, and concessions for the manufacture of pulp from wood, bamboos and Savannah grasses have been given in several Provinces. Progress with these schemes is hampered by the difficulty of obtaining machinery during the war ; and in the case of several raw materials further investigation is still necessary before they can be utilised for pulp on a commercial scale.

(c) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. The question of the utilization of the raw materials available is being considered by the Industrial Commission, and the Government of India are awaiting the recommendations of the Commission."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Report of the Northern India Salt Department for 1914-15.

10. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the report of the Northern India Salt Department for 1914-15, which states that it would not be difficult to bring about an increase in the output of salt in India ?

(b) With a view to facilitate the transport of salt into other Provinces at cheap rates, will Government be pleased to take necessary steps to reduce the cost of transit by rail from the salt-producing localities which are mostly in Northern India ? "

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir George Barnes; Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.]

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) With regard to the first part, I think that the Hon'ble Member is mistaken in his quotation. I do not think that the opinion he quotes is to be found in the Report of the Northern India Salt Revenue Department for the year 1914-15. However that may be, every effort has been and is being made to increase the production of salt from the Khewra Mines.

(b) The present rates for the carriage of salt are very moderate. It is not, I think, advisable that Railways should carry traffic at a loss, and if this is admitted, no reduction could be effected which would confer any appreciable benefit on the consumer. The Government of India do not at present propose to take action in the direction suggested."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

Indian Army Reforms.

11. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article on Indian Army Reforms in the December issue of the Hindustan Review, contributed by Mr. K. C. Roy?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the constitution and function of the Advisory Council mentioned in the article and given in the Indian Army List?

(c) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the suggestion for adoption of a system of modified conscription applicable to all Provinces, and will Government be pleased to state whether such proposals have been or are under consideration?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) The article in question has been seen, but as it adds nothing to our present knowledge of the position, the attention of Government has not been drawn specially thereto.

(b) The constitution of the Advisory Council is as follows :—

President.

His Excellency the Army Member.

Members.

The Chief of the General Staff.
The Adjutant General.
The Quartermaster General.
The Army Secretary.
The Financial Adviser.

and such other members as may be invited to attend a particular discussion.

The Council meets as a rule weekly. Its functions are to discuss such questions as His Excellency the Army Member may consider of sufficient importance, affecting :—

(a) improvements proposed in the Army,
(b) preparation for war,
(c) fixed defences and military operations in progress,
(d) military organisation,
(e) conditions of service or customs affecting the Indian Army.

(c) The article referred to contains no definite proposals in regard to the adoption of modified conscription applicable to all Provinces. The question of conscription and compulsion has, however, been considered by the Government of India and rejected as impracticable in present circumstances."

[Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Sir Robert Gillan.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Free and compulsory elementary education.

12. "(a) In view of the sporadic attempts made in some Provinces to introduce some sort of free and compulsory elementary education within the jurisdiction of certain Municipalities and District Boards, will Government be pleased to state if they have any intention to co-ordinate these efforts and introduce into this Council an all-India measure on the lines of the late Mr. Gokhale's Education Bill?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the sums of money spent in 1916-17 in the different Provinces of India on (a) high education, (b) secondary education, and (c) primary education, respectively?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) It is not the intention of the Government of India to introduce into this Council an all-India Bill on the lines of Mr. Gokhale's Education Bill; but I would invite attention to the passage in the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy in this Council on the 6th February which dealt with primary education, from which it will be seen that the Government of India hope before long to be able to indicate the lines on which they propose to deal with the extension of primary education. In the meantime it is open to such local legislatures as desire to introduce legislation on the lines recently adopted in Bombay and proposed for Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, and the Punjab, to do so.

(b) A statement* is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

State versus Company management of Railways.

13. "(a) Have opinions been received from Local Governments and public bodies on the question of State versus Company management of Indian Railways? If so, will Government be pleased to lay all such opinions on the table?

(b) Is it a fact that in America, Japan and several countries of Europe, the present policy of the State is to nationalise all railways and bring them under the control of the State so far as possible?

(c) Have Government any intention to nationalise all railways in this country?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"(a) In reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola in this Council on the 7th March 1917, the opinions of the Local Governments and mercantile associations which then had been received were placed on the table. The opinions† of the Madras and Bombay Governments which have since been received are now placed on the table.

(b) Speaking generally, one-third of the railways of the world are owned by the countries in which they are situated, and the remaining two-thirds are in private ownership. In Germany and Belgium and also in Japan nearly all the railways are owned and managed by the State. In the United States and England practically all the railways are in private ownership. In France the State owns a comparatively small proportion of the railways, but it has large financial responsibilities and a correspondingly large control over the lines owned by private companies. So far as I am aware, there is no present policy in the United States, England or France in favour of nationalising all railways, but in every country of the world the State exercises some control over the railways.

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir Robert Gillan; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi.]

(c) The policy in this country has in the past been in favour of State ownership of railways, and the contract with every Company contains a clause giving the Government the option of purchase on a date which of course varies in the case of each railway. The question of State management, as apart from the question of State ownership, is at present being discussed with the Secretary of State in connection with the contract with the East Indian Railway, which is determinable on 31st December 1919, and notice to determine which has been given by the Secretary of State."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked:—

Management of the East Indian Railway.

14. "(a) Are Government aware that there is a sense of great dissatisfaction in the mind of the Indian community regarding the present management of the East Indian Railway Company in the matter of—

(i) the treatment and accommodation of third class passengers, particularly of women;

(ii) the schedule of freight for goods and the inadequate supply of wagons for goods traffic;

(iii) the practical exclusion of qualified Indians from the higher services of the Company; and (iv) the rude treatment occasionally extended to respectable Indians, such as the treatment of Mr. Higman towards Babu Probodh Chandra Banerjee, to which attention was drawn by me in a question in this Council in September last?

(b) Have Government served the East Indian Railway Company with a notice regarding the termination of its present lease in December 1919? If so, will Government be pleased to lay this notice on the table, and express their intention in regard to the management of this Railway after 1919?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied:—

"As regards the first portion of the Hon'ble Member's question, I may say in general that the Government have no reason to believe that the Indian community are dissatisfied with the present management of the East Indian Railway Company.

To deal with the specific points mentioned in this part of the question, no complaints have been received against the East Indian Railway as regards—

(i) the treatment and accommodation of third class passengers, particularly of women, or (ii) their schedule of rates for goods traffic.

Undoubtedly there are complaints about the shortage of wagons, but these are general and are due to war conditions.

(iii) It is the policy of the East Indian Railway to encourage the employment of Indians in the superior appointments, and the Company have actually a number of qualified Indians serving in the higher grades of their Audit, Engineering and Traffic Departments. The Company have, moreover, led the way by framing a scheme for the training of Indians as mechanical engineers for officers' appointments in the Locomotive and Carriage and Wagon Departments, which scheme is now under the consideration of Government.

(iv) From the reply which I gave to a question asked by the Hon'ble Member in Council last September, it will be understood that the Company require their staff to be polite to all, whether passengers or fellow employés. Neither from the incident referred to by the Hon'ble Member nor from any other information have the Government reason to suppose that Indians are rudely treated on the East Indian Railway system.

As regards the second part of the question formal notice of the intention to determine the contract with the East Indian Railway Company was served on the 26th October 1917. A copy of this notice* is placed on the table. The question of the future management of the East Indian Railway is under the consideration of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked:—

The Indian Telegraph Department.

15. "(a) Is there any colour bar or racial distinction in the Indian Telegraph Department? If so, do Government intend to remove this?

(b) Is it a fact that while Parsis and Portuguese telegraphists are admitted into the General scale of service, other Indian telegraphists of equal qualifications (and doing exactly the same kind of work) are denied admittance into this branch of the service?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the steps that have been taken since last year to increase the number of Indians in the General scale of service?

(d) Will Government be pleased to stop direct recruitment to the General scale of service and transfer Local scale Indians to the General scale as the vacancies in that service occur from time to time?

(e) Will Government be pleased to make a statement showing separately the number of Indians as well as Anglo-Indians in the following grades of the service:—

(i) Superior Traffic Branch.
(ii) Deputy Superintendents (Traffic).
(iii) Deputy Superintendents (Engineering).
(iv) Inspecting Telegraphists.

(f) What is the object of giving free quarters or house-rent allowances in lieu thereof to the General scale telegraphists?"

(g) Will Government be pleased to exempt from night duties Local scale telegraphists who neither get free quarters nor are in receipt of house-rent allowance? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied:—

" (a) The Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the reply given to his question at the meeting of the Legislative Council on 20th March, 1917. Proposals for decreasing the proportion of non-Indians to be employed in departmental telegraph offices have since been submitted to the Secretary of State.

(b) The Hon'ble Member's second question represents the old practice, and changes in the direction he desires have been introduced during the past four years.

(c) Direct recruitment to the General Service is still confined mainly to Europeans and Anglo-Indians, but transfers from the Local Service to the General Service are made irrespective of nationality. 28 Indians (including 14 Telegraph Masters) were transferred from the Local Service to the General Service with effect from the 1st February 1917, and 31 Indians (including 8 Telegraph Masters) were transferred from the Local Service to the General Service with effect from the 1st January 1918.

(d) The Government of India have decided that a certain proportion of non-Indians must be employed in departmental telegraph offices and suitable non-Indians willing to accept appointments in the Local Service are not forthcoming Proposals for the restriction of direct recruitment to the General Service in order to provide for the regular transfer of a certain number of men from the Local Service to the General Service are included in the scheme submitted to the Secretary of State.

(e) The statement† for which the Hon'ble Member asks in the fourth part of the question is laid upon the table.

† Vide Appendix C.

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir George Barnes; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir William Vincent; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir Robert Gillan.]

(f) The reasons for giving free quarters or house rent allowances to the General Scale telegraphists are that these men are liable to service throughout India. They may therefore be transferred to distant provinces and are thus called upon to dismantle and set up house again at short notice, usually in expensive places, while, unlike the Local Service men, they seldom have the opportunity of residing with their relatives or friends.

(g) With regard to the last part it would not be possible to exempt Local Service telegraphists from night duty without a considerable increase in the proportion of General Service telegraphists or a reduction in the working hours of telegraph offices, and neither course appears to be desirable or necessary."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Suicides, etc., by State prisoners.

16. "Will Government be pleased to state how many, if any, State prisoners or detenus have committed suicide or gone mad or have otherwise broken down in health, specifying where practicable the names and descriptions of the prisoners, and whether any inquiry was made in each case and the nature of such inquiries?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Inquiries have been made from the Local Governments, and when they are complete the information will be laid upon the table."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Appointment of non-official visitors to visit State prisoners.

17. "Do Government intend to consider the expediency of appointing non-official visitors from among responsible persons for visiting all State prisoners and detenus and reporting direct to Government all cases of sickness and harsh and improper treatment?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India will consult Local Governments in regard to the Hon'ble Member's suggestion."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Passenger and Goods Traffic on Railways.

18. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state the relative increase or decrease in the total passenger and goods traffic on Railways since the rates have been raised, with the corresponding periods before the war?

(b) The total receipts during such periods under passenger and goods traffic;

(c) How much of the said increase can be said to be due to the curtailment of the coastal shipping trade?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"(a) and (b) The increase in passenger fares was introduced from 1st January, 1917. The figures of coaching earnings compare as follows with the corresponding period before the war :—

January to November, 1913—Rs. 19,24,25,697.
January to November, 1917—Rs. 23,59,73,593.

The number of passengers who travelled is not available from the monthly accounts and would have to be specially collected.

There has been no general increase in goods rates, but certain competitive rates to and from Calcutta, Bombay and Karachi were enhanced from 1st October, 1916. Information in regard to the actual tonnage carried is not available, but the figures of earnings for 12 months following the increase compared with the corresponding period before the war are as below :—

[illegible]r, 1913, to September, 1914—Rs. 33,79,84,525.
[illegible]r, 1916, to September, 1917—Rs. 40,50,40,051.

[Sir Robert Gillan; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Sir George Barnes; Sir William Meyer.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

(c) It is impossible to say how much of the difference is due to cessation of coastal trade and how much to fluctuation of traffic and general development of the line. In regard to goods, however, the principal item affected is coal, and the figures available show that under this head the tonnage carried has increased from 17,168,409 tons in 1913-14 to 22,387,117 tons in 1916-17."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Indian Labour Corps.

19. "Will Government be pleased to state :—

(a) the total strength of the Indian Labour Corps working outside India;

(b) what arrangements have been made for housing them, and

(c) for their treatment during sickness, and

(d) whether any English-knowing persons of the community to which the labourers belong have accompanied them ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

(a) "The total strength of Indian Labour Corps working outside India cannot be given without disclosing facts which might prove of use to the enemy.

(b) & (c) From reports received from the several theatres the men are suitably accommodated, and receive medical attendance in our Indian Hospitals as is accorded to Indian troops.

(d) Special interpreters have been appointed whenever considered necessary, and in all corps there are persons who know English and the language spoken by the men in the corps."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Increase in the proportion of Indians in the Telegraph Department.

20. "With reference to the question of increase in the proportion of Indians in the Telegraph Department, both in the General scale and among the operative telegraphists, will Government be pleased to state whether they have arrived at any conclusions and, if so, what they are ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The question of increasing the proportion of Indians in the Telegraph Department has received the careful consideration of the Government of India, and they are addressing the Secretary of State on the subject."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Increase in Grant 14, Military Estimates miscellaneous.

21. "Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) the causes which led to the increase in Grant 14, Military Estimates miscellaneous; and

(b) whether India is paying the cost of the troops of the Indian Expeditionary Forces as it would have been if they had been in India, or as it actually is in the several theatres to which they were sent ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

(a) "The Hon'ble Member's question does not indicate to what year he refers, but presumably it relates to the expenditure shown under Miscellaneous Services at page 251 of the Budget of the Government of India for 1917-18, which was laid upon the table in March 1917. The explanation of this increase will be found under the appropriate heading in the Finance and Revenue accounts of the Government of India. Briefly stated, the increase is due principally to the record under this head of the Government of India's contribution to the cost of the war, represented by the ordinary maintenance charges of the Indian Expeditionary Forces. It is also partly due to higher expenditure on Special Services connected with the war, as for example, port defences, coastal patrol services, measures for the defence of the North-West Frontier, a moiety of the cost of operations at Aden, and certain savings which are credited to His Majesty's Government on account of the civil pay charges of officers who have joined the Indian Army Reserve and whose military pay is debited to His Majesty's Government.

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir William Vincent; Captain Ajab Khan; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.]

(b) India is paying only the normal cost of the Indian Expeditionary Forces, that is, so much of the expenditure on their pay and maintenance as would have been incurred if the troops had not left India."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Proceedings against Pardanashin women under the Defence of India Act.

22. "Will Government be pleased to state whether any pardanashin women have been proceeded against under the Defence of India Act in Bengal or elsewhere, and the circumstances which led to their internment ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India have seen references in the Press to the alleged arrest, under the Defence of India Act, of two pardanashin ladies at Bankura. They have not heard of similar arrests of ladies elsewhere. The facts of this case are not in the possession of the Government of India, and I suggest to the Hon'ble Member that if he wishes to elicit them, he should do so by having a question put in the Bengal Legislative Council."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

The Army Advisory Council.

23. "Will Government be pleased to state what are the scope and functions of the Army Advisory Council in India ?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"I would refer the Hon'ble Member to part (b) of my reply to the Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

Scale of clothing and bedding provided for Indian soldiers.

24. "(a) What is the scale of clothing and bedding provided for Indian soldiers when proceeding on field service to—

(i) Europe.
(ii) Mesopotamia.
(iii) East Africa, Egypt and Palestine.

(b) What are the rules regarding the renewal of these articles ?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) The scales of clothing and blankets for Indian soldiers proceeding on field service to all Forces are detailed in Special India Army Order of 5th February, 1918.

"(b) Stocks of articles are maintained at bases of field forces. From these stocks renewals are made in the field, as required, to maintain the soldier's kit up to the authorised scale.

"Having answered the question that has been put to me by the Hon'ble and Gallant Member, I think it is as well to remind the Council that he has served in two of the theatres of war under reference and, therefore, it is pretty obvious that he is already aware of the answers to the questions which he has put. I therefore leave it to Hon'ble Members to decide the motives which cause him to waste the time of a considerable number of officials who are busy enough without having to answer questions which can be ascertained from books or which are common knowledge."

[Sir James DuBoulay; Sir William Vincent.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

THE CINEMATOGRAPH BILL.

11-22 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—" Sir, as the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent has resumed his seat in this Council, I beg to move that he be added to the Select Committee appointed to report on the Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of Cinematographs."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

11-25 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I explained the main features of the Bill in regard to which I shall shortly move when I introduced it during the last Sessions in September. The Bill met with a very favourable reception, if I may say so, from the Members of this Council. It has since been circulated for opinion, and, speaking generally, I think that most of the opinions received, particularly the more weighty ones, approve of the Bill. I do not for a moment mean to suggest that there is no discordant note, for there are persons who are opposed to the principle of the Bill, but the great bulk of the opinions that we have received are in favour of the measure. There are, of course, many criticisms of detail, to which I do not propose to advert at this stage, because they can be better examined, and ought to be considered in Select Committee; but there are a few matters of importance to which perhaps I should make some reference. In the first place, a point of general importance has been raised by some authorities, notably, I think, by some Judges of the Punjab Chief Court—namely that the enactment of this measure should be accompanied by some modification of the Provincial Insolvency Act. It is believed by various authorities that the present insolvency law places creditors in an unfair position and favours dishonest debtors, and it is therefore argued that if we propose to protect debtors from extortionate creditors, it is right that at the same time we should protect creditors against dishonest debtors. There is much, in my opinion, to be said for this position, and the Government of India had not overlooked it. About the time that this Bill was introduced we had indeed convened a Conference to sit at Simla to consider this question. That Conference included the Hon'ble the Law Member and judicial officers of great weight and authority. The Conference framed certain recommendations for the amendment of the insolvency law which have been embodied in a Despatch which has, I believe, now gone to the Secretary of State. If those proposals are approved by him, I hope shortly to be able to introduce a Bill to amend the Insolvency Act on those lines. I trust, therefore, that this statement will meet the views of those who think that the enactment of the Bill now under consideration should synchronise with some amendment of the Insolvency Act.

" Turning to the Bill itself, I think I ought to tell the Council that when we circulated it for opinion we drew particular attention to certain points upon which the opinions of Local Governments and others were specially invited. The first of these questions was whether proceedings arising out of a settlement of accounts which did not amount to an agreement should be included within the purview of the Bill. Well we have received a number of opinions on this, and they vary, some authorities thinking that such settlements should come within the Act, others thinking that they should not, and the matter will have to be discussed further in Select Committee.

" It will indeed need careful detailed examination which I do not think this Council can effectively make. Then the attention of Local Governments was drawn to the provisions in the law which empower a Court to order a creditor to refund any sums paid to him in excess of what was reasonably due—in other words, to disgorge moneys unjustly received. Well, on that matter too there is a variety of opinions, and it will be again for the Select Committee to consider carefully the pros and cons. Similarly, we invited opinion as to the desirability of protecting creditors against decrees for interest at unreasonably low rates by fixing a minimum rate below which no Court should go. The intention of this suggestion, which, I admit, I myself was inclined to favour, was to make it clear that in no circumstances would interest at unreasonably low rates be awarded to money-lenders; and I thought that something might be done on those lines to reassure money-lenders—honest men who would not extort unreasonable rates—that we were in no way anxious to interfere with their trade. Some authorities have favoured this proposal, but I must say that the general weight of opinion is distinctly against it, and that the authorities who do not approve of this proposal are such that their views must carry very great weight. The matter will, however, be discussed in Select Committee.

"The last point to which we drew specific attention was the question of including grain loans in the purview of the Bill. The replies show that general opinion distinctly favours inclusion of such loans, and many persons indeed go further and would include all loans in kind. That again is a matter to which the Select Committee will have, I think, to give very careful attention, because there are details of considerable difficulty in connection with it. There are a great many other points of detail which have been raised in the various opinions received, but I do not think it necessary to advert to them at present. It is our practice on this day to discuss only the main principles of the Bill, and those were, as I said, generally approved at the last meeting.

"Before, however, I conclude, Sir, I should like to say that with your permission I propose to add to the list of persons on the Select Committee the name of the Hon'ble Mr. Kesteven His legal knowledge and experience of affairs generally have been of great use to this Council on previous occasions, and I think his assistance in the examination of this Bill will be of great value. Have I your permission to add his name, Sir?"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"Yes."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Thank you, Sir. I beg to move then that the Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or grain be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, the Hon'ble Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur, the Hon'ble Sir James Walker, the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Miau Muhammad Shafi, the Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman, the Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant, the Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, the Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Shukul, the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, the Hon'ble Sir Robert Clegg, the Hon'ble Mr. A. W. Botham, the Hon'ble Mr. Kesteven and myself."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE INDIGO CESS BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"Sir, in moving for permission to introduce a Bill to provide for the levy of a cess on Indigo exported from British India, I do not think I need detain the Council very long. The history of the circumstances leading up to the drafting of this Bill is well known to this Council, since I have in the two previous years explained how events were developing. In 1916, I was able to indicate how the circumstance of a resuscitated demand for natural indigo justified the hope that it might be possible to replace natural indigo in effective competition with the synthetic product; and I indicated at that time that the problem was, in its main essentials, a chemical problem, inasmuch as the chief advantage claimed by consumers for the synthetic over the natural product lay in the fact that the synthetic dyes were prepared in the form of standardised paste which was far more convenient for consumers. However, owing to the restricted supply of the synthetic product, a considerable demand for the natural indigo had arisen, and it seemed to the Government of India worthwhile at once to take steps to see whether by chemical improvements or otherwise, it might not be possible to restore natural indigo to the place of prosperity which it occupied before synthetic indigo threatened to kill it.

11-35 A.M.

[Sir Claude Hill; Sir William Meyer.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

"In 1917, I was able to inform the Council that Mr. Davis, the Indigo Chemist, whose services had been secured by the Government, had arrived and had already started work at Pusa, and that the results achieved by him till then were full of hope for the future.

"Simultaneously the Planters' Association, who are the only corporate body representing the indigo interests, had awakened to the fact that the opportunity was one which ought to be grappled with seriously, and they suggested that, in order to finance the further investigations of a scientific character which were necessary if natural indigo were ever to be re-established, an export duty on the raw product should be imposed. That proposal of the Planters' Association was referred to all the Local Governments concerned, and it has been endorsed by all of them. At the same time it is necessary to explain that the problem, though chiefly chemical, is not solely a chemical one, and that it may be necessary—probably will be necessary—to associate with the chemical expert also an indigo botanist. That, however, is a matter which has at present not come to fruition; but it explains why not only the chemist's investigations, but why the collateral investigation by a botanist, if one can be secured, will have to be spread over a considerable number of years. It is for this reason that, on the analogy of the steps taken in 1903 in imposing the Indian Tea cess the Government of India, agreeing with the recommendations of the Planters' Association as corroborated by the Local Governments concerned, have decided to frame a Bill providing for the levy of a cess on indigo exported from British India.

"The Bill is a perfectly simple one and the rate of cess, as will be seen from clause 2 of the Bill, will be Re. 1 per maund of 82$\frac{2}{7}$ pounds avoirdupois. I need not detain the Council any longer, and I move for leave to introduce the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"Sir, I beg to introduce the Bill, and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE INDIAN COINAGE BILL.

1-40 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Coinage Act, 1906. The Bill which I desire to introduce is a simple measure providing for the substitution of a nickel two-anna piece for the silver two anna piece at present current. The silver two-anna piece has always, I think, been looked upon as a troublesome little coin; it is easily lost and wears very rapidly. The possibility of replacing it by a nickel coin was first discussed as long ago as 1904 when the introduction of the nickel one-anna piece was under consideration, but it was decided to wait and see how the one-anna nickel was received by the public before embarking on any further innovations. The marked popularity which the latter coin has now gained for itself augurs well for the success of a nickel two-anna piece, and we have, therefore, decided to introduce such a coin, and to coin no more silver two-annas. This course has the advantage, which cannot be overlooked at the present time, of economising to some extent our supplies of silver for coinage into rupees.

"The design which we propose for the coin has been prepared for us by Colonel McCormick, the Master of the Calcutta Mint. In order that it may not be liable to be confused with our silver eight-anna coins, it will have a distinctive shape, namely, square with rounded corners, and it will have a weight of 90 grains and a diameter of 21 millimeters. The King's head and the date of issue will appear on the obverse, and on the reverse the value in English and in four vernaculars. I have procured a few specimens of the coin, and I now place them on the table for inspection in case Hon'ble Members may wish to see them.

" We expect to be in a position to issue the new coin before very long, and our Mints are already engaged on its production. But in case any slight hitch should occur in the arrangements for manufacture, we provide in clause 1 (2) of the Bill that the Act shall only come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council may direct by notification in the Gazette of India. This will enable us to postpone the issue of the two-anna nickel piece until we have sufficient stocks of it in hand, without any risk of a temporary shortage of small currency.

" I need only add that, as explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, silver two-anna pieces issued from the Mints before the Bill is brought into force will continue to be legal tender to the extent to which they are legal tender at present, that is—in payment of sums of one rupee and under. But when we publish a notification under clause 1 (2) of the Bill, the Mints will not issue any more of these pieces. I now move for leave to introduce the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—" Sir, I beg to introduce the Bill which, as will be seen, consists in the main of amendments to the existing Indian Coinage Act, and I move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION RE INCLUSION OF QUALIFIED INDIANS AMONG THE MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF SCIENTIFIC ADVICE.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—" Sir, I beg leave to withdraw the Resolution which stands in my name, namely :— 11-45 A.M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the constitution of the Board of Scientific Advice be so extended as to include qualified Indians among its members.'

The Resolution was by leave withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE TOTAL PROHIBITION OF THE USE OF LIQUORS AND DRUGS.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur N. Sarma:—" Sir, I beg to move the Resolution standing against my name which reads thus :— 11-46 A.M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Government may be pleased [illegible] accept and declare total prohibition of the use of all alcoholic and intoxicating liquo[illegible] [illegible]rugs to be the aim and object of its policy, and to so direct its administrative meth[illegible] to achieve the end in view at an early date.'

[Rao Bahadur B N. Sarma.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

"It is not without some diffidence that I rise to move this Resolution; but I hope to be able to show to the Council that the changes I am asking the Council to adopt are not of any catastrophic character, that they would not dislocate the finances of the country, and that they would not introduce vital administrative changes in the immediate future, but that they are changes which are of immediate practical importance, and that consequently it is necessary that the Government should consider as to whether it can see its way to adopt a change in its ideals with regard to excise administration. I ask in this Resolution that the ultimate goal of the excise policy of the Government of India should be total prohibition, but I do not ask that it should be done within any definite period. I realise that the circumstances of this country and the circumstances of the Government would not permit of any immediate drastic changes. I am no visionary and I understand the difficulties of the situation. I do not, therefore, set any limit to the Government of India wherein they can introduce total prohibition, and no one here or elsewhere need be uncomfortable as to whether any drastic changes would be immediately introduced. I do not think the question of immediate total prohibition need alarm anybody. I am sure that during this Session and for several Sessions to come no dinner party will be seriously dislocated, and I am also sure that no community will be seriously prejudiced in its habits. Then you may ask me, Sir, as to whether, if I guarantee such a wide limit, a discussion now would not be merely academic. I hope to be able to show that it is not, that unless and until the Government adopts a change in its past policy on this question, the question of temperance itself will not receive an adequate and proper solution, and that it would be absolutely impossible for the Government to check the increase of the cursed evil of drink, and the history of the past amply justifies the prediction that that will be so. The Government in the past have said :—

'The Government of India have no desire to interfere with the habits of those who use alcohol in moderation, and it may be necessary to make due provision for the needs of such persons. But their settled policy is to minimise temptation to those who do not drink and to discourage excess among those who do.'

And as late as 1915 the Government of Bengal have stated :—

'The time is not far distant when the number of shops will have to be reduced to the absolute minimum compatible with the principle of making due provision for the needs of those who use alcohol in moderation. In the interests of the moderate consumer the Governor in Council is not prepared to invest the Advisory Council with more direct powers of veto.'

"From 1888, if not earlier, up to the present moment, the Government have declared that they have a duty incumbent upon them, through their being monopolists, to provide for the needs of the drinker in moderation. I realise that the questions how far excise methods will be effectual, whether the peace of any particular part of the country would be endangered, whether we shall be introducing worse evils by prohibiting drink would still remain. There would be a change in the angle of vision from which we have to look at the problem; we shall have to dismiss one idea from our minds, and that is that there is a duty incumbent on the State to provide for the moderate drinker; because I feel that so long as the Government think it is their duty to make such provision, it would not be possible to make any changes adequate to the occasion. Supposing in a village consisting of 1,000 people there are 30 or 40 who are moderate drinkers—as moderate as those of any other place and who are keen on having a small shop—the Government would have no answer to make to them because they have pledged their word that they would not interfere with the habits of the moderate drinker. The 960 might protest against the shop on the ground that it would be opening the door to temptation, that the weaker minded persons would not be able to resist the temptation, but so long as this policy stands, the Government would find it absolutely impossible to prevent the opening of the shop; the shop may be subjected to restrictions, it may be subjected to limitations, but still they would have to open that shop when there is a demand; that has been the history of the past. The Government have contented themselves with questions of averages, with such questions [illegible] whether

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

12 square miles or 15 square miles were supplied with a shop, and what was the average consumption per hundred of the population, but so far as I have been able to elicit from the questions put by me, they are not in a position to give information as to how many towns and villages, or how many with a definite population, have a shop, how many have had new shops opened in them, and how many new villages have been infected owing to this theory, which is at the bottom of the mischief, namely, that the moderate drinker must be provided for. The question of local option would receive a different treatment if the ideal for which I am contending is accepted as an ideal. It would not be a question of the majority tyrannising over the minority, it would be a question of the minority bringing infection to the doors of the majority. It is said that if Councils are to have their way, if non-drinkers are to have their way, the poor consumer, the pariah, the member of the depressed classes would have their solace taken away. At present the depressed classes, poor chiefly owing to drink, would have it in their power to infect a healthy community by bringing in a grog shop, an arrak shop, a toddy shop. Therefore the question whether the minority is tyrannising over the majority or the majority is tyrannising over the minority would receive a different solution according to the standpoint from which you look at the question. Then the question of customs duty would receive a different treatment if Government makes up its mind that the ultimate goal is to be total prohibition of drink. The whole Government policy rests on the assumption that drink in moderation is not injurious to health. I know that Government can quote medical authorities in support of that fact. I hope to be able to convince the Council that, notwithstanding the fact that a few eminent authorities are still of opinion that drink in moderation, which necessarily varies according to the individual, may not be absolutely harmful, still from the communal point of view, it has been found to be disastrous. Many eminent medical men and scientists are of opinion that, so far as India is concerned, drink is absolutely unnecessary. The mental horizon has been considerably enlarged since the war, and many military men, for instance, Lord Wolseley, Lord Roberts, were of the opinion that the soldiers who do not drink are far more efficient than those who do ; thanks to the efforts of the temperance advocates, it has been found that in the Army sickness, suffering and crime have been considerably reduced since temperance habits have spread. Military experts state that alcohol slows the power to see signals, confuses prompt judgment, spoils accurate shooting, hastens fatigue, lessens resistance to disease and exposure, and increases the shock from wounds. Surgeon-General Evatt, Mr. Pearce, the Vice-Chancellor of the University of London, Professor Saleeby, Sir F. Treves, Sergeant Surgeon in Ordinary to the King, Professor Woodhead, Professor of Pathology at Cambridge University, Chuni Lal Bose, the Chemical Examiner, Sir Bal Krishna Krishna and 50 to 60 prominent medical men in India have issued a manifesto calling upon the people of India to desist from drink. They say, 'It has been proved by careful scientific experiments and confirmed by experience that—

(1) Alcohol, cocaine, opium and intoxicating drugs (such as bhang, ganja and charas) are poisons ;

(2) Even a moderate use of these is harmful, especially in tropical countries like India. They are of no avail permanently to relieve physical and mental strain ;

(3) Those who confine themselves to non-alcoholic drinks and who avoid the use of intoxicating drugs are capable of more endurance, and are better able to resist infection and disease ;

(4) Alcohol is in many cases injurious to the next generation, especially through its favouring influence upon venereal disease ;

(5) Alcohol aggravates the evils of famine ;

(6) Alcohol is useless as a preventive of plague ;

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

(7) Alcohol lowers the resisting power of the body against the parasites of malaria and the microbes of tuberculosis'.

They ask the people to resist this evil with all their might. Lastly, the All-India Temperance Conference has passed a Resolution to the effect that total prohibition should be the goal of Government policy. Sir, it is absolutely impossible for the Government in the abstract to determine what is moderate and what is harmful. When we consider the past history of Europe and of England, and when we compare it with India, when we note the different ideals which have prevailed with differing results of a radically different character, I think I am right in saying that the ideal proposed by me should be adopted by the Government. Nobody can say that England is not advanced; the people are highly civilised, elementary, secondary and university education have spread; temperance associations are very powerful, but what has been the result? The theory of independence, the freedom of man to judge for himself how to drink in moderation has resulted in an average consumption of 27 gallons per head and of 69 in spirits as against ·046 in India. The ideals which have been preached in India since ancient times both by the Rishis in their Scriptural writings and by the law-givers of the Hindus and the Muhammedans alike, have produced the desired result, the temperate habits of the people, and the general condemnation by society of intemperance. Temperance reformers find it difficult notwithstanding a Resolution passed by a large section of the population to make any impression upon the House of Commons because of the vested interests at stake and the difference in ideals. During this cruel war notwithstanding the absence of a large male population from England the total consumption of liquors in terms of pure alcohol was in 1915 92 per cent., that of 1914, and 90 per cent. of 1913, the percentages as per value being 110½ and 109, this has been partly the result of an increase in the wages of workmen in England, and that will be the result of an increase of wages of the workmen in India. Therefore, it is no use telling us that it is the weakness of the temperance reformers that is responsible for the result, and that if the temperance cause is to be won they should perform their duty more efficaciously. No doubt, they have a duty to perform, and they will perform it, but without Government aid the results will be as disastrous in India in the future as they have been in the past. And, Sir, notwithstanding the temperance policy of the Government, the excise revenue has been increasing considerably. What has been the result? The impoverishment of the working classes The Government have themselves been obliged to confess that there has been an increase of 5·5 per cent. in consumption betwen 1905 and 1912. You may say it is a small increase, but that is the result of including a number of outstill areas with a population of about 40 million in the distillery areas. But if you confine yourself to the areas which have always been distillery areas, what has been the result? You find that in Madras there was an increase of 11 per cent. in the population of the distillery areas, and an increase of 46 per cent. in the arrack consumption; that is an increase of 35 per cent. net. Similarly, in Bombay, you find an increase of 27 per cent So these averages of 5 per cent. with which the Secretary of State was satisfied are not the real averages obtaining in provinces where the Abkari administration has been at work for some years, but it is the averages for the whole of India as the result of the conversion of outstill to distillery areas.

"I have already said that a vast number of the people of India do not touch drink—thanks to their past ideals; and therefore the problem is much easier of solution here than in England, where the people are with you and there is no vested interest to fight the Government as in the United Kingdom where 160 million pounds are spent in liquors, and where the interests of the brewers resist successfully all reforms in the English Parliament. It is the State here that is in charge, and perhaps it may be more difficult to induce the State to give up the revenue here. But I do not despair that the Government, which has in the past chosen to abandon the opium revenue in the interests of another country, China, will not do the same if it is convinced that that is the only right way. The changes that I am suggesting do not necessitate any vital departure from the existing policy, except in certain essential particulars, and would not reduce the revenue to any appreciable extent in the immediate future; and perhaps the same revenue could be secured by an increase in the rate in certain parts of India. I have been convinced, after reading Mr. Lloyd George's speech once again, of the soundness of my view, the result of my experience in this country of the lower classes with whom I had to deal in an administrative capacity. Now what has been the experience in England? You find that the Admiralty, the Director of Naval equipment, the Director of Transport, those who are in charge of the Munition Works, those who are in charge of manufactories, those who are in charge as Inspectors, have all with one voice urged the absolute necessity of stopping liquor altogether in certain areas if the war is to be won. They say that the loss of efficiency of the workmen is not due merely to fatigue; after a holiday it is worse. You give a half-holiday on Saturday and Sunday is a full holiday, and this results in increased drink under the freedom principle, and on Monday the work would be worse than before and a longer holiday makes the position still worse. The net result is a loss of nearly 40 per cent. efficiency on account of the habits of a certain class of workmen. In India, too, the case is the same. The food problem also comes in. A large quantity of food is being wasted in the preparation of liquors, and in India which is a poor country, we cannot afford to waste any of her food upon this pernicious habit. Therefore, Sir, if the results of the past policy of the Government have not resulted in any reduction, if they have resulted in an appreciable increase, if they have resulted in the introduction of this evil into new villages, all on account of the doctrine that the moderate drinker has to be provided for, I respectfully ask whether the time has not come when the opinions of the vast majority of medical men and economists should be acted upon, even if there is a small minority the other way, having regard to the fact that you cannot, taking large communities into consideration, expect people to be sufficiently strong, when exposed to the temptation, to desist from drink, or drink in moderation without injury to the public.

"Then I come to a more important question, and that is this. Who are the men who are suffering by this excise policy? You will find, on an analysis of the figures, that the revenue derived from those who consume liquor imported from England is almost stationary, if it is not declining. For the moment I dismiss that class of consumer. At one time it was considered to be fashionable amongst English educated Indians to drink a little. There was a feeling that the old mediæval doctrines of Hinduism and Mahommedanism on this subject should be defied as inconsistent with civilization. But there has been a change since in the right direction, so we need not think at present of those classes. But we find that during the last ten years between 1903-04 to 1913-14, the increase in the revenue derived from the poorest classes owing to an increase either in the consumption or in the rate of liquor has been no less than 3 million pounds, that is 4½ crores of rupees. The total increase has been 3·9 millions. It is an increase larger than under any other head. The increase has been under Excise 3·9 million; under Stamps 1·8; under Salt and Opium a reduction; Land-revenue 2·1 million, Customs 3·6; Forest ·7, and Assessed Taxes ·75. That is, you wring from the poorer classes comparatively small in numbers a larger revenue than from any other community or all the other communities put together under the other heads of taxation. Under arrack alone you get 2·3 million pounds and under toddy you get about 58 lakhs of rupees. The total has risen from 3·2 to 6·2 million pounds. Who is assisting the depressed classes, Sir? Is it the Government of India or is it the ancient ideal of Hindustan and the upper classes who have been agitating for the adoption of the ancient ideal? I humbly beg to submit that a persistence in the present ideals would make the Government of India unwittingly, unknowingly but none the less certainly, the greatest enemy of the poorest classes in this country. The depressed classes deserve protection at the hands of the legislature, and there is no use in telling them that they have got increased wages, that they are given the freedom to think and to choose for themselves as to whether they should resort to drink or not. They are denied freedom for other purposes, and I do not see why they should be given freedom in this particular alone when it is no true freedom, but only because to poison oneself and his neighbours. When we find that these poor ignorant people cannot resist the temptation of drink, it is your duty to say that you will not expose them to the temptation.

"Then again with regard to the location of shops. If you read the instructions in the Manual nothing more can be desired in it. The Manual says that a shop should not be on the road to a bazar, at the entrance to a town, in the neighbourhood of a public place, market, educational building and so on. I have collected statistics with regard to Madras and have, when a Member in the Council of Madras, shown that almost everywhere the rule has been violated, and the only result was a confession that the rules are unworkable in practice and the needs of the modrate drinker have to be provided for, and that consequently nothing substantial can be done.

"Then there is the remedy suggested by a reduction of shops. I have faith in that, but there is no use pinning our faith in it too much. It has been seen that Bombay with a population half that of Madras and with 2,000 and odd shops against 8,000 in Madras has sold 2½ million gallons against two-thirds of that quantity in Madras; so a mere reduction will not solve the problem and is a mere palliative; and the question of opening new shops should be looked at from a new standpoint, the ideal of absolute prohibition by progressive stages.

"Have we no precedents in this direction? The United States are solving the problem and certain States have prohibited the sale or manufacture of intoxicants. In some cases they have succeeded and in others they have only been partially successful, because the people did not wholly support the Government. But here in India, notwithstanding the fact that the people have tried to satisfy the Secretary of State that the vast masses of the people do not drink, the Government are sceptical on the subject. The people who drink are ashamed of the practice except among very limited communities, and even they indulged in it only on specific occasions, and the figures I have quoted show that we are comparatively free as a nation. Therefore, popular opinion is in your favour. There would be no danger of any rebellion; there would be no danger of mutiny, and it would be easier to enforce checks in India than elsewhere. Public opinion in European countries is veering round in the same direction. Resolutions have been passed in Scotland asking for prohibition. The Glasgow Corporation have asked for its complete prohibition during the war. And the larger boroughs in Scotland have met and passed similar resolutions. In the speeches in the House of Commons we find there is a growing feeling in the same direction. Of course it is rather dangerous to quote the example of Russia owing to recent events, but still for the time being they succeeded in the introduction of this reform at any rate. I may state, however, for the sake of those who are in fear of their rights being in jeopardy, that the upper classes were exempt for a time from this prohibition; the high class clubs were exempt, but later on they came into line with the others. Therefore, if necessary, for the time being similar exemptions may be made here. France has done the same.

"I hope, Sir, that I have been able to show that, if you wish to attack the temperance problem really there is no alternative but to accept as your ideal total prohibition, that even assuming that drink in moderation in certain countries is not injurious to health, taking communities in the aggregate, the only wise policy law-givers can adopt would be one of prohibition, subject to the restrictions I have mentioned, in that they do not thereby introduce worse evils, and that they do not endanger the peace of the country. The danger of adopting the present policy of providing for the moderate drinker I have already pointed out. And the past of this country I have quoted as a justification for my view. Although the ancient law-givers did not succeed in rooting out this habit altogether, and though it was prevalent in certain wild tracts, this day to day poisoning by bringing drink to the door of every one did not exist, and the upper classes effectually succeeded in keeping the evil at the low minimum at which it exists at present. With all these advantages am I wrong in asking that the Government should reconsider their policy, should reconsider this question from the scientific point of view, as well as the point of view of safety, especially when there is no great danger of their financial equilibrium being rudely or suddenly disturbed? I think the Indian members owe a duty to their country, and they should not be false to their past ideals. Modern scientific doctrine has established the wisdom of the ancient law-givers in this particular at any rate. The better thought of England is with us, the Anglo-Indian Temperance Federation has passed substantially the same resolution. They are fighting for the cause of temperance in England and their sympathy is with us. I am sure that a large body of the Englishmen in India are also actuated by the same ideals. A heavier duty and greater responsibility rests upon them because there is not the slightest doubt that, unable to understand and appreciate the needs of the Westerner and imitating him, the Easterner has come to think that indulgence in moderation in defiance of their ancient ideals is not calculated to promote evils in the communities to which they belong. But latterly there has been a healthy change. We come round to this that though Britishers may have to make personal sacrifices and these personal sacrifices, as I have shown, are not in the immediate present, still I feel sure that they will rise to the occasion and the sacrifices they have cheerfully made in England would be undertaken here. I have not the slightest doubt that if people disabuse their minds of the idea that this is a mere academic discussion, if they disabuse their minds of the idea that this is likely to be accompanied by any danger to peace, or the rude disturbance of finance, I am sure they will see their way to accepting my proposition that we should revert to the ancient ideas.

"I commend this Resolution to your acceptance."

The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant:—"I venture, Sir, to intervene in this debate on behalf of the silent and inarticulate community of moderate drinkers and moderate tobacco smokers to which I myself belong, and whose interests are seriously menaced by the Resolution which Mr. Sarma has put before Council to-day. I do not think there is a single member of this Council who does not admire, while at times he may wearily deplore, the pachydermatous persistence which Mr. Sarma manifests in his multifarious, various and generally uncalled for Resolutions. I myself believe that Mr. Sarma is actuated by a burning passion for reform, though I have heard it maliciously suggested that he is actuated by a passion for the auto-intoxication by his own voice. But in many ways I sympathise with Mr. Sarma's desire for catastrophic, nebulous and iconoclastic change. There is something attractive about sweeping reform, and I sometimes dream of myself sitting somewhere in Utopia with Mr. Sarma on one side and the Government of India on the other playing Jigsaw with the Provincial boundaries of India and purging India of the pernicious effects of intoxicants; but these dreams are Utopian and this Council is not Utopia. This Council is a business concern, and we are here to talk business and deal promptly and practically with business problems, and I do not think there is one of us who does not at times get a little tired of these perennial nebulous schemes and these never-ending counsels of perfection.

12-17 P. M.

"I am well aware, Sir, that there are many here present who, for reasons of conscience or religion, are total abstainers from intoxicants, and I trust that these gentlemen will believe me that in what I am about to say I wish to give no offence whatever, nor do I wish in any way to question or criticise the correctness of their principles. All I ask is, that in this as is other questions which touch conscience and religion, we should have mutual tolerance, that we should in this matter pursue the path which we pursue in other matters of this kind and 'live and let live,' and that there should be no State interference with individuals who are doing no harm to the State.

"The Hon'ble Mr Sarma has poured a great deal of vitriol diluted with midnight oil on the use and abuse of alcohol I do not think there is a single member of this Council who is unaware of the horrible results of the abuse and the excessive use of intoxicants. We all know the economic, the hygienic and the moral evils involved in excess, and the policy of the Government of India, as I understood it from the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, has been directed firmly and faithfully to the prevention of such excess. It seems to me that, if the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma wants to propose anything, he should show that the excise law as it works at present is tempting to excess and should propose amendments in that excise law, not that he should come before us with a sweeping resolution of this kind affecting private interests and affecting private individuals.

"As regards alcohol, I do not know whether the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma himself has ever been addicted to the use of intoxicants, but I presume not. If so, he lacks the necessary experience to speak with weight on this subject, and, furthermore, his Resolution is the less praiseworthy in that it involves no sacrifice or self-abnegation on his part As regards the moderate use of alcohol, I myself can speak with some experience having been a drinker—I trust a very moderate drinker—for some quarter of a century. I never found that it affected my purse to such a degree that I become insolvent; I never found that it affected my health in any way whatever, and I have never found that, owing to it, I have lost such moral sense as I had before; and I believe that that is an experience which will be endorsed by my fellows in the moderate drinking community.

"As regards tobacco, which, I presume from the wording of the Resolution is included, I do not propose to go into an exhaustive defence of this harmless intoxicant, because, I think, its detractors are few. If a defence is required, I would refer the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma to Calverley's 'Ode to Tobacco,' which he doubtless knows. I think I have said enough to convince Mr. Sarma that his Resolution is unnecessary, is Utopian, is calculated to cause inconvenience and personal discomfort to a harmless class, and is further calculated to make a sad world for many of us even sadder."

12-24 P. M.

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"'But wiser,' I should have added these two words to the last sentence of my Hon'ble friend who spoke last on this question. The Resolution, if adopted, might leave the world a bit sadder; but it will certainly leave it wiser. Sir Hamilton Grant has talked of no self-sacrifice being involved in the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution. I would ask him to look at the question in a more serious light. The policy which the Resolution advocates is one which ought to receive more serious consideration than it seems to have received from the last speaker. I quite realise that it is not practicable—no one expects it—that the Government will be able to abandon the excise revenue to-day. That is not what the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has advocated. I wish all Hon'ble Members, even those who are moderate drinkers—and I have nothing but respect for them—to fully understand what the proposition before the Council means, and then to vote for or against it. Before I come to discuss the Resolution, however, I should like to say a word to my friend the moderate drinker. I have known, Sir, and I may say many others have known, or read, of cases in which the moderate drinker has come to grief. I am reminded by the specious pleading of the moderate drinker of Silas Marner who fondly imagined that no trouble would come because it had not come for so many years. Let me tell my Hon'ble friend that a quarter of a century is not a sufficiently long period to protect even a moderate drinker such as he is, from the peril to which he is daily exposing himself with all his sound sense and judgment. I remember the case of a Judge of a High Court, one of the ablest Englishmen I ever came across, which was a warning to moderate drinkers. I do not wish to describe the fate which befell him after he had indulged in moderate drink for more than thirty years. He was quite as confident as any moderate drinker is that he would not fall a victim to the evil habit; and yet he did. I know of another instance, of another Judge of a High Court, and he was an Indian. He was one of the strongest minded men I ever knew, a man with a constitution such as few men possess; and he too came to a miserable end because he had indulged in a peg for many years, and thought he had established a mastery over the demon of drink.

"I see no reference to tobacco in this Resolution; and I fear my Hon'ble friend's reference to it is traceable to the fact that he has not looked at the problem in that same sober view in which he ought to have looked at it.

"Now, Sir, seriously, this question of prohibition is one which deeply affects the vast mass of the poor people who largely contribute the revenue from liquor. I very well understand many of my European friends objecting to teetotalism as a whole, but we should remember that there is a large body of opinion even in England—and that opinion is growing—which is asking for the abolition of the liquor traffic. We have also the knowledge of what has been achieved in this direction in Russia, of what has been achieved in the United States of America, and in other countries. In view of all these the Resolution of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma is by no means a wild proposition. The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant said that Mr. Sarma was suffering from the auto-intoxication of his own voice. I am sorry to say, Sir, that I have heard to-day two observations from Hon'ble Members in relation to other Hon'ble Members which I think ought not to have been made in this Council; but I will pass them over for the present.

"Confining myself to the Resolution before us, I wish to point out that, so far as this country is concerned, the proposition which is now before the Council is one of very vital importance. In 1874-75, the revenue from intoxicants was £1,561,000; in 1915-16, it had risen to £8,498,000, that is to say, it had more then quintupled in 40 years. This country, Sir, is not a cold country like England; it is a country where indulgence in liquor was confined to a very small fraction of the people. The Hindus, Muhammadans and other communities inhabiting this country are by their religious injunctions, by their national habit, abstainers from drink. I do not claim—it is not true,—that drink was unknown to India under previous Governments. The evil habit always existed here to a certain extent; but I do say, and I say it with regret that, in spite of the best intentions of the British Indian Government—nobody doubts that the intentions of the Government have been good—this evil has gone on rapidly increasing, it has developed like galloping phthisis, and to-day a very much larger number of people are exposed to it than were exposed to it at any previous time. Now I submit, Sir, that, while we recognise all that the Government have done in the past few years to put down the consumption of liquor, while we recognise that Government do intend to use all legitimate means to check the evil of drink, we urge, and I join my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma entirely in urging, that prohibition is the only policy which will effectively combat this growing evil.

"It is not suggested that prohibition should be resorted to all at once; if it is adopted as the ideal to be aimed at by Government, it may take 20 years, it may take 30 years, it may take 40 years to realise it. To my European friends who have been used to indulging in liquor in moderation, the adoption of this principle may appear to be very objectionable. There can be exceptions laid down to meet their case. If the principle is accepted, it can be so worked as to let people live without offending them, without giving them any possible cause for objection. But I ask all sober minded men, all who love humanity to consider whether the cruel infliction which this great and growing evil of drink inflicts upon a growing number of our poor people,—for they are the persons who contribute the largest portion of the excise revenue—does not justify the proposal which my Hon'ble friend has put forward. Following the principle of the maximum of revenue from the minimum of consumption, the Government has for years gone on raising the excise revenue, but notwithstanding this, consumption has in many places increased, even though it has not so increased in other places. I fear the revenue will continue to grow so long as this wretched habit of drink is allowed to grow. Some poor people may to some extent abstain from buying liquor because its price is raised, others who are better off will go in for it. Like my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sarma, I am happy to say that I have no experience of alcohol, but I am not for that reason disqualified to speak on the subject. A reverend Englishman, who is now in Australia, once told me that he knew that a man who once became addicted to drink, always had a craving for it, and that though he might give it up for a time, the moment he had a smell of liquor again, the temptation would be too strong for him to resist. So I fear that the mass of these poor people, mostly labourers and artizans, who have once learnt to indulge in drink, will not abstain from it simply because its cost is somewhat raised. The question then is: Is it right that the Government should expose them to this temptation? I fully understand the Government's desire to check the growth of the habit of drink. I understand that the Government have desired to impose restrictions on the multiplication of liquor shops But, on the whole, these shops have gone on multiplying till they are to be found now all over the country. I submit that so long as the Government will adhere to the policy of checking the consumption of liquor merely by raising the maximum of revenue from it, their policy will fail to meet the situation. The right policy is to aim at total prohibition, to encourage local option more and more,—to proceed cautiously no doubt, as cautiously as circumstances may require, because the revenue cannot be sacrificed in one year or in a few years; but for the sake of humanity to adopt total prohibition as the end and aim of British excise policy in India. If India were a country as cold as England, things might be different; but we have the opinions to which the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has referred and which Hon'ble Members will find quoted in the January number of the 'Abkari,' opinions of prominent medical men, European and Indian, to the effect that alcohol is a poison and that even a moderate use of it is harmful especially in a tropical country like India. We have also the example of some of the United States of America, which have succeeded in carrying out a policy of total prohibition.

"As a writer in the January number of Abkari points out,

'The State of Maine has the honour of being the pioneer in the adoption of this policy and for many years carried it on amidst great difficulties. As the years passed the success of prohibition in dealing with the evils of drink became more and more evident to the Americans, and now it has been adopted by twenty-seven States and the territory of Alaska. Many other States have, through local option, adopted this policy in parts of their area, so that now more than two-thirds of the population of the United States are completely emancipated from the evils of drink. The Canadians have profited by the political experiments of their neighbours, but the decisive argument which moved them to vote for prohibition throughout their vast provinces was that by so doing they would conserve their strength for the war.'

"Concluding his great speech, when introducing the Ontario Prohibition Bill, the Hon'ble W. H. Hearst said,

'If I should neglect to take every action that, in my judgment, will help to conserve the financial strength and power and manhood of this province for the great struggle in which we are engaged, I would be a traitor to my own conscience, and unworthy of the brave sons of Canada that are fighting, bleeding and dying for freedom and for us.'

"We all know that His Majesty, the King-Emperor set a noble example to the whole Empire in the early days of the war by banishing liquor of every description from his palaces. In view of these facts, I appeal to the Government—and I hope I shall appeal not in vain to the Hon'ble Member who is going to deal with this matter—to deal with the Resolution in a very serious spirit. The great bulk of the people, Hindus, Muhammadans, Christians and Parsis, living in this country are not addicted to drink. It is only a very small fraction of the population that indulges in it. But the great bulk of the community is opposed to the present policy of Government. If the Government will consider the magnitude of the evil, it must acknowledge that the recommendation which has been put forward by my Hon'ble friend is one which ought to receive its most serious consideration. The Government of India sacrificed the opium revenue to save our Chinese brethren from the evils of opium. Will the Government of India hesitate on grounds of revenue to prohibit the manufacture of liquor if it once comes to the conclusion that it ought to do so? I hope not. I hope and trust that if the Government should come to the conclusion that, in all the other circumstances of this country, it is the duty of the Government to aim at the total prohibition of drink, the question of revenue will not be allowed to stand in the way of their doing so. The opium revenue was not sacrificed in one day; it was a large item—eight crores and more; and the excise revenue which will have to be sacrificed eventually, if the Resolution is accepted, will also be a large one. But it will not be too heavy a price to pay to secure immunity to our people from the accursed evil of drink. This revenue is being derived from the poorest people It is the poorer classes who contribute largely to the revenue from liquor. I, therefore, submit that the principle of the recommendation ought to be accepted, and a policy should be formulated which will in course of years result in the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquor being totally prohibited. There will always be some people who will try to evade any law that may be passed, but other Governments have successfully put down the illicit manufacture of drink. and I hope the Government of India will be able to do so too. I most earnestly commend the principle of the Resolution to the consideration of Government. No one can imagine that the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma proposes that total prohibition should be introduced at once. If the principle is accepted, it may take 20 years or even a longer period to bring that about, but the principle ought to be adopted, and I hope that, for the sake of the humanity represented by the vast masses of the people who indulge in drink or fall victims to it, the Government will see its way to adopt it."

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Pandit M. M. Malaviya, Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—" Sir, in rising to speak to this Resolution, I desire to say at once that I am a bit of a partisan in this matter. I am a teetotaller; but I take it that in this Council a partisan is not debarred from the right of speaking on behalf of the interest of his party or on behalf of the creed to which he belongs. Sir, I am a partisan through conviction and not through association. I belong to an older generation that is rapidly passing away. I was in my younger days, when I was a student, and under-graduate and a graduate, in close touch with the leading spirits of Bengal in the early sixties and in the early seventies; and I know the atmosphere that prevailed then. I know the horrors that were created in the midst of our society by excessive drink. Some of our best, some of our most illustrious, men fell victims to intemperance, to the vice of drink; and Peary Charan Mitter in the early sixties established a temperance association for the protection of the youth of the country from this evil. I was one of the earliest members of that association, and I rejoice that I joined the standard of temperance at that time. That movement saved Bengal; that movement still endures. Its spirit is permanent and abiding; it still inspires us in the campaign that we are waging at the present moment against intemperance amongst the masses of our people We are teetotallers, and we are anxious that the masses of our people should abstain from indulgence in liquor. Some 25 years ago the out-still system was introduced in Bengal. Bengal civilians are here; the Hon'ble the Home Member knows all about it. The out-still system was a source of mischief, of desolation and ruin to thousands and tens of thousands of the people in the districts of Hooghly and Burdwan. I had the honour of leading the agitation against it and that agitation was triumphant, the out-still system was abolished. Therefore, I say that we in Bengal are teetotallers (I am speaking of the educated community) from conviction and I desire whole-heartedly to associate myself with the Resolution which the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has moved. Sir, it is an ideal; yes; it is an ideal. But it is these ideals of the right type which elevate man, elevate society. Lord Acton, the greatest historian of his generation, has told us that ideals of the right sort appeal to the imagination, stir the enthusiasm and spur us on to work, and Mr. Sarma has presented such an ideal to the Government of India. I admit, and Mr. Sarma has himself pointed out, the limitations of his ideal; he does not say that the ideal is to be given effect to at once. It is to be the goal of British policy in respect of the abkari system, and it is to be attained through progressive stages. One of the speakers who preceded me was pleased to say that Mr. Sarma was somewhat nebulous. I do not see that he was so; a clear goal has been laid down by him, namely, utter prohibition, the end and aim of the abkari policy of Government. If Mr. Sarma has been nebulous at all, it is in respect of the methods to be employed; he leaves these methods to be decided by the administration. He is quite right in doing so. But the administration has already made a start in that direction, and I wish Mr. Sarma had emphasized the methods which have been adopted by the Government. Take, for instance, local option. This has been definitely recognised by the Government. In Bengal in the city of Calcutta itself, we have got a committee appointed for the purpose, the local option committee. That committee fixes the sites every year. In the mofussil the sub-divisional officer every year holds a conference of the leading men and invites them to fix places in which the shops are to be located. I think there ought to be a progressive movement and an advance in this direction, and it strikes me that Mr. Sarma might have pointed out to the Government that here was work for them, work initiated by them, work which they might amplify and carry on. A great deal has to be done, I admit, before we can think of total prohibition. Opinion has to be educated; but before we come to the complete education of public opinion, there is spade work which has to be done, and the Government might apply themselves to it. If the Government lays down definitely the goal which is to be attained in the matter of the abkari system, it will be a sort of guide to collectors and to officers connected with revenue as to the policy that they are to follow. That is all that Mr. Sarma wants, namely, that the policy should be laid down and when this has been done, public opinion will see that it is carried out. It would be a direction and instruction to the officers of Government who, I am sure, will carry out that policy with loyalty, fidelity and devotion as they have always done. I desire thoroughly to associate myself with Mr. Sarma's motion. It is not academical; it will have far-reaching consequences, and I trust it will be accepted in that spirit by the Government."

12-30 P.M.

12-45 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. P. J. Fagan:—"Sir, the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Member is not only very far-reaching in the results which it seeks to secure, but it is also, as it seems to me, based on certain assumptions of a very debatable nature. The Hon'ble Member has, I think, scarcely placed the implications involved in his Resolution in the clearest light; but the line of argument on which it is based may, I think, fairly be compressed into a syllogism, something of the following kind: firstly, the use of alcohol and intoxicating liquors and drugs is morally indefensible; secondly, it is the duty of Government to prohibit all that is morally indefensible; therefore it is the duty of Government to prohibit the use of intoxicating liquors and drugs. I do not propose to enter into any lengthy argument on the first of these premises. It has been the theme of abundant discussion and disagreement on the part of moralists, and though the better moral sense of mankind has condemned the abuse of alcohol and intoxicants, I know not how it can be held that their moderate and reasonable use has been placed on the same level. We have had arguments addressed to us here to-day on this point, and I do not think that it is necessary for me to trouble the Council further on it. The Hon'ble Member has referred to the cases of Russia and America and England. But I venture to urge that such degree of prohibition as it has been possible to secure in those countries is the result of the unique conditions entailed by a world-war without parallel in the world's history; and I would add further that from that degree of prohibition no argument which is really relevant to normal conditions can be drawn, and no valid reasoning can be based on it. The Hon'ble Member has suggested that the moral sense of India has in the past regarded and still regards the use of alcohol and intoxicants as wrong. Historically, at all events, this scarcely seems to be the case. Vedic literature, for instance, has much to tell us about the sacred Soma plant and its intoxicating juice, of the complicated ceremonial appropriate to its extraction and about its vivifying effects both on ministrants and on worshippers. Coming to more modern times, there is no lack of evidence to show that in pre-British days the use of alcohol and intoxicants was not only practised, but that it was also a source of revenue to the State; indeed, our existing excise systems are they not developments and improvements which have been evolved from the crude systems of farm and of out-still inherited from indigenous rule, and in which considerations in favour of restriction and regulation of the use of liquor and intoxicants have to a large extent replaced considerations of pure fiscal gain ?

"Coming to the present, it is not difficult to quote instances where the use of liquor and intoxicants is a social practice definitely recognised and to which no moral stigma attaches. Will any one who knows the Sikhs of the Punjab, fine, manly and on the whole temperate community as they are, say that among them public opinion is yet ripe for total prohibition ? In Central India there are, I believe, aboriginal tribes among whom the use of intoxicating liquor is even yet a necessary adjunct to certain of their religious ceremonies. It is needless to quote other analogous instances. And what of opium ? That drug, I presume, is included in the purview of the Hon'ble Member's Resolution. I am sure that he will be ready to admit that its use, if not universal, is at all events very widespread in this country, much of it for medicinal purposes. Is he prepared to contend that the use of opium is condemned by public opinion, and that public opinion is prepared for total prohibition ? I would urge, therefore, that the first premise involved in the Hon'ble Member's Resolution rests on a somewhat shaky foundation. As regards the second, that it is the duty of Government to prohibit that which is ethically forbidden, how far is he prepared to press this wide extension of the functions of the State ? He knows as well as I do and better that the scope of these functions has been the theme of lengthy, of endless discussions among jurists, among ethical and political thinkers of opposing schools. If any conclusion emerges from these debates and discussions, is it not this, that in the enforcement of moral and ethical ideals it behoves the State to keep well in touch with current moral perception and opinion, and that to advance too far and too fast in front of them is not only useless but ultimately harmful ? And so, it is quite possible that in a small compact political community, socially, racially and religiously united, where a fairly widespread demand for total prohibition exists, it may be both desirable and practicable; in India no such conditions prevail; on the contrary the conditions are at present far different, and we may safely anticipate that for a long time to come they will continue to be so. Though we may recognise with deep satisfaction the growing solicitude, the rising enthusiasm on behalf of temperance among certain sections of the educated classes, nevertheless for total prohibition of the kind advocated by the Hon'ble Member, there appears to be no general demand whatever on moral grounds. But, Sir, a narrower, a more practical, perhaps a more sordid view of the bearings of the Hon'ble Member's Resolution presents itself. I will make him a present of the two highly debatable assumptions on which his arguments appear to be based. Let us assume that in the abstract it is the duty of the Indian Government to prohibit the use of alcoholic and other intoxicants; by what means is that policy to be practically carried out under the social conditions which prevail in India ? The charge is not infrequently formulated, more or less definitely, against Indian administration that it employs too large a number of lowly paid agents. In my humble opinion the criticism is not entirely devoid of foundation. How far and by what means that defect can be remedied is not a question with which we are concerned at present; but one point seems to me to be beyond possibility of contradiction, and that is that the effective enforcement of the policy advocated by the Hon'ble Member must involve an immense addition to the army of underlings Our existing establishment for the prevention and detection of excise offences is of no mean proportions; but to me it is little short of appalling to think of the swarm of petty officials armed with profitable powers of annoyance which it would be necessary to let loose on the country if the policy advocated by the Hon'ble Member is to be effectively enforced. The toddy-drinker of Madras, the aboriginal of Central India, the lugri-drinkers of Kulu, Kangra and other hill tracts, the stalwart Jat of the Punjab, the consumer of opium throughout the length and breadth of India, and hosts of others which it is not necessary to name, would all fall within the meshes of a network of espionage and annoyance for which it would perhaps be difficult to find a parallel in the annals of civilised government. Sir, the Resolution of the Hon'ble Member seems to be one based on no secure foundation of moral desirability, it meets no public or general demand, while from the point of view of satisfactory enforcement it is, I think, wholly and entirely impracticable. For these reasons, I think that the Council will be well advised to reject decisively the Resolution of the Hon'ble Member."

[Mr. P. J. Fagan; Sir Dinshaw Wacha.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

1 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—" Sir, I am one of those who have been for the last forty years severely criticising the excise policy of the Government of India. Ever since the introduction of the Excise Act in 1878, I have been the critic of Government. But I became a severer critic in the year 1885 when the Archbishop of Canterbury along with a number of Parliamentarians presented a respectable and well reasoned address to the Government of India through the House of Commons that the excise policy of the Indian Government should be modified. At that time, Sir, my own experience told me that we had in the Bombay Presidency a Member of the Government in the Revenue Department who was afterwards known as Sir Charles Pritchard, a great authority on excise matters whose policy demanded challenge. With him, therefore, I had many bouts, and once he abused me for lack of arguments to answer my charges in the open Council by saying that Mr. Wacha held a brief on behalf of the toddy sellers of Bombay ! But, as a matter of fact, those toddy sellers I have not known for the last thirty years either by name or by face or in person ! But that is the story. Whenever the question of excise policy has been brought forward in any assembly or in the press or on the congress platform, it has been the practice more or less with those connected with the Excise Department to throw red herrings across the trail and actually mislead the public by, of course, misrepresenting the real issues at the bottom of their excise policy But, Sir, this is such a large question and the problems involved in it are so many, that it is impossible for one, in the 25 or 30 minutes allowed in this place, to expatiate on it at great length ; for, if one were to make an attempt to do so he may never finish it Historians and philosophers, scholars and statesmen, and, even social and temperance reformers have for years past said so much on this subject as to fill volumes. I know what a great many economists have said on the subject, and I know that as a matter of fact even in India, as in America and elsewhere, there are always two sides to the question, one section always advocating the use of alcohol and the other condemning its use. The whole question of alcohol from the scientific point of view I will not pretend to discuss, because I am not an expert on the subject. But it seems to me always this, that in alcohol as in medicine, there are two sides. Years ago there was in the latter case the allopathic side and the homoeopathic side, and I remember that in the seventies the allopaths and the homoeopaths fought like Kilkenny cats, one side saying that their system was right and the other saying that their system was right ; so in the same way here too one side holds that the use of alcohol should be prohibited totally, and the other holds that its use in small or large doses does not affect the whole population, and if it does affect at all it is only a very small fraction of humanity that abuses the habit of drink and so on. Therefore, Sir, even here there are two sides to the question, and of course in the on it, policy of the Government of India it is not only the mora in the

of the question that is involved, but the economic and the revenue point is also involved, and where revenue, specially excise, is concerned we know, Sir, as a matter of fact, that the Government of India is inexorable and incorrigible. It is incurable and irredeemable. And as far as excise is concerned, I will say so emphatically because I have said so years and years ago on many a platform and I have also repeated my views in my pamphlet. The pamphlet is there, anybody can read it. The fact is this, that the Government of India is right so far as it says that their objects are simply to have a minimum of consumption and a maximum of revenue, and that is the only way to diminish insobriety. That is a policy laid down for years together. They have never changed it.

"The fact is that the Excise Act came into operation in 1878. It is now 40 years. May I ask the Government itself what has been the result of that policy of maximum of revenue and minimum of consumption? This only, that while the revenue has increased from perhaps 2 crores to 13 crores, the consumption has also increased. Nobody can deny it. There are ample statistics in the different provinces to confirm this. Even the Government of India will admit that that has been the case. Now, a policy is always, of course, tested by its results, and the question is, taking this policy of excise, what has been the result? Can any one on behalf of the Government of India, who represents the Excise Department here, say that that policy has been successful in the way that is wanted? Maximum of revenue there is; but where is the minimum of consumption? Insobriety is increasing and extending. Where there were no drink shops before, new ones have been created. The Government pretends to say that already they are curtailing the number of shops. That is no criterion. Does the mere number of shops curtailed mean that there is a curtailment in consumption? Nothing of the kind. One shop itself may sell ten thousand gallons or more, while six shops might not sell more than a thousand gallons altogether; so the number of shops is no criterion. Even the great historian, Leckey, having gone into this great question has said so. Therefore the curtailment in the number of shops is no criterion of the actual diminution of consumption. The only criterion is consumption by itself; and none can deny that consumption is increasing. As far as Bombay is concerned, I have been a close student of the subject for the last 40 years, and many a time I have had discussions with Government on the subject before I brought out the pamphlet to which I have alluded. I have also stated facts in my letters to the press and on the platform, and I have come to the conclusion that the revenue under this head has increased, and side by side insobriety too has increased. That is the whole test and in Bombay, I believe, I am only speaking from memory, that the total amount of country spirits consumed has gone to such an enormous length that it brings in a revenue of something very near 2 crores.

"My friend here, Mr. Sarma, said something about the Madras toddy and the people taking to it. Now, the difference between Madras and Bombay is this. In the Bombay Presidency there are large quantities of mhowra flowers which are distilled into mhowra spirit. On the Madras side there is the toddy spirit made out of the palm. In Madras, as Government says, people drink too much of raw toddy and therefore they get insober. There is also a good deal of illicit distillation going on in toddy spirit, and that is the reason why the people are so insober. In Madras the raw toddy revenue is eight times larger than in Bombay. In Bombay two mhowra Bills have been passed since 1880; greater stringencies placed, and a large number of excise rules have been in operation, and yet what is the result? The result is increased consumption and insobriety. Nothing more. As I said more than two years ago in the Press, Bombay is the most bibulous province of the whole Empire, because there you see the people drink country spirits very hard; and speaking of Bombay I do say that perhaps one p[illegible] have drink and drinkshops been pushed here and there and in every that th[illegible] largely. I see my friend Sir Claude Hill sitting there and laughing.

[Sir Dinshaw Wacha.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

I suppose he knows better as a late Member of the Government of Bombay what is the state of drink in Bombay. But I dare say, Sir, that members from the different provinces will tell the same tale of increased consumption. There is no question about it. Perhaps three times Government have appointed Excise Commissions. There was a Bengal Excise Commission to which my friend Mr. Surendra Nath has just alluded. We had some Excise Committees in Bombay and other places and so on, and once a very big Excise Commission some years ago went round the whole country and, like all other Commissions, made a voluminous report. But what has been the result? I say absolutely none. The whole excise policy of the Government which has been repeated over and over again is misconceived. The Government lays down in the abstract a policy of temperance, while the Government action in the concrete is a policy of growing intemperance. That is the long and short of it. One of the causes, I believe, why the excise revenue has increased very considerably is this. In former years the Anti-Opium Society in England, which is a very powerful Society, I think, under the leadership of the late Sir Wilfred Lawson said that the opium revenue was immoral, it ought to be stopped, and that the Government was deriving so many crores of rupees from that immoral traffic; and that that immoral traffic was killing so many millions of Chinese people. That is why the opium traffic should be abolished. Years together the agitation went on and eventually the Government of India was obliged, under the pressure of the House of Commons and the temperance advocates there, to abolish the opium traffic till at last we all know the result is, that under the treaty with China, during the last ten years, the opium revenue is now brought almost to zero, from 9 or 10 crores it has declined to one and a half crore. But the Government of India was shrewd enough to foresee that if the opium revenue was to be gradually diminished they would have to go on with other sources of revenue. Those sources of revenue are very inelastic in India, and the only revenue which could bring to the State Treasury many crores of rupees would be that from the drink traffic. So on one side the opium revenue was steadily diminished year by year by half a crore or so till the Chinese treaty ended, and on the other side the drink traffic was pushed. Students of statistics may see side by side in parallel columns how, as the opium revenue was decreasing, the excise revenue was increasing. I do not think it has yet reached what I may call the maximum or boiling point of excise. Possibly it may go down if Mr. Sarma's proposition is passed, which I doubt However, this is the position. Tested by results, the Government policy of excise has failed and is bound to fail, and I should never be sorry. Mr. Sarma's proposition is considered 'Utopian,' I think, as an Hon'ble Member on the opposite side said. It is considered both 'Utopian' and 'revolutionary.' Utopian it may be, because it is an ideal which is put forward. My friend, Mr. Banerjea, said the same thing. Ideals are very useful, that is ideas involving a high moral standard. We can go on stage by stage cherishing them until we reach that standard. Ideas develop. They educate public opinion and, therefore, the idea, though an ideal one, will take shape by and by. In the same way I may say that though Mr. Sarma may be only putting this idea before you to-day, I am quite sure that 50 years hence that idea will fructify, and India will be a temperance country altogether, and that the policy of prohibition will be completely accepted. It was also said it was 'revolutionary,' the same gentleman said so, I think—I may be corrected if I am wrong. What is revolutionary that Mr. Sarma has put forward? Nothing whatever; he himself admits it is an ideal. He knows very well the excise policy of the Government for years together and that his ideal therefore cannot be carried out, but that the people should be therein educated and the Government also should be educated. Therefore it is rather a proposition of an evolutionary character. It is the evolution of excise; there is no revolution. Mr. Sarma does not say that with one stroke of the pen the revenue should be abolished as Russia is said to have abolished 90 millions of Vodka revenue. An abolition of that character would be deemed 'revolutionary.' We all know as practical men that that was not intended. I would, however, advise Mr. Sarma not to look to Government for his total prohibition policy. The Government of India at any rate, I think, will not listen to his proposal for years to come. But we ourselves may do a great deal in this respect. Reform, they say, is always from within. Therefore it depends on ourselves, non-official Members of this Council, to go out of this Council hall and try, wherever there is a drink shop, to have side by side a palatial and attractive non-alcoholic shop, to supply tea, coffee and good non-alcoholic stimulants. If you have these tea shops, I am quite sure that by and by people will be weaned from the habit of drinking liquor and greatly encouraged to resort to tea and coffee and other non-alcoholic beverages. That is the way the reform should take place. Government may or may not do anything, but my advice to Mr. Sarma, as to all my other non-official friends, is that where there is to-day one drink shop in a locality they should have two tea shops to-morrow. Have tea and cakes but not cakes and ale, and I think, Sir, we shall in that way institute a better reform in temperance, and by such means eventually reform the Government itself. Because the more that tea shops are established and the alcoholic shops reduced, the more will Government revenue decline, and the eyes of Government will be opened. In that way intemperance will diminish; that is the only way it can diminish. All the same I believe that in Mr. Sarma's Resolution there are germs of good, and because there are such germs of good that my sympathies are with it. With these remarks I take my seat."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"Sir, I had no intention to intervene in this debate at all, but I think I owe the Council, after my old friend Sir Dinshaw's remarks, a personal explanation. Sir Dinshaw has most generously, but I think exaggeratedly, represented me as occupying, or implied that I occupy, a position of undeserved (if evil) eminence, namely, that of an expert in alcoholism. I should like to explain to the Council, if it interests them at all, that I am in point of fact what I may term a practising teetotaller. At the same time I am in no position to stand up for or protect the official morality of the Bombay Government. That is for my Hon'ble friend Mr. Kincaid to do if he feels able to. I should, however, like to answer the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha in respect of one point, and that is this; that the growth of licit consumption of alcohol by no means implies that there is a growth in the aggregate consumption of alcohol. It is within my personal experience in one of the districts of Gujerat that there followed a very considerable decrease in drunkenness in consequence of providing facilities for retailing licit liquor within that area. I merely offer this as an independent observation on my Hon'ble friend's remarks, not as an authorized advocate of the Bombay Government, with which I am not at present connected."

1-15 P.M.

The Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri:—"Sir, I fully sympathize with the aim in view of the Hon'ble Member the Mover I can well understand what motive prompted the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma to bring the Resolution in this Council. Perhaps Hon'ble Members remember a similar measure was brought last year with the object of checking the evil of intemperance in India.

1-17 P.M.

"Sir, I submit that the recommendations which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma has put forward before the Council might seem revolutionary in character, but not with certain modifications impracticable. The principle at least could be put into practice without much difficulty.

"The scope of the Excise Department in British India covers a considerable area, the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor, hemp drugs and opium, all of them commodities whose use must in the interest of the people be controlled.

"Sir, I was for a considerable period under the impression that the theory propounded in certain text books of political economy that the proper way to deal with intoxicants is to levy a high duty with the aim of restricting its consumption is correct. It was my delusion that if the price of the intoxicants was raised beyond the capacity of poor consumers a large number of people would be saved from a terrible fate. But as one gets old and acquires experience in practical life the theories so jealously guarded in youth become delusions, and I have come to the clear though rather painful conclusion that the raising of the price of intoxicants—without doing anything to reduce the facilities for obtaining them—does not decrease consumption. The proper way of dealing with these intoxicants with the object of rescuing the victims of its vice from its clutches is not to make them dearer, but to make them less procurable.

"Sir, I for one would gladly support a policy of total prohibition in these matters, as that I think is the most effective way of dealing with the problem. Failing the first expedient I respectfully beg to urge that the next best policy is to make them rare and out of reach. It is superfluous to urge the fearful hold which these intoxicants come to acquire over their victims.

"Sir, I am sure the Council will agree with me that the principal religions of India prohibit the drinking of intoxicants and, if the Government agrees to accept the Resolution of the Mover, it will receive the sturdy support of the people.

"The evil has grown enormously and is still growing. The revenues of the Excise Department are conclusive evidence of my assertion. This curse is chiefly confined to the poorer classes. The educated classes have fortunately escaped from its clutches. The first after-effects of Western education had in its train both vices and virtues. It was at one time thought fashionable and in keeping with the newly-acquired culture to drink; but, thank God, our present rising generation is getting further and further from this evil. It is really the people of the lower classes who are falling victims to it and, on behalf of these people, I appeal to the Government, as well as to the people of this country, to take active steps in this matter. The evil of drink is working havoc among the humble labourers, the wage-earners who earn their wages by the sweat of their brows in mills, in factories, and in workshops situated in modern big cities where a concourse of labouring classes are huddled together without regard to sanitation and moral laws. To these hard-worked people the temptation of drowning their misery in intoxicants is great, and it becomes still more so by the present excise policy by which liquor has been brought to the very doors of these poor people by the establishment of a number of grog shops in the bastis populated by these people.

"Sir, I can give instances without number where the practice of smoking narcotic drugs ruined brilliant careers and resulted in reducing men to the level of beasts and of happy homes destroyed by this vice.

Sir, the total prohibition of intoxicating drugs (except for medicinal purposes) would be more conducive to the public good. The habit of taking intoxicating drugs in moderation always leads to disastrous results, and it is an open secret that this habit cannot be kept within limits. It imperceptibly creeps upon a man and ultimately makes him a slave of a dangerous vice over which he has no control.

"Sir, in urging the Council to accept the Resolution, I would like to mention similar difficulties recently solved in some countries of Europe. Russia had been slowly decaying from the evil effects of Vodka drinking, but the recent war brought the people to their senses and the use of Vodka was made criminal, although it is probable that the recent revolution has changed the habits of the people again. Similarly, the Government of France has taken drastic action by prohibiting the importation of spirits into that country. The Government of Denmark, after prohibiting the use of Danish corn and potatoes in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors, have now prohibited the manufacture of all intoxicants throughout the whole country in order to preserve the food of the people. The Chinese people are making a tremendous effort in shaking off their opium habit, and have made marvellous progress in that direction already.

"Sir, I cannot foresee what blessing the peace will bring, but this much I can see that the cause of temperance will be championed by the great nations of the world after the war. There are already signs of world-wide temperance, and, Sir, if India lags behind in the great effort to shake off the evil, then let the blame lie not on her people.

"With these words I support the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir J. Donald :—"Sir, take these two concrete cases. The Sikhs do not smoke, but they drink alcoholic liquors. Yet they make splendid citizens and fine soldiers among the nations of India. On the other hand, the Muhammadans by their religion are not allowed to drink, but they smoke. Yet there is nothing wrong with the Muhammadans of India as a body. 1-25 P.M.

"Now, is it intended by this Council to interfere with the ancient customs of the Sikhs with regard to the use of alcoholic liquors or with the desires of the Muhammadans with regard to their smoking by this policy of total prohibition of alcoholic liquors and intoxicating drugs? The Sikh and Muhammadan communities are quite capable of looking after themselves, and there is no need for these spoon-feeding methods."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—"Sir, I think it is very necessary to bear in mind the scope of the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution in the discussion of this subject. As one previous speaker has pointed out, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma does not want the Government of India by a stroke of the pen to undo the excise policy which they have followed during the last many, many, years. He wants a definite ideal and principle to be recognised and to be worked up to in future; and I do not think that, so far as that ideal is concerned, the Government of India need expect that any Indian would differ from it. I regret that some side issues have been raised during the discussion. One Hon'ble Member wanted us to go into the intricate question of the duty of the State to look after the morals of the people. He referred to juristic views of the duty of the State. May I remind the Hon'ble Member that, so far as modern jurisprudence in the West is concerned, it takes a very different view of the duties of the State to that which was accepted by the English nation in the time of Austin, and on which the English nation has not been able to make any improvement during the last 60 years. The conception of the State accepted by continental writers is absolutely different to what was advocated by Austin. I must however, refuse to go into this juristic question at the present moment. It is enough for me to remind the Hon'ble Member that the State, has in India, too, arrogated to itself certain duties which it was unwilling and which it would have been unwilling to arrogate to itself 50 years ago, whenever it has found that the individual or society stood in need of protection against himself or itself. 1-26 P.M.

"Then again, one Hon'ble Member has shown a particular keenness for the protection of the usages of certain classes of people in this country. Well, as an Indian, I should be very much interested to know whether there is any system of religion as opposed to practice which inculcates the necessity or the desirability of drinking as a part of religious life. It was news to me, Sir, this morning to hear that any interference by the State in a matter like this would be looked upon by the great Sikh community as an interference with their religious tenets or practices.

"Now, Sir, the fact of the matter is that all these issues are raised, as the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea said, in a spirit of partisanship. I think that, while I am prepared to extend my unqualified sympathy to the principle for which the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has stood up to-day, I ought not to conceal from myself or from the Council that Mr. Sarma would have been well-advised if he had worded his Resolution a little more cautiously. It will be within the recollection of this Council that the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma had a great deal to say upon the same subject last year, and I should have expected him to have pursued his Resolution a step further to-day, and to have asked for a more liberal extension of the principle of local option, as a material step towards the recognition of that principle with which I am in deep sympathy and which he has put before us.

"Again, we live in hard times when everything ultimately resolves itself to pound, shilling and pence; and I think the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma would have been well-advised in dealing with that aspect of the question, and also in pointing out to the Government and the Council the sources from which he would contribute to the general revenue of the country to make up the deficit that would naturally arise from the total prohibition of drink in course of time. I regret therefore that the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution should have been worded as it is worded, although I can assure him that so far as the principle which he wants the recognition of to-day is concerned, I am in deep sympathy with that.

"With these few words I support the Resolution."

1-20 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"Sir, I listened with great interest to the Hon'ble Mover's speech and the speeches of those who followed him on the same side. I listened, too, with great respect for I know how deeply they all feel what they have said. The Hon'ble Mover tells us that he wishes to uproot the policy of the Government of India with regard to temperance. This policy was laid down as far back as 1905, and I should like to read to the Council the whole of the Resolution which contains that policy including the last two lines which the Hon'ble Mover for some reason or other, omitted. The Resolution runs as follows:—

'The Government of India have no desire to interfere with the habits of those who use alcohol in moderation. This is regarded by them as outside the duty of the Government, and it is necessary, in their opinion, to make due provision for the needs of such persons. Their settled policy, however, is to minimise temptation to those who do not drink and to discourage excess among those who do, and, in furtherance of this policy, all considerations of revenue must be absolutely subordinated.......'

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—They are not.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes—"Now I would ask each Member of this Council whether the policy laid down in this Resolution is not a sound one, making allowance as it does for the different views and different tastes of the different sections of the community. The acceptance of my Hon'ble friend's Resolution will mean the acceptance of a policy of autocratic interference with the liberty of the subject. The use of alcohol is by the religion of some of us forbidden, and for the observance of that prohibition by those whom it affects we all have a deep respect. To others of us there is nothing inherently wrong in the use of alcohol. It is not the thing itself which is an evil, but the excess of it. Taken in moderation it is to some people one of the luxuries and one of the pleasures of life, and to some again a moderate use of it is a real benefit to health. I remember that on one occasion Dr. Johnson said 'Not to drink wine is a great reduction from life.'

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"He drank 17 cups of tea at a time."

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"In quoting Dr. Johnson I do not wish to be understood as suggesting that his example is one that we should in all respects follow. I would, however, ask my Hon'ble friend why he has stopped short at alcohol and drugs. Why has he not included tobacco in his Resolution? Do not exactly the same arguments apply to both? Both tobacco and alcohol must be classed as intoxicants; taken in moderation each gives pleasure to some persons; the use of each is from time to time recommended by the Medical faculty; and both tobacco and alcohol when taken in excess have bad results on health. Perhaps, however, I am anticipating the Hon'ble Member's intentions. Perhaps he is saving the case of tobacco for another Resolution.

"There might, I think, have been more to be said for the policy which the Hon'ble Mover would have us adopt if he had been able to show that the drink evil is really of extreme seriousness, and one which is eating into the vitals of the people. But this is certainly not the case. In the papers relating to Excise Administration in India, which were published in 1914, it was shown that the consumption of country spirit per hundred of the population had, between the years 1905-06 and 1912-13, increased by only 5 per cent. This, in spite of the fact that the conversion of outstills into distillery shops—a process which has been continuously going on—exaggerates the figures representing the recorded consumption; and in spite further of the general rise in wages and increased prosperity of the lower classes. The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha said just now that the policy must be judged by its results, and I think that he implied, though he did not quite say, that I should find that the figures were entirely against me. I should like to give him the figures for the past three years. The proof gallons consumed in 1913-14 were 10,432,000. That is the total for all India and to that total Bombay contributed 2,675,000 gallons. The total for 1914-15 was 9,468,000—a fall of a million gallons, and the Bombay total fell from 2,675,000 to 2,524,000 gallons. The total for 1915-16 was 8,538,000—again a fall of nearly a million, and Bombay fell from 2,524,000 to 2,325,000. Consequently Bombay, during the past three years, that is, the last years for which I have got figures, has fallen in consumption to the extent of 300,000 gallons a year. . . .

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—"Have the conditions of the war been taken into account for all the different provinces?"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I must ask the Hon'ble Member to address his remarks to the Chair."

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes :—"I should also like to point out to the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma that he omitted the figures for 1914-15 and 1915-16 altogether. He does not seem to have got later figures than those for 1913-14.

"I think that my Hon'ble friend takes an exaggerated view of the danger which undoubtedly exists in this as in every other country He makes the same over-estimate as an old acquaintance of mine with, however, very different results. The acquaintance of whom I speak invested his all in vine-growing because he argued that if people are up in the world they always drink freely, and if they are down on their luck, they drink all the more to drown care. Though in this way he seemed to be sure to get the best of both worlds, the vine-growing did not turn out a commercial success.

"I come now to the more practical side of the question. I have tried to urge that it would not be right to prohibit the use of alcohol to the large number of people who use it in moderation merely for the sake of preventing excess among the comparatively few who take it in excess. But even if this view were controverted and it were held to be desirable to effect this drastic interference with the habits of normal people, who are capable of self-restraint, and who after all are in the large majority, would the effect desired be attained? I say emphatically 'No'. It seems to me that in common with many other earnest temperance reformers the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution has wholly minimised the danger of illicit practices. After all, the very first duty of Government in all questions of Excise Administration is the suppression of illicit manufacture and sale. This is of even greater importance than the reduction of licit consumption. I cannot do better than repeat what was said in the Despatch of the Government of India of the 26th February 1914, printed in the papers relating to Excise Administration, to which I have already referred. The Government of India then used these words:—

'We desire to dissociate ourselves entirely from the theory that if the licit supply were completely stopped consumption would diminish. It is difficult under present conditions to guard against illicit manufacture. If licit supplies were stopped, the task, hard as it is, would become impossible, and the result would be completely to defeat the ideals to which both the deputation (they were referring to the Temperance Deputation that waited on the Secretary of State) and we ourselves aspire. Possibly, the immediate result of such a course might be a reduction in the total number of consumers; but intemperance would certainly increase, as a result of lower retail prices, and we have no doubt that ultimately consumption would rise considerably beyond the level which it has now attained. Nor could any moral principles justify the demoralising effect on large sections of the population of the evasion of laws which it would be impossible to enforce. In these circumstances, we do not consider that we should be justified in prohibiting moderate consumption even with a view to check occasional abuse. We are only justified in expecting, by the measures already indicated, to secure the enhancement of retail prices and thereby to impose an artificial check on the increase of consumption, which would otherwise occur as a result of natural tendencies.'

This is really the crux of the whole question, namely, how to prevent illicit practices.

"If total prohibition were the law of the land, it would be impossible to prevent the certain consequence of a great increase in illicit consumption, which, to use Lord Hardinge's words, 'would be a far more serious evil in its effect on the health and morals of the people.' What I have said with regard to alcohol applies with equal force to drugs, such as opium. The use of cocaine, as my Hon'ble friend knows, is already entirely prohibited except for medical purposes.

"Let me here refer to another aspect of the matter. If all consumption of liquor and drugs were rendered illegal you would have, as my Hon'ble friend Mr. Fagan said to 'have an army of Excise Inspectors to prevent illicit practices probably a much larger number than you have at present.' To this, there are two obvious objections; firstly, without casting any imputation whatsoever on the good sense and integrity of the Excise staff, which I should be the first to acknowledge, I think that a considerable amount of increased harassment and petty interference would be bound to result. I cannot but believe that a measure of this sort would provoke mistrust and uneasiness among that major portion of the poorer classes who are at present entirely moderate consumers of intoxicating liquors and drugs. Secondly, where are you going to get the money to pay for this Excise staff when your Excise revenue has been abolished? Your expenditure would rapidly increase; your revenue would disappear. Indeed, knowing and appreciating the interest which the Hon'ble Mover takes in Excise revenue, for I seem to recollect an occasion last year when he moved with his accustomed eloquence in this Council a Resolution in favour of increasing the Provincial share in the Excise revenue of Madras, I am somewhat surprised to find that he is now urging a policy which would reduce that revenue to nil.

"I do not wish to detain the Council longer except to remind you that our Excise policy has been built up by slow and steady steps. If I may repeat the often-expressed principles on which that policy is based, they are: firstly, that any extension of the habit of drinking is to be discouraged; secondly, that taxation is to be as high as possible without encouraging illicit manufacture and sale; and thirdly, that, subject to these considerations, a maximum revenue is to be raised from a minimum consumption, and we claim to have the cause of temperance as much at heart as the Hon'ble Mover, but we differ from him in his belief that our mutual object can be secured by the simple short cut which he suggests. I regret, therefore, that I am unable, on behalf of Government, to accept the Hon'ble Mover's Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur, B. N. Sarma:—"I am glad, Sir, that most of the non-official Indian Members have been able to see eye to eye with me as regards the principle which I have tried to get enunciated for the acceptance of Government. I cannot help regretting that the real point that I have urged in support of my Resolution has somehow escaped the attention of the Hon'ble Sir A. H. Grant and the Hon'ble Mr. Fagan and the Hon'ble Member in charge of the portfolio. That was, not that on the principles which have been laid down by the Government of India during the past thirty years they have not tried to do their best to promote temperance, but that on the basis of that policy it would be impossible for them to achieve the object they and I have, namely, promoting temperance in the land. The question that I put to Members was this, that if the Government undertakes the responsibility of providing for the drinker in moderation whether it would not logically follow that they cannot decline to extend the drinking shops to the 700,000 villages if it should so unfortunately happen that a small minority in those villages required a drink shop; and whether the evil which at present is in an incipient stage is not bound to extend so far as to make the worst of the evils of Europe appear light in comparison with the evils which may be in store for us. The Hon'ble Sir A. H. Grant, not really addressing himself to the excise problem, has probably never understood it or tried to grasp it and has characterised my attempt to interest the Government of India in grappling with the policy at issue as useless and the problem as one of mere academic and nebulous interest. Well, I always understood that the question whether a liquor shop should be opened here or there is for the local bodies, that the somewhat larger questions affecting the provinces were for the Provincial Councils, but that the larger ideals and principles which have to shape the Government policy and the larger policy of the whole country have to be enunciated here; and if in my own humble way I thought that the basic principles on which that policy is based would defeat the object which the policy has at heart and tried to interest the Council and show how the Resolution has an immediate practical application on the every day administration, not of thirty years hence, but of to-morrow and the present day, how this happens to be a mere question of academic or nebulous interest, unfit for discussion in this Council, passes my understanding.

1-46 P.M.

"To persons who are accustomed to mere routine work of a particular character these large questions may seem to be irrelevant, but in the Legislative Council and in the Government of India I still hope to indulge in the belief that there will be statesmen who will think and fight for the correction of false or wrong ideals. To that extent I plead guilty to the charge. The Hon'ble Sir A. H. Grant has somewhat to my surprise referred to the question of the re-distribution of provincial areas. May I remind him that on that question I adhere to the view that the question is one of immediate practical application though he may differ from me, and having regard to his remarks I regret to state, though it is a personal matter, that I brought forward the Resolution though the Andhra districts to which I belong may economically suffer by separation on the lines which I have urged; from that point of view it was an act of self-sacrifice to move the Resolution and I was not seeking popularity thereby. With regard to the Hon'ble Mr. Fagan's remarks, I am afraid he has not understood me correctly; he brings in questions of morality, doubtful juristic doctrines as to whether it is in the province of the State to promote mere academical doctrines unconnected with the welfare of the community. I do not recollect having brought in the question of morality. My contention was that national efficiency and national well-being would suffer industrially, economically and otherwise; and in view of the larger issues at stake the individual is of small concern. I may have been wrong or I may have been right, but there is no question of doubtful doctrines of morality at this particular stage of the discussion. I do not know whether the Hon'ble

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

Member is aware that Mr. Lloyd-George the responsible Minister of Great Britain believes that drink is doing much more damage in the war than all the German submarines put together. Facts and figures were quoted which ought to convince anyone that although there may be moderate drinkers there is a very large number of immoderate drinkers and that the excise system of Great Britain tends to paralyse national efficiency and renders drastic action necessary. I wish to avoid a similar catastrophe in India. If there is no question of morality brought in, then the only other question is whether national efficiency is impaired or not. I do not think that question anybody has attempted to meet here and I do not think it would admit of any argument whatever. Sir A. H. Grant said that he was none the worse for having taken liquor in moderation, I agree, but I venture to tell him that he would have been better now if he had taken no drink during the last 40 years. However, these are questions of relativity, and I do not think we should discuss these personal questions of what is good for one or bad for another individual. As to whether the question is academic I did not ask the Hon'ble Sir G. Barnes to change the whole of the abkari policy immediately or violently, but what I said was, that though several other difficulties would still remain in the pursuit of our ideals a change of policy would relieve the Government of a certain responsibility they have undertaken, and they would by declining to open more shops promote national efficiency; unless this is done, questions of local option and of the minority oppressing the majority or the majority oppressing the minority will not receive proper attention, unless the policy of Government is changed, there is no chance for local option. Then a reference has been made by Mr. Fagan to Sikhs and to aboriginal tribes. I am sorry he should have grouped them together, and I think my Hon'ble friend Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia would have resented this if he had been here. What I said was, that there should be limitations subject to meeting the sentiments of particular communities, and that there should be a gradual evolution. The mere fact that I quoted the total average for India as ·046 against 27 for England proves that though particular classes may indulge in this practice occasionally as an every-day habit it is unknown to the vast masses of this country. It was said that figures of recent years show clearly that there has been a decline, and that therefore Hon'ble Members need not be so sceptical as to the efficacy of the system. Sir George Barnes said that there had been a decline from 10 to 8. There have been abnormal conditions during the war and certain industries have been hard hit; and the figures do not therefore permit any correct data for judgment, but I have accepted the explanation of the Government usually given in such cases that prosperity increases the drink traffic, and that the increase of wages causes a greater indulgence in drink. It was easy in England during the war through the machinery which has been devised by Government to meed the situation partially, and it is very necessary to safeguard the nation against such vices. This much at all events will be achieved by the acceptance of the principle. I urge that no one will venture to open a new shop in uncontaminated villages unless it be for the purpose of checking illicit distillation and not on the ground that a section of the people desire it; to that extent in will be an effective check.

"Then, with regard to the ancient Hindus indulging in the vedic times in Soma juice, well that is a very hopeful feature that has been brought to light in the course of this discussion. The ancient Hindus have outgrown that habit and have effectually prevented other classes, as far as it lay in their power from taking to that habit by hitting upon the right doctrine several generations ago and have solved to the world the possibility of introducing total prohibition by law making and by religious ordinances. Consequently it is a most hopeful feature, and the past history of the Hindus has an immediate bearing upon the question as to whether the Government of India will be equally successful as the sages in the past. I therefore ask that the Government of India should take their courage in their hands as the ancient sages did and immediately think as to whether a declaration of policy cannot be made on the lines I have suggested.

[20TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

The motion was put and the Council divided as follows :—

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 28th February 1918, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. A winter disturbance gave fairly widespread rain or snow in north Baluchistan, the North-West Frontier Province, Kashmir and the north and central Punjab. Rainfall occurred also in Assam, Central India East, the Central Provinces, Mysore, Malabar and along the southeast coast of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the weather was dry.

2. Burma.—Myitkyina had a light fall of rain.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—There was widespread rain in Assam on the 25th, 26th and 27th, and light rain at Darjiling on the 26th.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Light isolated falls of rain occurred on the 22nd in the east of the Central Provinces, and local rain in the west of the Central Provinces and the east of Central India on the 23rd, and in the east of the Central Provinces on the 24th; in the United Provinces light rain was reported from Jhansi and Chakrata.

Northwest India.—Light rain fell locally in north Baluchistan on the 22nd and 24th, in the north Punjab on the 24th and 25th and in the North-West Frontier Province on the 25th, while in Kashmir local falls of rain and snow occurred on the 24th, and a few falls on the 25th and 26th.

The Peninsula.—There was fairly general rain along the east coast from Masulipatam southwards, with a few falls in Mysore and Malabar on the 21st and 22nd.

3. The chief amounts of precipitation were as follows :—

February 21st. Masulipatam 1·05" and Trichinopoly 0·71".
" 22nd. Dalbandin 0·46", Quetta 0·32" and Parachinar 0·30".
" 23rd. Seoni 0·47", Pendra 0·49", Parachinar 0·39", and Quetta 0·20".
" 24th. Pendra 0·80", Chaman 0·69", Sonamarg 0·84", Murree 1·25", Cherat 0·59", Sialkot 0·26" and Rawalpindi 0·24".
" 25th. Sibsagar 0·47", Khushab 0·20" and Lahore 0·12".
" 26th. Sibsagar 0·41".

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Burma, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Punjab East and North, Kashmir, Sind, Rajputana East, Central India West, Berar and Hyderabad, and 20 per cent or more in excess in Assam, the Central Provinces proper, Mysore, Madras Southeast and Madras Coast North. It was within 20 per cent of the normal in the Punjab Southwest, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Central India East and Malabar. No rain usually falls at this time of year in Rajputana West, Gujarat, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan and the Madras Deccan.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 23rd February 1918.

Burma.—The week was rainless. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice is almost completed. Plucking of tobacco is progressing. Cultivation of spring crops and harvesting of beans, maize, wheat and other miscellaneous crops is proceeding. Standing crops are generally good. Cattle are healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has risen slightly but is below normal. The market for white rice is quiet at Rs. 230 for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Plucking of cotton is finished. Harvesting of mustard is nearing completion. Pruning of tea, pressing of sugarcane, transplantation of spring rice and ploughing for autumn and winter rice and jute continue. Prospects and outturn of crops are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from three districts. Price of common rice has fallen slightly.

Bengal.—The weather continues to be rainless. Preparatory tillage for the next season's autumn crops is in full swing in the eastern Bengal districts but rain is urgently needed. Harvesting of sugarcane and spring crops is in progress. The prospects of standing crops have been affected somewhat by prolonged absence of rain. The average price of common rice for the province has remained almost stationary as compared with that of the preceding week.

Bihar and Orissa.—There was no rain in the province except scanty showers in parts of Bhagalpur, Ranchi and Palamau. Threshing of paddy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Harvesting of oilseeds and pulses is going on. Standing spring crops are generally doing well but rain is wanted in parts of Bihar to improve prospects. The price of common rice has risen in three districts, fallen in three and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from eleven districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—Slight showers of rain were received in a few districts. Rain is generally needed. Standing crops are doing well. Agricultural stock is in good condition but slight cattle disease is reported. Irrigation of spring crops and poppy, harvesting of peas and preparation of land for sugarcane continue. Sowing of extra crops has commenced in places. Fodder is available in sufficient quantities though it is dear in parts. Prices are rising slightly.

Punjab.—Except for light rain in some submontane and western districts the weather remained practically dry. This rain though useful for standing crops was quite insufficient and more is badly wanted. Pressing of sugarcane continues in some districts. The yield is normal to good. Condition of standing irrigated wheat and other crops is average to good and that of unirrigated crops is below average to average, the latter are suffering in some districts from drought and rain is badly wanted for them. Stocks of food grains are sufficient. Cattle are generally healthy but fodder is getting scarce. Prices are stationary but have an upward tendency. They range generally between warning and scarcity rates except in some south-eastern districts where they range between normal and warning rates. Prices of wheat :—Rawalpindi 7, Lahore 8, Lyallpur $8\frac{1}{4}$, Ferozepore $8\frac{1}{2}$ and Ambala $8\frac{3}{4}$ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Slight rain fell in two districts. More rain is urgently needed throughout the province. Prospects of spring crops are generally average. Sugarcane is being pressed and gur made. The outturn is average. Wheat :—Peshawar $7\frac{12}{16}$ and Dera Ismail Khan $9\frac{6}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—The week was generally rainless. Prices are rising. Spring sowings are almost finished. The weather was cloudy.

Kashmir.—The week was generally wet, cloudy and cool. Spring crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are normal.

Rajputana.—The weather was cold. Spring crops are being irrigated. Prospects of the spring crop and agricultural stock are good. Prices are high, but are falling.

Central India.—The rainfall was practically nil. Winter rains are needed in Gwalior. Spring crops are being irrigated and harvested. Land is being prepared for autumn crops in southern states. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair to good. Agricultural stock is generally good. Prices are high.

Central Provinces.—The weather was clear but cloudy during the latter part of the week. Days are getting warm. Light showers were received in eleven districts ranging from 13 cents in Bilaspur to 52 cents in Chhindwara. Prospects of spring crops are generally fair to good. Reaping of pulses, wheat and linseed has begun in parts of several districts. Fluctuations in prices are irregular.

Feudatory States.—Harvesting of spring crops has begun.

Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in Satara and East Khandesh. Standing crops are good except in parts of Larkana and Hyderabad, Thar and Parker and parts of Karachi where they have been slightly damaged by frost, rats, blight and insects. Spring harvesting continues in Sind, Deccan and Carnatic. Cotton picking continues in Hyderabad, Thar and Parker, Panch Mahals, Broach, Surat, West Khandesh, Kathiawar, Baroda, Cutch and Rewa Kantha. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. Spring harvesting is in progress. Crop conditions as reported last week remain unchanged. Cattle are healthy. Prices in Districts are practically unchanged but juar sells at 5 seers only per rupee in Bhir Parbhani, Nander and Bidar.

Mysore.—The week was generally rainless. Standing crops are good. Harvesting of dry and wet crops is proceeding. Outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally stationary.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Picking of coffee is nearing completion. Threshing of rice continues. Cattle are generally healthy. Price of food grains is high.

Madras.—The week was generally rainy except in Deccan. Standing crops are fair to good generally. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. Condition of cattle is good generally. Prices are fairly steady.

A further small decrease in plague mortality in the United Provinces from 9,373 to 8,942, an increase in Rajputana from 5,500 to 7,397, and a decrease in the Bombay Presidency from 8,086 to 7,325 are the outstanding features of the accompanying statement of plague mortality. These three administrations were responsible for three-fourths of the total plague deaths of India in the week under report.

The rate of diffusion of infection in the Punjab is rather less rapid than experience leads one to expect at this season of the year.

A small but virulent outbreak of pneumonic plague, now happily subsiding, in the Bakergunj district of Bengal, has been responsible for 29 deaths. This district, in common with all others in the Dacca Division of Eastern Bengal, has hitherto been free from bubonic plague : it is therefore of interest to recall that a slight outbreak of pneumonic plague, similar in many respects to the present, occurred in Bakergunj district as far back as September 1898.

ECCLESIASTICAL.

Simla, the 4th March 1918.

No. 78.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that the following shall be added as Appendix C to the ecclesiastical rules published with the Department of Education Notification No. 212, dated the 10th May 1913 :—

RULES REGULATING THE PROVISION OF ELECTRIC INSTALLATIONS FOR THE LIGHTING AND VENTILATION OF CHURCHES.

I. Towards the initial outlay of electric lights and fan installations Government will pay not more than—

Rs. 300 per 100 sittings for lights,

,, 540 per 100 sittings for fans, subject to the following conditions :—

(a) for sittings not reserved by Government, the Government contribution will be limited to half the actual cost, subject to the maxima of—

Rs. 150 per 100 sittings for lights,

„ 270 per 100 sittings for fans,

(b) for sittings reserved by Government for military, railway, or other Government servants, the full proportionate cost will be paid by Government, subject to the maxima of Rs. 300 and Rs. 540 per 100 sittings for lights and fans respectively.

II. The cost of current will be paid by the Church authorities or congregations, except where sittings are reserved by Government for military, railway, or other Government servants, in which case Government will pay a proportionate share of the cost of current, subject to the following maxima :—

For lighting.—5 B. T. units per 100 reserved sittings per mensem.

For fans.—12 B T. units per 100 reserved sittings per mensem during the recognized punkah season.

III. The installations will be maintained by Government who will bear all expenses in connection with repairs, maintenance and renewals (except the renewals of bulbs), but for such sittings as are not reserved by Government the Church authorities or congregations will pay yearly to Government a sum equal to 4 per cent. of the initial cost of the installation for those sittings.

These charges will be payable in the first month of each year.

IV. These rules apply only to cases where current is available from a public supply and not to self-contained installations.

V. The prior sanction of the Government of India must be obtained for all electric installations.

VI. Where Government at present makes a recurring allowance towards the cost of lighting such allowance will be continued.

VII. These rules apply primarily to churches which are the property of Government. But the Government of India have power to make contributions at rates not exceeding those prescribed in the foregoing rules to churches which are not the property of Government but to which Government make grants under the ecclesiastical rules or towards the cost of construction of which Government have made contributions.

Delhi, the 7th March 1918.

No. 227-G.—In supersession of Notification No. 95-G., dated the 29th January 1918, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to proclaim the following order of His Majesty in Council, in pursuance of the direction contained in clause (2) thereof :—

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE,

The 2nd day of January 1918.

PRESENT,

THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

Lord Privy Seal. Lord Rothermere.
Lord Chamberlain. Sir Maurice de Bunsen.

Whereas by an Order of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria in Council, bearing date the 12th day of December, 1885, it was ordered that Part II of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, should apply to the group of British Possessions therein mentioned, that is to say, Her Majesty's East Indian Territories, Ceylon, and the Straits Settlements :—

And whereas by a further Order of Her said late Majesty Queen Victoria in Council, also bearing date the 12th day of December, 1885, it was ordered that Part II of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, should apply to the group of British Possessions therein mentioned, that is to say, the Straits Settlements, Hong Kong, and Labuan :

And whereas under and by virtue of Letters Patent dated the 30th day of October, 1906, the boundaries of the Colony of the Straits Settlements were extended so as to include the Colony of Labuan :

And whereas by the Straits Settlements and Protected States Fugitive Offenders Order in Council, 1916, as amended by the Straits Settlements and Protected States Fugitive Offenders Order in Council, 1917, it is ordered that the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, shall apply as if the Protected States named in the Schedule to the first mentioned Order were British Possessions :

And whereas by reason of their contiguity, or the frequent inter-communication between them, it seems expedient to His Majesty, and conducive to the better administration of justice therein, to apply Part II of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, to the above mentioned British Possessions and Protected States, and such application has been requested by the Rulers of the said States :

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue of the Powers in this behalf by the Fugitive Offenders Acts, 1881 and 1915, and otherwise, in His Majesty vested, is pleased by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows :—

(1) On and after the 1st day of February, 1918, the hereinbefore recited Orders in Council of the 12th day of December, 1885, shall be revoked, without prejudice to anything lawfully done thereunder, or to any proceedings commenced before the said date, and Part II of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, shall apply to the group of British Possessions and Protected States hereunder mentioned, that is to say :—

British India ;
Ceylon ;
Hong Kong ;
The Straits Settlements ;
The Federated Malay States ;
Johore ;
Kedah and Perlis ;
Kelantan ;
Trengganu ;
Brunei ;
North Borneo ;
Sarawak ;

(2) The Governor-General of India, and the Governors of Ceylon, Hong Kong, and the Straits Settlements shall cause this Order to be proclaimed in the Territories and Colonies under their respective Governments.

(3) The Governor, as defined in the Straits Settlements and Protected States Fugitive Offenders Orders in Council, 1916 and 1917, shall cause this Order to be proclaimed in the Protected State in which he exercises the functions of Governor for the purposes of the Fugitive Offenders Acts, 1881 and 1915.

And the Right Honourable Edwin Samuel Montagu and the Right Honourable Walter Hume Long, two of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, are to give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

Almeric FitzRoy.

A. H. GRANT,
Secretary to the Government of India.

War Office,
9th January, 1918.

With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette, dated 26th Sept., 1917, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred :—

* * * * *

Awarded the Military Cross.

* * * * *

Capt. Horace Anthony Garstin, Ind. Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When our progress in pursuit of the enemy was temporarily checked by a party of the enemy with two machine guns he extended his squadron, charged and captured the machine guns and detachments, and thus opened the way for the brigade to complete the rounding up of the enemy's infantry before dark. He displayed great courage and coolness throughout.

* * * * *

Capt. William Draper Hall, Ind. Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in action against superior enemy forces at close range his commanding officer became a casualty and he took over command. He led frequent bayonet charges with great gallantry under very heavy rifle and machine-gun fire, and eventually succeeded in extricating the remnant of his force from an exceedingly difficult situation. His courage and resource under extremely trying circumstances were worthy of the highest praise.

PART IV.

Acts of the Indian Legislative Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 6th March, 1918, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. II OF 1918.

An Act to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of Cinematographs.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of cinematographs; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Cinematograph Act, 1918.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan.

(3) It shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context—

"Cinematograph" includes any apparatus for the representation of moving pictures or series of pictures;

"Place" includes also a house, building, tent or vessel; and

"Prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act.

Cinematograph exhibitions to be licensed.

3. Save as otherwise provided in this Act, no person shall give an exhibition by means of a cinematograph elsewhere than in a place licensed under this Act, or otherwise than in compliance with any conditions and restrictions imposed by such license.

Licensing authority.

4. The authority having power to grant licenses under this Act (hereinafter referred to as the "licensing authority") shall be the District Magistrate, or, in a Presidency-town or in the town of Rangoon, the Commissioner of Police :

Provided that the Local Government may, by notification in the local official gazette, constitute for the whole or any part of a Province such other authority as it may specify in the notification to be the licensing authority for the purposes of this Act.

Restrictions on powers of licensing authority.

5. (1) The licensing authority shall not grant a license under this Act unless it is satisfied that—

(a) the rules made under the Act have been substantially complied with; and

(b) adequate precautions have been taken in the place in respect of which the license is to be given to provide for the safety of persons attending exhibitions therein.

(2) A condition shall be inserted in every license that the licensee will not exhibit, or permit to be exhibited, in such place any film other than a film which has been certified as suitable for public exhibition by the prescribed authority, and which, when exhibited, displays the prescribed mark of that authority, and has not been altered or tampered with in any way since such mark was affixed thereto.

(3) Subject to the foregoing provisions of this section, and to the control of the Local Government, the licensing authority may grant licenses under this Act to such persons as it thinks fit, and on such terms and conditions and subject to such restrictions as it may determine.

Punishment for contravention of this Act and rules made thereunder.

6. (1) If the owner or person in charge of a cinematograph uses the same or allows it to be used, or if the owner or occupier of any place permits that place to be used, in contravention of the provisions of this Act or the rules made thereunder, or of the conditions and restrictions upon or subject to which any license has been granted under this Act, he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees and, in the case of a continuing offence, with a further fine which may extend to one hundred rupees for each day during which the offence continues, and his license (if any) shall be liable to be revoked by the licensing authority.

(2) If any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Act committed by him in respect of any film, the convicting Court may further direct that the film shall be forfeited to His Majesty.

Certification of films

7. (1) The Governor General in Council shall, by notification in the Gazette of India, constitute as many authorities as he may think fit for the purposes of examining and certifying films as suitable for public exhibition. The certificate of any such authority shall be valid in such area as may be specified in the notification.

(2) If any such authority after examination considers that a film is suitable for public exhibition, it shall cause the film to be marked in the prescribed manner.

(3) If the authority is of opinion that a film is not suitable for public exhibition, it shall inform the person applying for the certificate of its decision, and such person may, within thirty days from the date of such decision, appeal for a reconsideration of the matter by the Local Government, whose decision shall be final.

(4) Where the area for which a certificate has been granted includes territory in more than one Province, the appeal shall lie to such Local Government as may be specified in that behalf in the notification under which the certifying authority is constituted

(5) The District Magistrate, or, in a Presidency-town or in the town of Rangoon, the Commissioner of Police, may, after recording his reasons in writing by order suspend the certificate of any film pending the orders of the Local Government, and duri g such suspension the film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in that district or town He shall forthwith forward a copy of his order to the Local Government to which he is subordinate, and such Local Government may, in its discretion, either discharge his order or, by notification in the local official gazette, direct that the film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole or any part of the Province.

(6) The Local Government may, of its own motion, by notification in the local official gazette, direct that a film covered by a certificate valid in the Province shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole or any part of the Province.

(7) The exhibition of a film to which any order or direction under sub-section (5) or (6) is for the time being applicable shall, in the area to which such order or direction relates, be deemed to be a contravention of the condition mentioned in section 5 (2).

Power to make rules.

8. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, rules under this section may provide for—

(a) the regulation of cinematograph exhibitions for securing the public safety;

(b) the procedure of the authorities constituted for examining and certifying films as suitable for public exhibition, and all matters ancillary thereto, and the fees to be levied by those authorities; and

(c) any other matter which by this Act is to be prescribed.

(3) The Governor General in Council may delegate to a Local Government the power to make rules regarding the matters mentioned in sub-section (2) (a) so far as regards the territories subject to that Government.

(4) All rules made under this Act shall be published in the Gazette of India, or the local official Gazette, as the case may be and, on such publication, shall have effect as if enacted in this Act.

Power to exempt.

9. The Local Government may by order in writing exempt, subject to such conditions and restrictions as it may impose, any cinematograph exhibition or class of cinematograph exhibitions from any of the provisions of this Act or of any rule made thereunder.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 6th March 1918, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. III OF 1918.

An Act to provide for the levy of a cess on indigo exported from British India.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide funds for the promotion of research in the interests of the indigo industry in India;

And whereas for this purpose it is expedient to levy a cess on indigo produced in India and exported from British India; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indigo Cess Act, 1918; and

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of April, 1918.

Imposition of duty on exports of indigo and preparations thereof.

2. (1) There shall be levied and collected on all indigo produced in India and exported from any customs-port to any port beyond the limits of British India or to Aden a cess at the rate of one rupee per maund of 82⅞ pounds avoirdupois :

Provided that, where any preparation of indigo mixed with any other substance for use as a dye is so exported, the cess shall be levied on such proportion of the total weight of such preparation as the Governor General in Council may determine by rule under this Act.

(2) In this section the expression "customs-port" has the same meaning as in the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and the cess levied shall be deemed to be a customs-duty for the purposes of section 5 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1894.

VIII of 1878.

VIII of 1894.

Application of proceeds of cess.

3. The proceeds of the cess collected under this Act shall be applied to meet the cost of such measures as the Governor General in Council may consider it advisable to take for promoting research in the interests of the indigo industry in India.

Power to make rules.

4. The Governor General in Council may make rules consistent with this Act,

(a) for regulating the method of assessing, levying and collecting the cess;

(b) for prescribing the particular purposes to which the cess may be applied; and (c) generally for carrying out the purposes of this Act.

(4) in clause (h) after sub-clause (iv), the following sub-clause shall be added, namely:—

"(v) on active service forfeiture of pay and allowances for a period not exceeding three months."

12. In section 47 of the said Act, after the brackets and letter "(f)," the brackets and letters "(gg)" shall be inserted

Amendment of section 47 of Act VIII of 1911.

13. In Chapter VI after section 49 of the said Act, the following section shall be added, namely:—

Insertion of new section 49 A in Act VIII of 1911.

"49A. When any person on active service has been sentenced by court-martial to dismissal or to transportation or imprisonment whether combined with dismissal or not, the prescribed officer may direct that such person may be retained to serve in the ranks, and where such person has been sentenced to transportation or imprisonment such service shall be reckoned as part of his term of transportation or imprisonment."

Retention in the ranks of a person convicted on active service.

Amendment of section 50 of Act VIII of 1911.

14. In section 50 of the said Act, after clause (c) the following clause shall be inserted namely:—

"(cc) for every day on which he is in hospital on account of sickness certified by the medical officer attending on him to have been caused by his own misconduct or imprudence, such sum as may be specified by order of the Commander-in-Chief in India;"

15. In the proviso to section 74 of the said Act, after the words "district court-martial," the words "or on active service a summary general court-martial" shall be inserted.

Amendment of section 74 of Act VIII of 1911.

16. After sub-section (5) of section 86 of the said Act, the following sub-section shall be added, namely:—

Amendment of section 86 of Act VIII of 1911.

"(6) A person charged before a court-martial with any offence under this Act may be found guilty of having attempted to commit that offence although the attempt is not separately charged."

17. In section 91 of the said Act, for the words "and of the enrolment of such person" the following words shall be substituted, namely:—

Amendment of section 91 of Act VIII of 1911.

"The enrolment of such person may be proved by the production of a copy of his enrolment paper purporting to be certified to be a true copy by the officer having the custody of the enrolment paper."

18. After section 91 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

Insertion of new section 91A in Act VIII of 1911.

"91A (1) A letter, return or other document respecting the service of any person in, or the dismissal or discharge of any person from, any portion of His Majesty's Forces, or respecting the circumstance of any person not having served in or belonged to any portion of His Majesty's Forces, if purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the Governor General in Council or the Commander-in-Chief in India or by any prescribed officer, shall be evidence of the facts stated in such letter, return or other document.

Presumption as to certain documents

(2) An army list or gazette purporting to be published by authority shall be evidence of the status and rank of the officers or warrant officers therein mentioned and of any appointment held by such officers or warrant officers and of the corps, battalion or arm or branch of the service to which such officers or warrant officers belong.

(3) Where a record is made in any regimental book in pursuance of this Act or of any rules made thereunder or otherwise in pursuance of military duty and purports to be signed by the commanding officer or by the officer whose duty it is to make such record, such record shall be evidence of the facts thereby stated.

(4) A copy of any record in any regimental book purporting to be certified to be a true copy by the officer having the custody of such book shall be evidence of such record.

(5) Where any person subject to this Act is being tried on a charge of desertion or of absence without leave and such person has surrendered himself into the custody of, or has been apprehended by a provost-marshal, assistant provost-marshal or other officer, of any portion of His Majesty's Forces, a certificate purporting to be signed by such provost-marshal, assistant provost-marshal or other officer, or by the commanding officer of that portion of His Majesty's Forces and stating the fact, date and place of such surrender or apprehension shall be evidence of the matters so stated.

(6) When any person subject to this Act is being tried on a charge of desertion or of absence without leave and such person has surrendered himself to, or been apprehended by, a police-officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a police-station, a certificate purporting to be signed by such police-officer and stating the fact, date and place of such surrender or apprehension, shall be evidence of the matters so stated."

Amendment of section 98 of Act VIII of 1911.

19. In sub-section (1) of section 98 of the said Act,

(1) after the words "convening officer", the words "or if the convening officer so directs, by an authority superior to the convening officer" shall be inserted;

(2) in clause (c) for the word "said", the word "convening" shall be substituted.

Insertion of new section 99A in Act VIII of 1911.

20. After section 99 of the said Act the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

Confirmation of finding and sentence on board ship.

"99A. When any person subject to this Act is tried and sentenced by court-martial while on board ship the finding and sentence so far as not confirmed and executed on board ship may be confirmed and executed in like manner as if such person had been tried at the port of disembarkation."

Amendment of section 107 of Act VIII of 1911.

21. After the proviso to section 107 of the said Act, the following proviso shall be added, namely:—

"Provided further that on active service a sentence of rigorous imprisonment may be carried out by confinement in such place as the officer commanding the forces in the field may from time to time appoint."

Insertion of new section 108A in Act VIII of 1911.

22. After section 108 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

Offenders sentenced to transportation how dealt with until transported.

"108A. In every case in which a sentence of transportation is passed under this Act, the offender, until he is transported, shall be dealt with in the same manner as if sentenced to rigorous imprisonment, and shall be deemed to have been undergoing his sentence of transportation during the term of his imprisonment."

Insertion of new section 111A in Act VIII of 1911.

23. In Chapter IX of the said Act after section 111, the following section shall be added, namely:—

Execution of sentence of fine.

"111A. When a sentence of fine is imposed by a court-martial under section 41 or section 42, whether the trial was held within British India or not, a copy of such sentence signed and certified by the president of the Court or the officer holding the trial, as the case may be, may be sent to any Magistrate in British India, and such Magistrate shall thereupon cause the fine to be recovered in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the levy of fines as if it was a sentence of fine imposed by such Magistrate."

V of 1898.

Substitution of new section for section 112 of Act VIII of 1911.

24. For section 112 of the said Act, the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

Pardons and remissions.

"112 (1). When any person subject to this Act has been convicted by a court-martial of any offence, the Governor General in Council or the Commander-in-Chief in India or, in the case of a sentence which he could have confirmed or which did not require confirmation, the officer commanding the army, army corps, division or independent brigade in which such person at the time of his conviction was serving, or the prescribed officer may,

(a) either without conditions or upon any conditions which the person sentenced accepts, pardon the person or remit the whole or any part of the punishment awarded;

(b) mitigate the punishment awarded, or commute such punishment for any less punishment or punishments mentioned in this Act:

Provided that a sentence of transportation shall not be commuted for a sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding the term of transportation awarded by the Court.

(2) If any condition on which a person has been pardoned or a punishment has been remitted is, in the opinion of the authority which granted the pardon or remitted the punishment, not fulfilled, such authority may cancel the pardon or remission, and thereupon the sentence of the Court shall be carried into effect as if such pardon had not been granted or such punishment had not been remitted:

Provided that in the case of a person sentenced to transportation or imprisonment, such person shall undergo only the unexpired portion of his sentence.

(3) When under the provisions of section 49 a non-commissioned officer is deemed to be reduced to the ranks such reduction shall, for the purposes of this section, be treated as a punishment awarded by sentence of a court-martial."

Insertion of new sections 126-A and 126-B in Act VIII of 1911.

25. After section 126 of the said Act, the following sections shall be inserted, namely:—

"Disposal of Property.

Order for custody and disposal of property pending trial in certain cases.

126A. When any property regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which appears to have been used for the commission of any offence, is produced before a court-martial during a trial, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the proper custody of such property pending the conclusion of the trial, and if the property is subject to speedy or natural decay may, after recording such evidence as it thinks necessary, order it to be sold or otherwise disposed of.

Order for disposal of property regarding which offence committed.

126B. (1) After the conclusion of a trial before any court-martial, the Court or the officer confirming the finding or sentence of such court-martial or any authority superior to such officer, or in the case of a court-martial whose finding or sentence does not require confirmation, the officer commanding the army, army corps, division or brigade within which the trial was held, may make such order as it or he thinks fit for the disposal by destruction, confiscation, delivery to any person claiming to be entitled to possession thereof, or otherwise, of any property or document produced before the Court or in its custody, or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of any offence.

(2) Where any order has been made under sub-section (1) in respect of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, a copy of such order signed and certified by the authority making the same may, whether the trial was held within British India or not, be sent to a Magistrate in any presidency-town or district in which such property for the time being is, and such Magistrate shall thereupon cause the order to be carried into effect as if it was an order passed by such Magistrate under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. [of 1898.]

Explanation.—In this section the term "property" includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange whether immediately or otherwise."

Repeals.

26. The title and the sections of the said Act mentioned in the Schedule are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the second column thereof.

THE SCHEDULE.

SECTIONS OF THE INDIAN ARMY ACT, 1911, TO BE REPEALED.

(See Section 26.)

	Extent of repeal.
The title	The word "Native."
Sec. 2	The proviso to sub-section (1).
" 10	The words "of which the last pay statement, if produced, shall be evidence."
" 15	The whole.
" 18	Sub-section (3).
" 43	In sub-clause (iii) of clause (h) the words "or whose sentence involves such dismissal."
" 50	In clause (c) the word "proper" and the words "at the hospital", and in the proviso the words "or whose sentence involves dismissal."
" 93	In sub-section (2) the words "to prove the signature to such certified extracts, nor shall it be necessary."
" 126	Sub-section (3).

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE principal object of this Bill is to supply certain deficiencies, and to remedy certain defects, disclosed in the Indian Army Act by the test of over three years of war. Nearly three years of experience in peace have also shown that, though the Act was a very great advance on the Indian Articles of War, there are certain points on which it is open to improvement, and the opportunity is taken to effect such improvements as the experience gained has shown to be desirable. Opportunity is also taken to substitute the word " Indian " for the word " Native " wherever it occurs in the Act. This has been rendered legally possible by the passing of the Government of India Act, 1915.

Some of the amendments proposed in this Bill are purely formal. The more important ones assimilate, or at least find close parallels in certain provisions either of the Army Act or of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Notes on clauses.

Clauses 3 and 5.—The " Army Corps " was not known to Indian military organization when the Act was passed.

Clause 4.—The limited scope of the definition in section 7(8) of the Act has proved very inconvenient owing to units of the Indian Army serving in so many different theatres of war and the necessity for keeping as secret as possible the organization of the various forces. The addition to the definition as regards active service removes this inconvenience.

Clause 6.—This amendment requires that the signature of the party principally affected by the transaction shall be necessary on the enrolment paper, as is the case under the Army Act [cf. section 80 (4) (a), Army Act].

Clause 7.—The amendment is substantially one of drafting. The proposed proviso takes the place of sub-section (5) of section 18, which is repealed by clause 26.

Clauses 8 and 9.—These amendments bring the law into line with the Army Act [cf. sections 6 (1) (f) and 7 (1), Army Act].

Clauses 10 and 16.—Miscarriages of justice sometimes occur for want of these provisions, which find a place in the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure : [cf. sections 511, Indian Penal Code, and 237 (2), Code of Criminal Procedure].

Clause 11 (1)—The Act has to be administered by military officers who are not conversant with the provisions of the General Clauses Act, and long terms of " imprisonment " are sometimes awarded : such sentences have to be treated as sentences of simple imprisonment, which, by reason of section 105, have to be undergone in military custody. The amendment will prevent courts-martial awarding sentences of simple imprisonment inadvertently. Reference to solitary confinement is not necessary here, for that punishment is provided for in section 48 of the Act.

(2) Suspension from rank, pay and allowances for more than a short period is a very undesirable punishment, yet it is sometimes imposed for long periods. The amendment will remedy this.

(3) Reprimand or severe reprimand is a punishment for officers under the Army Act. It is a suitable punishment in the case of an offence which is not of a serious nature committed by an officer, and the want of it as a punishment for Indian officers has been felt. It is a less severe, and may be in some cases a more suitable, punishment than any that can at present be inflicted.

(4) Forfeiture of pay and allowances on active service will, in a large number of cases, take the place of corporal punishment. The need of some such punishment has been greatly felt. Forfeiture of ordinary pay is a punishment on active service under the Army Act : [cf. section 44 (6) of that Act]. Sentences of corporal punishment have been passed on active service during the war for the want of some other form of punishment which would not necessitate the withdrawal from duty of the offender.

Clause 12.—The amendment is consequential on the addition effected by clause 11 (3).

Clause 13.—This retains the power conferred by the proviso to section 15 which section it is proposed to repeal.

Clause 14.—This is a new provision the object of which is obvious.

Clause 15.—On active service the officer empowered to convene a district court-martial for the trial of an alleged offender is, as a rule, not readily accessible. This amendment will permit of the reference being made to an officer empowered to convene a summary general court-martial.

Clause 16.—See note to clause 10.

Clauses 17 and 18.—These contain special provisions relating to evidence. They have their parallels in section 163 of the Army Act and their want is frequently felt.

Clause 19.—This amendment will admit of confirmation of the finding or sentence or of both being reserved for superior authority, a procedure which is frequently desirable.

Clause 20.—Provides for the confirmation of the findings and sentences of courts-martial held on boardship. Warrants for convening general courts-martial or district courts-martial on boardship can be granted under sections 54 and 55 of the Act. A summary general court-martial might be convened, and often is convened, on boardship on active service. A similar provision exists in section 188 of the Army Act.

Clause 21.—This will enable the officer commanding the forces on active service to establish military prisons in the field in which the shorter sentences exceeding three months can be carried out. It is proposed to abolish consequental dismissal in such cases by the repeal of section 15 of the Act (see clause 26), and this provision will facilitate the return of a man to duty after the expiry of his sentence.

Clause 22—This corresponds to section 58 of the Indian Penal Code. It will enable persons sentenced to transportation while serving out of India to be kept in local civil custody until they can be sent to India.

Clause 23.—The want of power to recover a fine awarded by sentence of a court-martial exercising jurisdiction under sections 41 and 42 of the Act when such fine is not recoverable under section 50 of the Act is an obvious defect which it is proposed to remedy by this clause.

Clause 24.—The object of this clause is to enable pardons and remissions to be granted conditionally, thus bringing section 112 of the Act into line with the provisions of section 401 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The opportunity has been taken to recast the form of the section.

Clause 25.—Cases that have occurred during the war have accentuated the want previously felt of a provision enabling courts-martial and confirming authorities to make orders regarding the disposal, pending the conclusion of a trial, and the restitution, etc., after trial, of property in respect of which an offence has been committed. The proposed addition, which is based on section 517 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, will remedy this defect. The provision has its counterpart, as regards restitution, in section 75 of the Army Act.

Clause 26 and the Schedule :—

Repeal of proviso to sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Act.—This proviso is considered to be no longer necessary. The persons mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the sub-section are subject to the Act; and the proviso does not really render it easier to decide whether persons subject to military law otherwise than by reason of those clauses are subject to the Army Act or to the Indian Army Act: it merely invites claims which are of no substance.

Repeal of section 15 of the Act.—The compulsory dismissal of soldiers sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for any term exceeding three months means that the services of many useful men whose services might otherwise be retained are lost. The dismissal of convicts or prisoners whose services are not further required can be effected under either section 13 or section 14 of the Act and will be provided for by an addition to Army Regulations, India. The law is brought into line with the Army Act, and many men instead of leaving the service under a cloud will obtain the chance of rehabilitating themselves. The proviso to the section is a useful provision and has been retained as a separate section; vide clause 13.

The repeal of words in clause (c) of section 50 of the Act is a drafting amendment and the repeal of the other matters mentioned in the Schedule is consequential on amendments proposed.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Income-tax was presented to the Indian Legislative Council on the 5th March 1918:

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Income-tax was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us, annexed thereto.

Paper No. 1.—From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 4072, dated 24th December, 1917, and enclosures; from Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 206-A.-XV., dated 27th December, 1917, and enclosure; and from Agent to Governor General and Chief Commissioner, Baluchistan, No. 58-C., dated 31st December, 1917.

Paper No. 2.—From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 6-F., dated 2nd January, 1918, and enclosures; from Government of Punjab, No. 493, dated 8th January, 1918, and enclosures; No. 1556-Finl., dated 19th January, 1918; from Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara, No. 6-C., dated 3rd January, 1918; from Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor General, North-West Frontier Province, No. 39-F. (Rev.), dated 11th January, 1918, and enclosures; and from Government, Bihar and Orissa, No. 174-F. T., dated 13th January, 1918, and enclosures.

Paper No. 3.—From Chief Commissioner, Delhi, No. 806-Financial, dated 29th January, 1918, and enclosures; and from Government, Burma, No 708-4-I.—2, dated 19th January, 1918, and enclosures.

Paper No. 4.—Memorial from Nattukottai Chetty Community, Madras, dated 15th January, 1918, and enclosures; from President, Sind Zamindars' Association, dated 29th January, 1918; and from the Calcutta High Court, No. 524, dated 1st February, 1918.

Paper No. 5.—From Government of the United Provinces, No. 120, dated 4th February, 1918, and enclosures; and from Government, Bombay, No. 1241, dated 6th February, 1918, and enclosures.

Paper No. 6.—From Government of Bengal, No. 374-S. R., dated 4th February, 1918, and enclosures.

Paper No. 7.—From Government of Madras, No. 66, dated the 12th February, 1918, and enclosures.

2. We have amended the extent clause of the Bill by the addition of the words "including the Santhal Parganas" as the Government of Bihar and Orissa desire that the Act should apply in that district proprio vigore. We consider that, if necessary, the case of British Baluchistan can be dealt with most suitably by a notification under the Scheduled Districts Act.

3. The definition of "company" in clause 2 of the Bill has been criticized on the ground that as drawn it includes firms, which is not the intention of the Bill. We have expanded the definition to include all companies constituted in the dominions of the Crown, and have confined the latter part of the definition to such foreign associations as the Governor General in Council may desire to treat as companies for the purposes of this Bill. Our object is to enable associations such as the French Sociétés Anonymes which, though not corporate bodies, have many characteristics in common with the companies recognized by our law, to be treated, if the Governor General in Council thinks fit, as companies for the purposes of this Bill. On the other hand, the definition as altered now excludes an ordinary firm.

4. We have been urged by our colleague Mr. Sarma to restrict the definition of "Magistrate," and, in deference to his wishes, have confined the exercise of jurisdiction by second class Magistrates under the Bill to those Magistrates of that class who may be specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government.

5. In order to dissipate misapprehensions which have been felt in certain quarters, we have changed the title of the definition which appears in the Bill referred to us as "year of assessment" to "previous year." But the definition with the exception of one slight verbal amendment is the same as before. In order to shorten the wording of the Bill, we have amplified the definition of "Collector", and we have added to this clause a definition of "total income" which will obviate the necessity of a certain amount of repetition.

6. We have made several amendments in sub-clause (2) of clause 3. In the first place, we think that income derived from property which is held on a purely religious or charitable trust should be entirely exempt from taxation under the Act, and that the Collector in such a case should not be bound to satisfy himself that it is so applied. In the case of mixed trusts, we think that he may properly be required to inquire as to the application of the income and make his assessment accordingly. Secondly, we think that voluntary contributions to religious or charitable institutions for religious or charitable purposes should be exempt. We have amended sub-clause (2) (i) accordingly. We have added to the exemptions mentioned in sub-clause (2) (iii) of the Bill referred to us any capital sums received as the accumulated balance at the credit of a subscriber to a Provident Fund to which the Provident Funds Act, 1897, applies. We think such a payment is much on the same footing as the payment of an insurance policy. For drafting purposes, we have transposed (iii) and (iv) of this sub-clause. Finally, we have confined the exemption of casual gains to those which do not arise from business or from the exercise of a profession, occupation or vocation or as a gratuity to an employé for services rendered. This will avoid the possibility of ambiguity in connection with the use of the word gratuity in clause 6 (1).

7. Our colleagues Mr. Sita Nath Roy, Sir G. M. Chitnavis and Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia object to the principle of clause 4 by which agricultural income is taken into consideration for the purpose of determining rate on other chargeable income. They have recorded their views in a separate minute, but as far as the rest of the Committee are concerned, we are clearly of opinion that such an arrangement is a necessity if graduated income-tax is to be collected on an equitable basis. It seems to us quite unjustifiable that a person whose net agricultural income is 10 lakhs, and whose income from business is Rs. 1,000 should pay on the Rs. 1,000 at the rate of 4 pies, while a trader whose sole income is Rs. 25,000 from trade will pay on that income at the one anna rate. We have, however, decided to recommend that income-tax should not be levied unless the taxable income of an assessee by itself amounts to Rs.1,000 or over, and have provided for this by a small amendment in clause 4 (1) and by an alteration in Schedule I to the Bill. We have also provided that, in determining the basis on which net agricultural income shall be arrived at, the basis provided by the law of the province for the purposes of a cess on land shall, where such a provision exists, be followed, the matter in cases where no such provision exists being left to be dealt with by rules.

8. It has been urged that income-tax should not be levied on subscriptions by employés to Provident Funds, and that a fresh clause dealing with this matter should be added to the provisions of clause 6 (1) of the Bill, but we consider that this is a matter that should be dealt with under clause 12 (2) where we have made an amendment covering the case of such Provident Funds as are duly constituted under or recognized by the law. We have amended the provisions of clause 6 (2) so as to bring all servants of the Crown, whether British subjects or not, within the purview of this clause, as it seems to us unnecessary to give to persons who are not British subjects specially favourable treatment which is not accorded to British subjects.

9. We have accepted the view that the allowance for vacant house-property should be left to the unfettered discretion of the Collector, and have amended clause 8 accordingly. The inclusion of local rates and municipal taxes among the permissible allowances has also been much pressed upon us, and, recognising that they form a legitimate business expense, we have permitted an allowance for them in clause 9 (2) (viii). We are unable, however, to agree that these rates and taxes should be deducted from the income from house-property, since in that case they partake of the nature of personal expenses of the owner.

10. We have considered at great length the provisions of clause 9 which is a very important clause. We have accepted the view that provision should be made for depreciation of the furniture, etc., in the case of hotels and similar property, and this we have effected by separating in the Bill plant from machinery. The word "plant" has a wide meaning and if so separated will cover all reasonable cases of this kind.

It has been suggested that, in the interests of uniformity, the percentage for depreciation under clause 9 (2) (vi) should be fixed by the Governor General in Council. We do not think that this is feasible for practical reasons but, in order to ensure uniformity where uniformity is either possible or desirable, we have required such percentages to be fixed "subject to the approval of the Governor General in Council."

The Bill referred to us limited the depreciation allowance claimable in a subsequent year where in a previous year the full allowance had not been claimed to twice the maximum annual allowance. We have omitted this limitation and amended clause 9 (2) (vi) proviso (b) accordingly.

We have inserted a new provision to meet the question of obsolescence. This will be found in clause 9 (2) (vii), and will enable an allowance to be claimed in the circumstances stated therein in respect of machinery or plant sold or discarded as obsolete.

11. In clause 10 of the Bill we have added the word "vocation" after the word "profession" where it occurs in this section in order to make the class of income covered by this clause more extensive.

12. To meet representations made on behalf of the commercial community, we have abandoned the system previously embodied in the Bill, and have provided that the tax shall be levied in each year in respect of the taxable income of that year, the assessment being made in the first place on the basis of the previous year's income, while there will be a subsequent adjustment under the new clause 19 of the Bill, when the actual income of the year becomes known. At this subsequent adjustment all questions of over or under payment on account of income under the heads "salaries" and "interest on securities," due to the deduction of income-tax from these sources of income at the time of payment when the rate of the tax applicable cannot be known, will be settled if they have not been settled previously. We have re-cast clause 14 accordingly and inserted a new clause 19 to provide for the system we propose should be adopted.

In view of the representations which have been placed before us, we have come to the conclusion that partners in a firm where there is a definite partnership deed specifying the shares of the partners should be placed in the same position in regard to refunds as shareholders in a company, consequently the income-tax on such firms must be levied in the first instance at the maximum rate. We have amended the proviso to clause 14 with this object.

13. We have amended clause 16 so as to require the annual return referred to in that clause to be made within 15 days from the 31st March in each year, and to require the information to be brought up to the 31st of March.

14. We have extended the date prescribed by clause 17 (1) by which companies must submit returns from the 15th of May to the 15th of June. We have added a proviso giving the Collector power to extend this date for special cause in order to meet the case of companies which have to transmit their accounts to England, as we are informed that it is difficult, if not impossible, for these companies to make their returns by a date which is suitable in the case of companies which have not to go through this process.

15. We find that two grounds of objection have been taken to the provisions of clause 17 which makes a return by the assessee compulsory in all cases. On the one hand, it is urged that on administrative grounds the service of the notice which this procedure necessitates will involve a great burden in the case of small incomes which will not be compensated for by any additional advantage to the revenue. Sir John Campbell in this connection drew our attention to the fact that in the United Provinces there are 42,000 assessees to income-tax, of whom 26,000 are persons with incomes below Rs. 2,000. On the other hand, it is argued that the preparation of a return by the poorer assessees who are often illiterate will be a serious harassment which they would gladly avoid. We have devised a summary procedure in their case which can be resorted to as an optional procedure which, we hope, will meet both of these objections. The provisions we suggest in this connection appear as Chapter III of the Bill annexed to the Report.

16. In order to avoid breaking into the continuity of the ordinary assessment procedure, we have incorporated clause 19 of the Bill referred to us in clause 18 where it fits in very suitably, and have amplified that clause by a further new sub-clause necessitated by the principle of re-adjustment.

17. As we have previously explained new clause 19 provides for the adjustment procedure on the actual income received. We have added two provisos to this clause, the first of which makes it clear that the adjustment procedure provided by the clause does not relate back to transactions prior to the commencement of the Act, while the second provides a procedure for the immediate adjustment of income-tax in any year in the circumstances mentioned in that proviso.

18. We have slightly amended clause 20 of the Bill referred to us, which now appears as clause 25, and we have added a new clause 26 providing for a refund by the Collector when a mistake has been made in the demand.

19. We have substituted the "Chief Revenue-authority" for the "Commissioner" as the authority to exercise the power of revision conferred by clause 23 as we think it only reasonable that this power should be exercised by the highest Revenue-authority who is under clause 51 the authority empowered to state a case to the High Court.

20. We have provided that when a penal assessment is imposed under clause 24 no prosecution shall be instituted on the same facts, as it is not desirable that there should be room for a possible conflict between the revenue and judicial authorities for which this provision as it stands gives opportunity, and moreover it is not unreasonable that a double punishment should be provided against. No doubt in more serious cases a prosecution would be launched, but the Revenue-authorities should in our opinion be put to their election.

21. Objection has been taken to the power given by clause 27 (2) of the Bill referred to us on the ground that the duty which might be imposed thereunder would be burdensome to the company with no corresponding advantage to the administration. We think that there is undoubted force in this contention, and that all reasonable requirements will be met by providing that the share register of the company shall be open to the inspection of the Income tax authorities, and we have provided this power in the new clause 29.

22. We have re-drawn existing clause 26 so as to provide definite power for the issue of commissions, and have taken the opportunity of incorporating in our new clause (see clause 27 of the Bill annexed to this Report) the provisions of clause 42 of the Bill referred to us, as we think that they find a very suitable place in this clause.

23. The application of the English rule embodied in clause 29 of the Bill referred to us regarding married women has excited the opposition of our Indian colleagues, and Colonel Aplin has pointed out to us that it is not suitable to Burmese conditions. We do not think that there is any justification in maintaining it as a special rule in the case of married women subject to English law, and we have, in these circumstances, deleted the clause. The result will be that married women will be separately assessable in respect of their own incomes.

24. We have added a proviso to clause 33 (now clause 34) requiring the Collector to give an opportunity to any person to be heard before such person can be treated as an agent under the provisions of that clause.

25. We have altered the proviso to clause 34 (now clause 35) to allow the question whether an appellant is to be treated as in default or not to be determined by the discretion of the Collector.

26. We have added a saving to clause 35 (5) [now clause 36 (5)] of the Bill which is necessitated by the terms of clause 32 (1) (now clause 33), and we have amended the wording of the latter part of this clause.

27. We have amended clause 36 (now clause 37) to give effect to the decision that partners in firms constituted under registered deeds of partnership specifying the individual shares of the partners should be entitled to the same refunds as are admissible to shareholders in companies.

28. We think it will be convenient if all the penalty sections of the Bill are brought into Chapter VII, and we have accordingly deleted clause 28 of the Bill and incorporated the necessary penalties for offences under clauses 29 and 30 of our amended Bill in clause 39. We have omitted the second sub-section of this clause, as we do not think a Revenue-authority should have the power to remit a fine imposed by a criminal Court.

29. In the rule-making power, clause 43, we have inserted a definite power to make rules as to composition of assessment, and to meet the views of some of our body, we have required rules for the determination of net agricultural income to be made after previous publication.

30. We have amplified the language of the power of exemption conferred on the Governor General in Council by clause 44.

31. The Local Government inform us that clause 48 of the Bill is no longer necessary as other powers exist under the local revenue law of providing for the matter. In these circumstances, it is clearly out of place in an Imperial Act, and we have deleted it accordingly.

32. We have discussed at considerable length the provisions of clause 52 now clause 51. There is a considerable body of feeling that an assessee should have a right to have a reference made to a High Court on a point of law as long as it is left to the Chief Revenue-authority to prevent unnecessary or frivolous points being taken, and we have amended the clause to provide for this.

On the other hand, we can see no reason why such references should not be disposed of by the highest civil Court of appeal of the province, and we have accordingly amended sub-clause (1) and allowed the definition of "High Court" provided by the General Clauses Act, X of 1897, to operate. Again, we think it unnecessary to make it a statutory requirement that such references should be heard in all cases by a bench of three Judges as we think that this is a matter pre-eminently to be left to the discretion of the eminent judicial authority concerned, especially in view of the dislocation of ordinary business which such a provision must often cause. We have, therefore, omitted sub-clause (2) of this clause. We think that in a case when an assessee insists on a reference under this clause the Court should have power to order costs in its discretion, and we have so provided accordingly.

33. We considered it outside the scope of our functions to examine suggestions as to the amendment of the graduated rates imposed by Schedule I, such as were submitted, for example, by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. We hold that, if it should hereafter be considered desirable to amend the existing rates, this should be a matter to be taken up on a budgetary programme, and that such amendment would be out of place in connection with the present Bill which is primarily one for the improvement of the methods and machinery of collection and not for increase or decrease of taxation.

34. We have made certain other drafting amendments in the Bill which do not call for detailed notice.

35. In conclusion, we desire to express our obligation to Mr. Gatherall of Calcutta who gave evidence on several occasions before our Committee which was particularly valuable as our colleague the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray was unable to attend our meetings.

†Note of dissent.

Clauses 2 to 14.—The provisions of the Act in assessing a Hindu undivided family will tend to a disruption of the joint family system and are unfair to the members of such families. The graduated system which has become a normal feature of income-tax administration in India makes a great difference. To take an illustration: A Hindu undivided family consisting of 4 brothers with an income of Rs. 32,000 has to pay at the higher rate of 1 anna, or a tax of Rs. 2,000, whereas, if divided, the four brothers would pay only Rs. 1,000. So would the members of a Muhammadan family living together. In the case of poorer families it makes a still greater difference, for whereas a similar family with an income of Rs. 3,200 pays a tax at 5 pies in the rupee, if divided, it would escape taxation altogether. Delicate inquiries, as to how far the acquisitions of the several members are separate or are family property, would be extremely embarrassing. The doctrine of survivorship cannot be invoked for it does not obtain under the Dhayabhaga. The taxation policy of the Government grievously interferes with the family system of the Hindus. The tax payable by an undivided family should be the total of the sums, if any, which would be payable by the several members of the family entitled to a share of such income if the family became divided on the date on which the income becomes taxable.

Clause 8.—The bonâ fide annual value of any house property should be expressly stated to be the income which would be derived from the premises, when the tenant agrees to pay the local rates or municipal taxes. The distinction drawn in clauses 8 and 9 has no real basis. The income of local bodies is assessable to income-tax in England, and there is no real analogy.

Clause 18.—The Act goes against the cardinal and fundamental principles that no one should be a judge in his own cause. The Collector and Commissioner represent the interests of the tax-gatherer and are judges. The fact that an appeal is allowed to the High Court on questions of law does not affect the question, for a correct valuation of the amount of income is as important as the principles on which taxable income has to be settled. The analogy of land acquisition cases and the example of other countries may be invoked in support of the claim that at any rate in cases where the assessee requires it, income-tax assessors should be associated with the Collector in determining the amount of taxable income.

Clause 21.—Punishment for failure to make a return should be commuted from loss of a right to appeal into a money penalty, where the party is unable to satisfy the taxing authorities that the failure was not wilful.

BILL No. 21 OF 1917.

[AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Income-tax.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to Income-tax; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Income-tax Act, 191 ;

(2) It extends to the whole of British India including the Santhal Parganas and applies also within the dominions of Princes and Chiefs in India in alliance with His Majesty, to British subjects in those dominions who are in the service of the Government of India or of a local authority established in the exercise of the powers of the Governor General in that behalf, and to all other servants of His Majesty in those dominions; and

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of April 191 .

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "Agricultural income" means—

(a) any rent or revenue derived from land which is used for agricultural purposes and is either assessed to land-revenue or subject to a local rate assessed and collected by officers of Government as such;

(b) any income derived from—

(i) agriculture, or

(ii) the performance by a cultivator or receiver of rent-in-kind of any process ordinarily employed by a cultivator or receiver of rent-in-kind to render the produce raised or received by him fit to be taken to market, or

(iii) the sale by a cultivator or receiver of rent-in-kind of the produce raised or received by him, when he does not keep a shop or stall for the sale of such produce, or

(iv) any building owned and occupied by the receiver of the rent or revenue of any such land as is referred to in clause (a), or occupied by the cultivator, or the receiver of rent-in-kind, of any land with respect to which or the produce of which, any operation mentioned in sub-clauses (ii) and (iii) is carried on:

Provided that the building is on or in the immediate vicinity of the land, and is a building which the receiver of the rent or revenue, or the cultivator or the receiver of the rent-in-kind, by reason of his connection with the land, requires as a dwelling-house, or as a store-house, or other out-building;

(2) "Assessee" means a person by whom income-tax is payable, and includes a firm and a Hindu undivided family;

(3) "Business" includes any trade, commerce, or manufacture or any adventure or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture;

(4) "Chief Revenue-authority" means the Board of Revenue or the Financial Commissioner in provinces where those authorities exist, and in any other case such authority as the Local Government may declare to be the Chief Revenue-authority for the purposes of this Act;

(5) "Collector" includes any officer whom the Local Government may appoint to exercise or perform all or any of the powers or duties conferred by this Act on a Collector, and means in relation to any assessee carrying on business the Collector of the place where the principal place of business of such assessee is situate, and in relation to any other assessee the Collector of the place where such assessee resides.

(6) "Commissioner" includes any officer whom the Local Government may appoint to exercise or perform all or any of the powers or duties conferred by this Act on a Commissioner;

(7) "Company" means a company as defined in the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or formed in pursuance of an Act of Parliament or of Royal Charter or Letters Patent, or of an Act of the legislature of a British possession, and includes any foreign association carrying on business in British India, whether incorporated or not, and whether its principal place of business is situate in British India or not, which the Governor General in Council may, by general or special order, declare to be a company for the purposes of this Act.

VII of 1913.

(8) "Local authority" includes any person legally entitled to the control or management of any municipal or local fund;

(9) "Magistrate" means a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, or a Magistrate of the second class specially empowered by the Local Government to try offences against this Act.

(10) "Prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act;

(11) "Previous year" means the twelve months ending on the 31st day of March next preceding the year for which the assessment is to be made, or, if the accounts of the assessee have been made up within the said twelve months in respect of a year ending on any date other than the said 31st day of March, then at the option of the assessee the year ending on the day on which his accounts have so been made up:

Provided that, if this option has once been exercised by the assessee, it shall not again be exercised so as to vary the meaning of the expression "previous year" as then applicable to such assessee, except with the consent of the Collector and upon such conditions as he may think fit.

(12) "Principal officer," used with reference to a local authority or a company or any other public body or association not being a local authority or company, means—

(a) the secretary, treasurer, manager or agent of the authority, company, body or association, or

(b) any person connected with the authority, company, body or association upon whom the Collector has served a notice of his intention of treating him as the principal officer thereof.

(13) " Total income " means total income from all sources to which this Act applies.

CHAPTER I.

TAXABLE INCOME.

3. (1) Save as hereinafter provided, this Act shall apply to all income from whatever source it is derived if it accrues or arises or is received in British India, or is, under this Act, deemed to accrue or arise or to be received in British India.

Application of Act.

(2) This Act shall not apply to the following classes of income :—

(i) Any income derived from property held under trust or other legal obligation wholly for religious or charitable purposes, and, in the case of property so held in part only for such purposes, the income applied, or finally set apart for application, thereto.

(ii) Any income of a religious or charitable institution derived from voluntary contributions and applicable solely to religious or charitable purposes.

(iii) The income of local authorities.

(iv) Interest on securities which are held by, or are the property of, any Provident Fund to which the Provident Funds Act, 1897, applies, or any Provident Insurance Society to which the Provident Insurance Societies Act, 1912, is, or, but for an exemption under that Act, would be, applicable.

IX of 1897.

V to 1912

(v) Any capital sum received in commutation of the whole or a portion of a pension, or in the nature of consolidated compensation for death or injuries, or in payment of any insurance policy, or as the accumulated balance at the credit of a subscriber to any such Provident Fund.

(vi) Any special allowance, benefit or perquisite specifically granted to meet expenses wholly and necessarily incurred in the performance of the duties of an office or employment of profit.

(vii) Legacies.

(viii) Any receipts not being receipts arising from business or the exercise of a profession, vocation, or occupation, which are of a casual and non-recurring nature and are not by way of addition to the remuneration of an employee.

(ix) Any perquisite or benefit which is neither money nor reasonably capable of being converted into money.

In this sub-section " charitable purpose " includes relief of the poor, education, medical relief and the advancement of any other object of general public utility.

4. (1) Agricultural income shall not be chargeable to income-tax, but the net amount of such income in excess of one thousand rupees which has been received by an assessee in the previous year shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied on any income otherwise chargeable to income-tax under this Act.

Agricultural income.

(2) In any province in which a basis has been definitely laid down by or under any enactment for the ascertainment of the annual value of land for the purpose of any cess on land, net agricultural income for the purposes of this Act shall be ascertained on that basis and in all other cases in the prescribed manner.

5. Save as otherwise provided by this Act, the following classes of income shall be chargeable to income-tax in the manner hereinafter appearing, namely—

(i) Salaries.
(ii) Interest on securities.
(iii) Income derived from house property.
(iv) Income derived from business.
(v) Professional earnings.
(vi) Income derived from other sources.

6. (1) The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head " Salaries " in respect of any salary or wages, any annuity, pension or gratuity, and any fees, commissions, perquisites or profits received by him in lieu of, or in addition to, any salary or wages, which are paid by or on behalf of Government, a local authority, a company, or any other public body or association not being a local authority or company, or by or on behalf of any private employer where such employer has entered into an agreement with the Collector in accordance with the prescribed conditions to recover the tax on behalf of Government, provided that the tax shall not be payable in respect of—

Salaries.

(i) any salary not exceeding rupees five hundred per mensem received by any member of His Majesty's Forces, or of His Majesty's Indian Forces, as the pay of an appointment which is ordinarily reserved exclusively for members of those Forces; or

(ii) any sum deducted under the authority of Government from the salary of any individual for the purpose of securing to him a deferred annuity or of making provision for his wife or children provided that the sum so deducted shall not exceed one-sixth of the salary.

(2) Any income which would be chargeable under this head if paid in British India shall be deemed to be so chargeable if paid to a British subject or any servant of His Majesty in any part of India by Government or by a local authority established by the Governor General in Council.

7. The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head " Interest on securities " in respect of the interest receivable by him on any security of the Government of India or on debentures or other securities for money issued by or on behalf of a local authority or a company :

Interest on securities.

Provided that no tax shall be payable on the interest receivable on any security of the Government of India issued or declared to be income-tax free.

8. The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head "Income derived from house property" in respect of the bonâ fide annual value of any house property of which he is the owner, subject to the following allowances, namely :—

Income derived from house property.

(i) where the property is in the occupation of the owner, or where it is let to a tenant and the owner has undertaken to bear the cost of repairs, a sum equal to one-sixth of such value;

(ii) where the property is in the occupation of a tenant who has undertaken to bear the cost of repairs, the difference between such value and the rent paid by the tenant up to but not exceeding one-sixth of such value ;

(iii) the amount of any annual premium paid to insure the property against risk of damage or destruction;

(iv) where the property is subject to a mortgage or charge or to a ground rent, the amount of any interest on such mortgage or charge or of any such ground rent;

(v) any sums paid on account of land-revenue in respect of the property ;

(vi) in respect of collection charges, a sum not exceeding the prescribed maxim*um*.

(vii) in respect of vacancies, such sum as the Collector may determine having regard to the circumstances of the case.

For the purposes of this section and section 9 the expression "annual value" shall be deemed to mean the sum for which the property might reasonably be expected to let from year to year.

9. (1) The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head "Income derived from business" in respect of the profits of any business carried on by him.

Income derived from business.

(2) Such profits shall be computed after making the following allowances, in respect of sums paid, or, in the case of depreciation, debited, namely :—

(i) Any rent paid for the premises in which such business is carried on, or where the premises are owned by the assessee the bonâ fide annual value thereof, provided that when any substantial part of the premises is used as a dwelling house by the assessee the allowance under this clause shall be such sum as the Collector may determine having regard to the proportional part so used ;

(ii) in respect of repairs, where the assessee is the tenant only of the premises, and has undertaken to bear the cost of such repairs, the amount actually expended thereon, provided that if any substantial part of the premises is used by the assessee as a dwelling house a proportional part only of such amount shall be allowed ;

(iii) in respect of capital borrowed for the purposes of the business, where the payment of interest thereon is not in any way dependent on the earning of profits, the amount of the interest paid ;

(iv) in respect of insurance against risk of damage or destruction of buildings, machinery, or plant used for the purposes of the business, the amount of any premium paid ;

(v) in respect of current repairs to buildings, machinery, or plant the amount actually expended thereon ;

(vi) in respect of depreciation of such buildings, machinery or plant being the property of the assessee a sum not exceeding, a percentage on the original cost thereof to the assessee to be fixed, subject to the approval of the Governor-General in Council, by the Local Government for different classes of buildings, machinery or plant having regard to the estimated life thereof, in determining which it shall be assumed that current repairs are executed from time to time.

Provided that :—

(a) no such allowance shall be made unless the amount claimed has actually been debited in the ordinary accounts of the business for the previous year, and the prescribed particulars have been duly furnished ;

(b) when in any year the full allowance admissible has not been claimed the balance may be added to the allowance made for the following year or years ;

(c) the aggregate of the allowances made under this sub-head either under this Act or any Act repealed thereby shall, in no case, exceed the original cost to the assessee of the buildings, machinery or plant as the case may be ;

(vii) in respect of any machinery or plant which has been sold or discarded as obsolete, the difference between the original cost to the assessee of the machinery or plant as reduced by the aggregate of the allowances made in respect of depreciation under clause (vi), and the amount for which the machinery or plant is actually sold, or its scrap value.

(viii) any sums paid on account of land-revenue, local rates or municipal taxes in respect of the premises ;

(ix) in respect of any expenditure (not being in the nature of capital expenditure) incurred solely for the purpose of earning such profits.

10. (1) The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head "Professional earnings" in respect of the profits of any profession, or vocation followed by him.

Professional earnings.

(2) Such profits shall be computed after making allowance for any expenditure (not being in the nature of capital expenditure) incurred solely for the purposes of such profession or vocation, provided that no allowance shall be made on account of any personal expenses of the assessee.

(3) Professional fees paid in any part of India to a person ordinarily resident in British India shall be deemed to be income chargeable under this head.

Income derived from other sources.

11. (1) The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head "Income derived from other sources" in respect of income and profits of every kind and from every source to which this Act applies (if not included under any of the preceding heads) with the exception of agricultural income.

(2) Such income and profits shall be computed after making allowance for any expenditure (not being in the nature of capital expenditure) incurred solely for the purpose of making such income or earning such profits, provided that no allowance shall be made on account of any personal expenses of the assessee.

Exclusions of a general nature.

12. (1) In computing the amount of the income chargeable to income-tax in the case of an assessee under any of the foregoing heads, no account shall be taken of any income which the assessee enjoys as a member of a company or of a firm or of an undivided Hindu family where the company, the firm or the family is liable to the tax.

(2) There shall also be excluded from the computation any sum paid by the assessee to effect an insurance on his own life or on the life of his wife or in respect of a contract for a deferred annuity on his own life or on the life of his wife or as a contribution to any provident fund to which the Provident Funds Act, 1897, applies, or to any provident fund which complies with the provisions of the Provident Insurance Societies Act, 1912, or has been exempted from the provisions of that Act :

IX of 1897.

V of 1912.

Provided that the aggregate of any sums so excluded shall not, after taking into account any exemptions allowed in respect of like provision under the head "Salaries", exceed one-sixth of the income of the assessee which would apart from such exclusion and exemption be chargeable to income-tax.

Treatment of exemptions and exclusions in determining total income.

13. In computing the total income of an assessee for the purposes of Schedule I, salaries and deductions exempted under the proviso to section 6 (1), income mentioned in section 12 (1), and sums excluded under section 12 (2) shall be taken into account.

Taxable income and levy of tax thereon.

14. (1) The aggregate amount of an assessee's income chargeable under each of the heads mentioned in sections 6 to 11 shall be the taxable income of the assessee.

(2) Subject to the conditions hereinbefore set out there shall be levied in respect of the year beginning with the first day of April, 191 , and in respect of each subsequent year, by collection in that year and subsequent adjustment as hereinafter provided, income-tax upon every assessee in respect of his taxable income in that year at the rate specified in Schedule I :

Provided that, where the assessee is a company or a firm constituted under a registered instrument of partnership specifying the individual shares of the partners, and the taxable income of such company or firm is one thousand rupees per annum or upwards, income-tax shall be levied at the maximum rate specified in Schedule I.

CHAPTER II.

DEDUCTIONS AND ASSESSMENT.

Payment.

15. (1) Income-tax shall, unless otherwise prescribed in the case of any security of the Government of India, be deducted at the time of payment in respect of income chargeable under the following heads :—

(i) "Salaries ;" and

(ii) "Interest on securities."

(2) An employer or other person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" shall at the time of payment deduct income-tax on the amount payable at the rate specified in Schedule I in respect of such amount provided that if the payment is a recurring one and in respect of any period less than a year the rate shall be determined with reference to the amount which would be proportionately payable in a year. The deduction so made shall be treated as a payment of income-tax on behalf of the person from whose earnings the deduction was made and credit shall be given to him therefor in the next adjustment under section 19 :

(3) The person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "Interest on securities" shall, at the time of payment, deduct income-tax on the amount of the interest payable at the maximum rate specified in Schedule I. The deduction so made shall be treated as payment of income-tax on behalf of the owner of the security, and credit shall be given to him therefor in the next adjustment under section 19 :

Provided that, if the owner of the security obtains a refund of any portion of the tax so deducted in accordance with the provisions of this Act, no credit shall be given for the amount of such refund.

(4) All sums deducted in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) or (3) shall be paid within the prescribed time by the person making the deduction to the credit of the Government of India or as the Governor General in Council directs.

(5) If any such person does not deduct and pay the tax as required by this section, he shall, without prejudice to any other consequences which he may incur, be deemed to be personally in default in respect of the tax.

(6) The power to deduct under this section shall be without prejudice to any other mode of recovery.

(7) In the case of income chargeable under any other head than those above mentioned the tax shall be payable by the assessee direct, and shall be the amount assessed under this Act subject to such adjustment as aforesaid.

Annual return.

16. The prescribed person in the case of every Government office, and the principal officer of every local authority, and of every company, and of every other public body or association not being a local authority or company, and every private employer who has agreed to recover income tax on behalf of Government shall prepare, and, within fifteen days from the 31st day of March in each year, deliver or cause to be delivered to the Collector, in the prescribed form, a return in writing showing—

(a) the name, and so far as it is known the address, of every person who was receiving on the said 31st day of March, or has received during the year ending on that date, from the authority, company, body, association or private employer as the case may be, any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" of such amount as may be prescribed not being less than six hundred rupees per annum;

(b) the amount of the income so received by each such person, and the time or times at which the same was paid;

(c) the amount deducted in respect of income-tax from each such person.

Return by assessees.

17. (1) The principal officer of every company shall prepare, and, on or before the fifteenth day of June in each year, deliver or cause to be delivered to the Collector a return in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner of the total income of the company during the previous year:

Provided that the Collector may, in his discretion, extend the date for the delivery of the return in the case of any company or class of companies.

(2) In the case of any person other than a company whose taxable income is, in the Collector's opinion, not less than two thousand rupees, the Collector shall serve a notice upon him requiring him to furnish, within such period as may be specified in the notice, a return in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner setting forth (along with such other particulars as may be provided for in the notice) his total income during the previous year.

(3) In the case of any person other than a company whose taxable income is in the Collector's opinion one thousand rupees or upwards, but less than two thousand rupees, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, serve upon him a notice in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2), but, if he does not do so, shall proceed in the manner hereinafter provided in Chapter III for the summary assessment of such incomes.

Assessment.

18. (1) If the Collector is satisfied that a return made under section 17 is correct and complete, he shall assess the sum payable by the assessee for the year in which the return is made on the basis of such return.

(2) If the Collector has reason to believe that a return made under section 17 is incorrect or incomplete, he shall serve on the person who made the return a notice requiring him, on a date to be therein mentioned, either to attend at the Collector's office and produce, or to cause to be there produced for the inspection of the Collector, such accounts and documents as the Collector may require and any evidence on which the assessee may rely in support of the return.

(3) On the day specified in the notice, or as soon afterwards as may be, the Collector, after examining such accounts and documents, and hearing any evidence which the assessee may produce and such other evidence as the Collector may require, shall, by an order in writing determine the total income of the assessee for the previous year and assess the sum payable by the assessee for the year in which the return is made on the basis of such determination.

(4) If the principal officer of any Company or any other person fails to make a return under section 17 (1), (2) or (3) as the case may be, or having made a return, fails to attend or fails to comply substantially with all the terms of a notice issued under section 18, sub-section (2), the Collector shall make the assessment to the best of his judgment.

(5) The sum to be assessed in every case shall be a sum calculated on the aggregate of the assessee's income in the previous year chargeable under each of the heads mentioned in sections 8 to 11 at the rate applicable to his total income in that year.

Adjustment with actual income when ascertained.

19. When the Collector has, in any year after the commencement of this Act for which income-tax is leviable under section 14 (2), ascertained, either from the return made by an assessee or after further inquiry, the total income actually received by or accrued to the assessee in the previous year, he shall compute the income-tax which would have been payable in respect thereof if it had been levied in such previous year with reference to the amount of the income so ascertained and the law then in force; and the difference between the sum so computed and the aggregate of the sums already paid by or on behalf of the assessee in respect of income-tax for such previous year shall be paid by or refunded to the assessee as the case may be.

Provided that no adjustment shall be made under this section in respect of any income-tax assessed or paid before the passing of this Act:

Provided also that it shall be competent to—

(a) an assessee; or

(b) in the case of the death or insolvency of an assessee, his representative in interest; or

(c) with reference to any year for which income-tax is leviable under section 14 (2), the Collector;

in any year to claim an immediate adjustment to date of the sums already paid by or on behalf of an assessee in that year, upon the basis of the total income actually received by or accrued to him in that year; and upon such claim being made, all the provisions of this Chapter shall apply so far as may be necessary for the determination of the proper sum to be paid by or refunded to the assessee or his representative in interest in respect of income-tax down to the date of such determination, and the same shall be paid or refunded accordingly.

Notice of demand.

20. When the Collector has determined a sum to be payable by an assessee under either section 18 or section 19, he shall serve on the assessee a notice of demand in the prescribed form specifying the sum so payable.

Petition against assessment under this Act.

21. (1) Any assessee objecting to the amount or rate at which he is assessed under section 18 or to an adjustment made under section 19, or denying his liability to be assessed under this Act may, unless he or, in the case of a company, the principal officer thereof, has knowingly and wilfully failed to make a return under section 17 or substantially to comply with all the terms of a notice served on him under section 18, apply by petition to the Commissioner for relief against any order of the Collector in respect of such assessment or adjustment.

(2) The petition shall ordinarily be presented within thirty days of receipt of the notice of demand; but the Commissioner may receive a petition after the expiration of that period if he is satisfied that the objector had sufficient cause for not presenting it within that period.

(3) The petition shall be in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner.

Hearing of petition.

22. The Commissioner shall fix a day and place for the hearing of the petition, and on the day and at the place so fixed, or on the day and at the place, if any, to which he has adjourned the hearing, shall hear the petition and pass such order thereon, whether by way of confirmation, reduction, enhancement or cancellation of the assessment, or adjustment or otherwise and fixing such time for payment, as he thinks fit.

Power of review

23. The Chief Revenue-authority may, of its own motion, call for the record of any assessment proceeding which has been taken by any officer subordinate to it, and make such inquiry and pass such orders thereon as it thinks fit:

Provided that it shall not pass any order enhancing the sum payable by an assessee without hearing him or giving him a reasonable opportunity of being heard

Penal assessment

24. If the Collector or the Commissioner in making any assessment or adjustment under this Chapter is satisfied that the assessee has concealed the particulars of his income, or has deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars of such income, and has thereby returned it below its real amount, the Collector or the Commissioner may direct that the assessee shall pay on the difference between his income as finally ascertained and the amount originally returned by him income-tax at a rate not exceeding double the rate which would otherwise have been payable:

Provided that no such order shall be made unless the assessee has been heard or has been given a reasonable opportunity of being heard:

Provided further that no prosecution for an offence against this Act shall be instituted in respect of the same facts on which a penal assessment is made under this section.

Income escaping assessment assessable in following year.

25. If for any reason income chargeable under this Act has escaped assessment in any year, or has been assessed at too low a rate the Collector may, at any time in the year next following, assess, or re-assess, such income, and all the provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly.

Rectification of mistake.

26. The Collector may, at any time within one year from the date of any demand made upon an assessee, rectify any mistake in connection therewith which has been brought to his notice by such assessee and make a refund to such assessee in respect thereof.

Power to take evidence on oath, etc.

27. The Collector or Commissioner shall, for the purposes of any inquiry under this Chapter, have the same powers as are vested in a Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, when trying a suit in respect of the following matters— V of 1908.

(a) enforcing the attendance of any person and examining him on oath or affirmation;

(b) compelling the production of documents; and

(c) issuing commissions for the examination of witnesses;

and any proceeding before a Collector or Commissioner under this Chapter shall be deemed to be a "judicial proceeding" within the meaning of sections 193 and 228 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Power to call for information.

28. The Collector or Commissioner may for the purposes of this Act—

(1) require any person to furnish a return, in the prescribed form, containing, to the best of his belief, the name and address of every person employed in his service who is receiving in virtue of such employment any income not chargeable under the head "Salaries", of such amount as may be prescribed, not being less than six hundred rupees per annum;

(2) require any firm or Hindu undivided family to furnish him with a return of the partners in the firm or the adult male members of the family, as the case may be, and of their addresses;

(3) require any person whom he has reason to believe to be a trustee, guardian, or agent to furnish him with a return of the names of the persons for or of whom he is trustee, guardian, or agent and of their addresses.

Power to inspect the register of members of any company.

29. The Collector or Commissioner or any person authorised in writing in this behalf by the Collector or Commissioner, may inspect and if necessary take copies or cause copies to be taken of the register of members of any company or of any entry in such register.

CHAPTER III.

SUMMARY ASSESSMENT.

Summary assessment.

30. (1) In the case of persons whose taxable income is in the Collector's opinion rupees one thousand or upwards, but less than rupees two thousand, the Collector shall, save in cases in which he has served a notice under section 17 (3), make a summary assessment on the income of such persons to the best of his judgment.

(2) Notice of such summary assessment and of the amount of the tax payable thereunder and of the time and the place at which, and the person to whom, such tax is to be paid shall be given either by local publication in the prescribed manner of a list of such assessments or in such other way as may be prescribed:

Provided that due publicity shall be given to the assessee's right to apply to the Collector in the manner provided for in the next sub-section within the prescribed period, and that reasonable notice shall be given of the place at which, and the person from whom, the assessee can obtain a form of return should he wish to submit one.

(3) Any assessee in respect of whom a summary assessment has been made under this section may, within the prescribed period, apply to the Collector for the cancellation or revision of the assessment, and the Collector shall, after examining any accounts and documents and hearing any evidence which the assessee may produce, and such other evidence as the Collector may require, determine, by order in writing, the amount of the tax, if any, payable by the assessee, and such determination shall be final:

Provided that, if the person making the application files therewith a return of his income in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner, the application shall be deemed to be a return under section 17 and shall be dealt with accordingly.

CHAPTER IV.

LIABILITY IN SPECIAL CASES.

Guardians, trustees and agents.

31. In the case of any guardian, trustee or agent of any person being a minor, lunatic or idiot or residing out of British India (all of which persons are hereinafter in this section included in the term beneficiary) being in receipt on behalf of such beneficiary of any income chargeable under this Act, the tax shall be levied upon and recoverable from such guardian, trustee or agent as the case may be, in like manner and to the same amount as it would be leviable upon and recoverable from any such beneficiary if of full age, sound mind, or resident in British India, and in direct receipt of such income, and all the provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly.

Courts of Wards, &c.

32. In the case of income chargeable under this Act which is received by the Courts of Wards, the Administrators General, the Official Trustees or by any receiver or manager (including any person whatever his designation who in fact manages property on behalf of another) appointed by or under any order of a Court, the tax shall be levied upon and recoverable from such Court of Wards, Administrator General, Official Trustee, receiver or manager in the like manner and to the same amount as it would be leviable upon and recoverable from any person on whose behalf such income is received, and all the provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly.

Non-residents.

33. (1) In the case of any person residing out of British India all profits or gains accruing or arising to such person, whether directly or indirectly, through or from any business connection in British India, shall be deemed to be income accruing or arising within British India and shall be chargeable to income-tax in the name of the agent of any such person, and such agent shall be deemed to be for all the purposes of the Act the assessee in respect of such income-tax:

Provided that any arrears of tax may be recovered also in accordance with the provisions of this Act from any assets of the non-resident person which are, or may at any time come, within British India.

(2) Where a person not resident in British India, and not being a British subject or a firm or company constituted within His Majesty's dominions or a branch thereof, carries on business with a person resident in British India, and it appears to the Collector or the Commissioner, as the case may be, that, owing to the close connection between the resident and the non-resident person and to the substantial control exercised by the non-resident over the resident, the course of business between those persons is so arranged, that the business done by the resident in pursuance of his connection with the non-resident produces to the resident either no profits or less than the ordinary profits which might be expected to arise in that business, the profits derived therefrom or which may reasonably be deemed to have been derived therefrom, shall be chargeable to income-tax in the name of the resident person who shall be deemed to be for all the purposes of this Act the assessee in respect of such income-tax:

Agent to include persons treated as such.

34. Any person employed by, or on behalf of a person residing out of British India or having any business connection with such person, upon whom the Collector has caused a notice to be served of his intention of treating him as the agent of the non-resident person shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be such agent

Provided that no person shall be deemed to be the agent of a non-resident person unless he has had an opportunity of being heard by the Collector as to his liability.

CHAPTER V.

RECOVERY OF TAX.

Tax when payable.

35. The amount of income-tax specified as payable in a notice of demand under section 20 or an order under section 22, section 23 or section 24 or in a notice or order under section 30, shall be paid within the time, at the place and to the person mentioned in the notice or order, or if a time is not so mentioned then on or before the first day of the second month following the date of the notice or order, and any assessee failing so to pay shall be deemed to be in default, provided that when an assessee has presented a petition under section 21 the Collector may in his discretion treat the assessee as not being in default as long as such petition is undisposed of.

Mode and time of recovery.

36. (1) When an assessee is in default in making a payment of income-tax, the Collector, in his discretion, may recover from him a sum not exceeding double the amount of the tax either as if it were an arrear of land-revenue or by any process enforceable for the recovery of an arrear of any municipal tax or local rate imposed under any enactment for the time being in force in any part of the territories administered by the Local Government to which the Collector is subordinate.

(2) If any assessee is in receipt of any income chargeable under the head "Salaries," the Collector may require any person paying the same to deduct from any payment subsequent to the date of such requisition any sum recoverable under sub-section (1), and such person shall comply with any such requisition and shall pay the sums so deducted to the credit of the Government of India or as the Governor-General in Council directs.

(3) The Local Government may direct by what authority any powers or duties incident under any such enactment as aforesaid to the enforcement of any process for the recovery of a municipal tax or local rate shall be exercised or performed when that process is employed under sub-section (1) for the recovery of income-tax.

(4) The Local Government may direct, with respect to any specified area, that income-tax shall be recovered therein, with, and as an addition to, any municipal tax or local rate by the same person and in the same manner as the municipal tax or local rate is recovered.

(5) Save in accordance with the provisions of section 33 (1), no proceedings for the recovery of any sum payable under this Act shall be commenced after the expiration of one year from the last day of the year in which any demand is made under this Act.

CHAPTER VI.

REFUNDS to shareholders and others.

Refund to individual shareholders, partners and owners of securities.

37. If—

(a) a shareholder in a company who has received any dividend from the company; or

(b) a partner in a firm on which income-tax has been levied at the maximum rate, in accordance with the proviso to section 14, who has received a share of the profits of the firm; or

(c) the owner of a security from the interest on which income-tax has been deducted in accordance with the provisions of section 15;

satisfies the Collector that his total income in the previous year was less than any one, as the case may be, of the amounts specified in Schedule II, he shall be entitled to a refund of a sum calculated on such dividend, share of profits or interest at the rates specified in the same Schedule against each such amount.

Limitation of claims for refund.

38. No claim to any refund under section 37 shall be allowed, unless it is made within one year from the last day of the year to which the claim relates.

CHAPTER VII.

OFFENCES AND PENALTIES.

Failure to make payments or deliver returns or statements or allow inspection.

39. If a person fails without reasonable cause or excuse—

(a) to deduct and pay any tax as required by section 15 or under section 36 (2);

(b) to deliver or cause to be delivered to the Collector in due time any of the returns mentioned in section 16, section 17, or section 28;

(c) to grant inspection or allow copies to be taken in accordance with the provisions of section 29;

(d) to attend or to produce, or cause to be produced, on or before the date mentioned in a notice under section 18, such accounts and documents as are referred to in the notice, he shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punishable with fine which may extend to ten rupees for every day during which the default continues.

False statement in declaration.

40. If a person makes a statement in a verification mentioned in section 17 or section 21 (3) which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, he shall be deemed to have committed the offence described in section 177 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Prosecution to be at instance of Collector.

41. (1) A person shall not be proceeded against for an offence under section 39 or section 40 except at the instance of the Collector.

(2) The Collector may stay any such proceeding or compound any such offence.

Disclosure of information by public servant.

42. All particulars contained in any statement or return made or furnished under the provisions of this Act shall be treated as confidential, and if a public servant discloses any particulars contained in any statement or return made or furnished under this Act, he shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to six months and shall also be liable to fine:

Provided that no prosecution shall be instituted under this section except with the previous sanction of the Local Government.

CHAPTER VIII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Power to make rules.

43. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules for carrying out the purposes of this Act and for the ascertainment and determination of any class of income, and may, subject to such restrictions and conditions as he may impose, delegate to a Local Government the power to make such rules so far as regards the territories subject to that Government.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power such rules may—

(a) subject to the provisions of section 4 provide for the determination of the amount of net agricultural income,

(b) when income is derived in part from agriculture and in part from business, prescribe the manner, whether with reference to a class or in particular cases, by which the taxable income shall be arrived at,

(c) prescribe the manner in which and the procedure by which the taxable income of Insurance Companies shall be arrived at,

(d) prescribe the manner in which and the procedure by which the taxable income of persons not resident in British India or of persons deemed to be assessees in respect thereof, shall be arrived at,

(e) provide for a system of composition of assessments and prescribe the conditions under which the Collector may enter into composition with assessees as to their assessment,

(f) prescribe the procedure to be followed on applications for refunds,

(g) provide for any matter which by this Act is to be prescribed.

(3) The power to make rules conferred by sub-section (2), clause (a), shall be subject to the condition of the rules being made after previous publication.

(4) Rules made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India or the local official Gazette, as the case may be, and shall thereupon have effect as if enacted in this Act.

Power to make exemptions, etc.

44. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make an exemption, reduction in rate or other modification, in respect of income-tax in favour of any class of income or in regard to the whole or any part of the income of any class of persons.

Receipts and their contents.

45. When any money is paid under this Act to the Collector or is recovered thereunder by him he shall give a receipt for the same, specifying the prescribed particulars.

Service of notices.

46. A notice or requisition under this Act may be served on the person therein named either by post, or by the delivery or tender to him of a copy of the notice or requisition in the manner provided by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for the service of summons.

Power to declare principal places of business.

47. (1) When an assessee has several places of business in territories subject to different Local Governments, the Governor General in Council may declare which of those places shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be his principal place of business.

(2) When an assessee has several places of business in the territories subject to a single Local Government, that Government may declare which of them shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be his principal place of business.

(3) The powers given by this section may be delegated to, and exercised by, such officers as the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, as the case may be, may appoint in this behalf.

Indemnity.

48. Every person deducting, retaining or paying any tax in pursuance of this Act in respect of income belonging to another person, is hereby indemnified for the deduction, retention or payment thereof.

Powers exercisable from time to time.

49. All powers conferred by, or conferrable under, this Act may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires.

Delegation of certain powers of Local Government.

50. The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, delegate to the Chief Revenue-authority all or any of the powers conferred on it by this Act for the appointment of officers to exercise or perform the powers or duties of Collectors or Commissioners and all or any of the powers conferred on it by section 36 and the proviso to section 42.

Statement of case by Chief Revenue-authority to High Court.

51. (1) If in the course of any assessment under this Act or any proceeding in connection therewith other than a proceeding under Chapter VII, a question has arisen with reference to the interpretation of any of the provisions of this Act or of any rule thereunder the Chief Revenue-authority may, either on its own motion or on reference from any Revenue-officer subordinate to it, draw up a statement of the case, and refer it, with its own opinion thereon, to the High Court, and shall so refer any such question on the application of the assessee unless it is satisfied that the application is frivolous or that a reference is unnecessary.

(2) If the High Court is not satisfied that the statements contained in the case are sufficient to enable it to determine the questions raised thereby, the Court may refer the case back to the Revenue-authority by which it was stated, to make such additions thereto or alterations therein as the Court may direct in that behalf.

(3) The High Court upon the hearing of any such case, shall decide the questions raised thereby, and shall deliver its judgment thereon containing the grounds on which such decision is founded, and shall send to the Revenue-authority by which the case was stated a copy of such judgment under the seal of the Court and the signature of the Registrar; and the Revenue-authority shall dispose of the case accordingly, or if the case arose on reference from any Revenue-officer subordinate to it, shall forward a copy of such judgment to such officer who shall dispose of the case conformably to such judgment.

V of 1908.

(4) Where a reference is made to the High Court on the application of an assessee, costs shall be in the discretion of the Court.

Bar of suits in Civil Court.

52. No suit shall be brought in any Civil Court to set aside or modify any assessment made under this Act, and no prosecution, suit or other proceeding shall lie against any Government officer for anything in good faith done or intended to be done under this Act.

Repeal.

53. The enactments mentioned in Schedule III are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the fourth column thereof:

Provided that such repeal shall not affect the liability of any person to pay any sum due from him or any existing right of refund under any of the said enactments.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915. (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Wednesday, the 27th February, 1918.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble SIR GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C.S.I., K.C., Vice-President, presiding, and 57 Members of whom 50 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked:—

The Commercial Intelligence Department.

1. "Will Government be pleased to state what improvement has been made in the organization of the Commercial Intelligence Department within the last two years?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied:—

"The question of improving the organization of the Commercial Intelligence Department has been engaging the attention of the Government of India for some time past. It has been decided to continue the existing arrangements until the Report of the Indian Industrial Commission is received."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked:—

Representation on the Imperial Legislative Council of Cantonments in Native States.

2. "With reference to my questions regarding the representation of cantonment stations in Indian States, such as Bangalore and Secunderabad, asked on the 9th September, 1913, 9th January, 1914, and 8th September, 1914, do Government propose to consider the question of giving them representation on the Imperial Legislative Council in any scheme of impending reforms?"

[Sir William Vincent; Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur; Sir Claude Hill; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" Government are at present unable to make any statement as to the scope of the constitutional changes now under consideration. "

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Investigation of the indigenous system of medicine.

3. " Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether they have received the views of all Local Governments on the subject of my Resolution moved in this Council on the 15th March, 1916, recommending an investigation in regard to the indigenous systems of medicine ?

(b) and, if so, what action they have taken in the matter as the result of such investigation ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" The views of all the Local Governments and Administrations have been received by the Government of India. They are now, as stated in the reply given by the Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay to the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul on February 6th, awaiting from the Chief Commissioner of Delhi the opinion of the Committee of the All-India Ayurvedic and Unani Tibbi Conference on the indigenous systems of medicine. "

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

The Cotton Industry in India.

4. " With reference to the answer given to my question on the Cotton industry in India asked on the 16th February, 1917, that Government were considering the suggestions made by Professor Todd, will Government be pleased to state what action has since been taken to promote the industry ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" The Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the answer given by the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes to a question asked on the same subject by the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi on 6th February, 1918. As stated by my Hon'ble Colleague, the whole question will be carefully considered by the Government of India on receipt of the Report of the Committee which has been appointed to investigate the possibility of extending the production of long-stapled cotton in India. "

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Indian Prisoners of War.

5. " Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) what special steps, if any, have been taken for ascertaining the condition of the Indians who are prisoners-of-war in the hands of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey, in the several theatres of war, and for improving their lot; and

(b) the substance of the latest reports regarding their condition, and when such reports were received ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" With regard to (a) the question of taking special steps to ascertain the condition of Indian or other British prisoners-of-war in the hands of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey is entirely in the hands of the Home Government, with whom the Government of India are in constant communication.

With regard to (b), we know practically nothing as to the treatment accorded to Indian or other British subjects who are prisoners-of-war in Austria and Turkey. It is thought, however, that the number of Indians held captive in Austria is very small. Any there may be would have been taken from torpedoed ships.

As regards Germany, an internment camp at Havelberg, where there were 372 Indians, was inspected by a member of the American Embassy in September, 1916, and from his report it appears that the prisoners were then well treated and contented.

The most recent reports show that an internment camp for Indians at Zossen, where there were 175 Muhammadans, was visited by the Dutch Consul in June, 1917. The Consul brought to notice several defects, and the matter was taken up by the Home Government, resulting in a further visit being made to the camp by the Dutch Consul in August last, and from his second report it appears that the defects brought to notice have been remedied. The Dutch Consul also visited internment camps for Indians at Grossenbaum and Dubeningken in September last, and at the time of his visit there were 239 Indians interned at the former place and 20 at the latter. It appears from the Consul's report that they are well treated and seem contented. We also heard from the Secretary of State in August last that 463 British Indian subjects had been transferred from Zossen to Roumania for medical reasons and because the Roumanian climate was considered more suitable for them.

We have also received some papers from the Secretary of State for India which show that the Foreign Office addressed the Netherlands Legation at Berlin on 24th October, 1917, representing that His Majesty's Government understood that the conditions of internment life in Germany were prejudicial to the health of Indian prisoners-of-war and requesting the Netherlands Legation to be good enough to draw the attention of the German Government to this matter, in order that the Indian soldiers might be examined with a view to their repatriation or transfer to a neutral country under the recent Hague agreement with regard to prisoners-of-war.

The question of forming a Commission to enquire into the treatment accorded to British and Indian soldiers taken prisoners of war by the Germans in East Africa is now under consideration.

An Indian Soldiers' Fund Committee has now been in existence for some time in England. This Fund is doing everything possible to help Indian soldiers, who are held prisoners-of-war by the enemy, by despatching to them large parcels of food and clothing. The Dutch Consuls at Berlin and Constantinople are also interesting themselves in the welfare of Indian prisoners of war."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

East Indian Railway Profits.

6. "Will Government be pleased to state the amount of profits paid to or received by the Company managing the East Indian Railway system for 1916-1917, and up to January 1918."

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"The amount paid as their share of surplus profits to the East Indian Railway Company during the year 1916-17 was R27,29,877, and for the half year, April to September 1917, was R15,69,853. It is not possible to state the profits for October to December 1917, as accounts are made up and profits declared half-yearly on the accounts made up to the 31st March and 30th September of each year."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

Accommodation provided for Indian Officers in Cantonments.

7. "Are there any rules in force as to the dimensions, area, cubical space, etc., of the rooms, courtyards and annexes, which are provided for the accommodation of Indian officers in cantonments?

Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a plan in detail of the latest improved type of Indian officers' quarters?"

[His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Captain Ajab Khan.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"With reference to the first query asked the reply is—

Yes. The following scale of accommodation for Indian Officers is authorised :—

A. Indian Cavalry Regiment.

(a) For Risaldar Majors, Risaldars and Ressaidars.

8 detached quarters, each containing :—

2 rooms each 17′ × 12′ × 13½′—area 408 s.ft., and cubic space 5,508 c.ft.

Verandah 8′ wide in front.

Courtyard 37′ × 22½′ containing—

1 cook-house 6′ × 6′ × 8′.

1 bathing-place 6′ × 5′ × 7½′.

Covered porch or durbar hall 12′ × 8′ × 9½′ with 8′ wide verandah alongside.

Latrine 6′ × 5′ × 7½′.

9 detached quarters, of practically the same dimensions.

B. Other units.

Quarters on scale given in A (b) above.

2. A copy* of the original type plan No 33 and two outline plans showing the latest improvements are placed upon the table.

3. The scales given above apply to plains stations only. In the hills the height of the main rooms is reduced to 9′, thereby reducing the cubic space to a certain degree."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

Rations for Indian Soldiers.

8. "(a) Is it a fact that the peace scale of rations for the Indian Army does not include any meat at all? If so, do Government propose to add a ration of meat to the scale?

(b) What does the emergency ration of the Indian Army consist of, and how is it kept and preserved?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) As meat is not an article of general consumption among Indian troops, it is not included in the scale of issue; for the same reason it is not intended to add meat to the scale. If desired, it can be purchased from the messing allowance of ten annas per man per mensem for those who will eat it, and I may say that on my inspections I have investigated closely the question of messing in all units, and as a general rule all battalions now get one ration of meat a week and some get two.

(b) The emergency ration consists of ½ lb gur and 1 lb. of parched gram or, if preferred, atta, per man. The ration is issued in bulk and distributed to the men, each man carrying his ration in a special tin provided for the purpose by the State.

These articles are issued fresh and consumed before deterioration, so that no preserving is required.

An alternative ration is 1¼ lbs. biscuits, which are kept in tin-lined cases."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

Soldier Clerks of the Indian Units.

9. "(a) With reference to the question put by me on the 1st March, 1917, and His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's reply, will Government be pleased to state how the question of clerical allowances in the Indian units stands now?

(b) Are Government aware of the hardships which the clerical staff of the Indian Army are undergoing owing to the present high prices of commodities?"

*Not included in these Proceedings.

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Captain Ajab Khan; Sir William Vincent.]

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) Proposals dealing comprehensively with the conditions of service of clerks in Indian units are being worked out, and it is hoped that it will be possible to issue orders on the subject ultimately—I cannot say in a short time because there are certain complexities connected with it and changes which all need investigation—but the point has been under consideration for some time and is still under consideration.

(b) The Government of India are not aware that the present high prices of commodities cause more hardship to clerks of the Indian Army than to other classes. As far as soldier clerks are concerned, the issue of free rations makes the hardship very much less felt in their case than in that of clerks who receive pay only."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

Burial-grounds and Cremation Ghâts for the Indian Army.

10. "(a) With reference to the question regarding burial-grounds and cremation places put by me on 1st March, 1917, and His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's reply, will Government be pleased to state how the question of providing burial-grounds and cremation ghâts in Cantonments for the Indian Army now stands?

(b) Will Government be pleased to represent to the Colonial Governments within whose territories Indian troops are stationed as garrisons the desirability of taking similar action in the matter as is taken in India?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"As regards (a) all General Officers Commanding have been addressed with a view to ascertaining their opinions on the Hon'ble Member's proposals.

The opinions expressed, though generally in favour of the latter, have brought to light considerable local difficulties which are now being examined.

I may add that the essential requirements of the case have been met by the orders issued by Government in 1917, authorising the payment of funeral expenses of Indian soldiers and public followers, whether they are serving overseas or in India.

As regards (b) the Government of India will communicate to the Colonial Governments within whose limits Indian troops are stationed particulars of any action that they may decide on in regard to the subject referred to."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

The Indian Arms Act.

11. "(a) Is it a fact that Assistant Engineers of the Public Works Department are exempted from the operation of the Indian Arms Act, whilst Indian Assistant Traffic Superintendents of the State Railways are required to secure a formal license for possession of arms?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons for such distinction and disparity in the privileges of these two classes of officers?

(c) Will Government be pleased to consider the desirability of conferring a similar exemption upon Assistant Traffic Superintendents of Railways?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) It is a fact that Assistant Engineers of the Public Works Department are exempted from the operation of the Indian Arms Act, and that Assistant Traffic Superintendents of the State Railways are not.

(b) The former were exempted by an order passed in the year 1883.

No recommendation for the exemption of the latter was received by the Government of India until 1914, by which time it had been decided not to add to the list of exemptions pending a reconsideration of the general policy of the administration of the Act.

[Sir William Vincent; Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Sir William Meyer.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

(c) The question of the future administration of the Arms Act is still under consideration and, as stated by the Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay in his reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul, Government will not accept any solution of this question which continues to base exemption on racial distinctions.

Government will take note of any special cases that may be put forward, but do not propose to create any further exemptions of a general character save under very exceptional circumstances, until their examination of the subject has been completed."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Exchange Compensation Allowance.

12. "(a) With reference to the orders issued in October last altering the rate at which exchange compensation allowance is paid, has the attention of Government been drawn to articles and statements in the 'Pioneer' and other newspapers implying that this alteration—

(i) has imposed undue hardship on those affected by it with reference to the high cost of living ;

(ii) is unequally applied in that, as stated in a para. in the 'Pioneer' of 30th December last, certain Military Officers have been admitted to exchange compensation allowance unconditionally ;

(iii) constitutes a breach of faith in regard to officers who were given to understand that they would draw exchange compensation allowance at the rate of 1*s*. 4*d*.

(b) Will Government be pleased to explain on what principles they have acted in issuing and applying the order above referred to ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The Government have seen the articles to which the Hon'ble Member refers, and I am glad to have this opportunity of making a statement on the subject with reference to the various points set forth in his question.

(1) Exchange compensation allowance was originally granted in 1893 to compensate European officers not domiciled in India for the extra cost of remittance to Europe occasioned by the fall of the rupee below 1*s*. 6*d*. and for this purpose only ; and it was calculated so as to enable these officers to remit half their salaries (subject to a prescribed maximum) to Europe at this rate. When the allowance was first granted the exchange value of the rupee was subject to considerable fluctuation ; it was therefore necessary to calculate the allowance on a fluctuating basis determined by the market rate of exchange, and the average rate of the preceding quarter was adopted as the market rate for this purpose. In 1901, the exchange value of the rupee had ceased to vary materially from 1*s*. 4*d*., and, purely as a matter of departmental convenience, so as to avoid the constant quarterly calculations, it was decided in February of that year to take 1*s*. 4*d*. as the market rate of exchange for the purpose of calculating the allowance until anything occurred to render this rate unsuitable ; or to quote the exact words of the Government of India Resolution on the subject 'until further orders.'

(2) Recently, as is well known, the exchange value of the rupee has departed from the 1*s*. 4*d*. rate, and it therefore became necessary to revert to the previous method of calculating the allowance which was in force when the exchange value of the rupee was subject to fluctuation. This was notified in Finance Department Resolution No. 1175 of 30th October last.

(3) From this statement of the previous history of the allowance it will be seen that the principle on which the Government has acted has always been the same, namely, that certain European officers domiciled in India should be placed in a position to remit half their salaries to England at the rate of 1*s*. 6*d*. per rupee ; that the Finance Department Resolution of 30th October, 1917, made no change in the principle ; but that on the contrary it was in order to maintain it that the orders in that Resolution were issued. It will also be seen that the allowance was given purely for remittance purposes, and, as officers are under present orders still in a position to make remittances at the rate of 1*s.* 6*d*, they have suffered no hardship in this respect.

(4) The high cost of living, to which a reference is made in the question, is a disadvantage to which every one, official and non-official alike, is at present subjected not only in India, but practically throughout the world. It is one of the misfortunes which the war has brought upon us. But it does not constitute any reason for continuing the previous rate of exchange compensation allowance to a special class of officers, when the rate at which they can make remittances Home has become considerably more favourable to them. Nor is it relevant in this connection that particular officers may, for private reasons, have to remit Home more than half their pay, just as others may remit considerably less than half. The half-pay remittance concession was fixed on a general average computation: it would obviously be impossible to examine the private circumstances of each officer.

(5) The statements in the 'Pioneer' of the 30th December, to which the Hon'ble Member refers, were that, while one Department of the Government of India finds that the grant of exchange compensation allowance is wholly inadmissible owing to the prevailing rates of exchange, another Department suddenly discovers a class of officers fully entitled to this extra form of pay, and that the Government of India had revived the exchange compensation allowance in a particular case. These statements are inaccurate. As I have explained above, it has not been decided that exchange compensation allowance is wholly inadmissible; its amount has merely been revised, in accorddance with the principle on which it was originally granted, with reference to the market rate of exchange. As it is still drawn there has, therefore, been no question of 'reviving' it. The orders referred to in the "Pioneer" merely laid down that officers promoted from the ranks of British units on the Indian establishment during the war, including officers of the Royal Engineers granted permanent commissions, should not have to prove what is officially known as 'personal eligibility' for the allowance; that is to say, they should not have to prove (this being assumed in their favour) that they are, technically, Europeans with a non-Indian domicile, and that they fulfil certain other personal qualifications which are ordinarily required before the allowance can be granted. The rate at which the allowance is granted to these officers is the same as that at which it is granted to all other officers eligible for it, i.e., the fluctuating rate in force at present. Nor were the orders in question new orders: they merely repeated orders which had previously been issued provisionally, and to which the sanction of the Secretary of State had subsequently been obtained.

(6) In a notification which issued in September, 1914, it was announced that the monthly pay and allowances of men joining the Indian Army Reserve of Officers as Second-Lieutenants would be as follows:—

	RS.	A.	P.
Cavalry	456	14	0	per mensem.
Infantry	403	12	0	,,

These were the emoluments drawn at that time by regular British officers of corresponding rank in the Indian Army, and they were made up of pay proper, staff pay, and exchange compensation allowance at the then prevailing rate of 6¼ per cent. on salary, i.e., a privileged addition for remittance purposes of 2 annas in the rupee on half the officer's salary. The actual portion representing exchange compensation allowance was in these cases Rs. 26-14-0 and Rs. 23-12-0, respectively. When it was decided last year to reduce the rate of exchange compensation allowance in consequence of the rise in the exchange value of the rupee, the question of the effect of such reduction on the emoluments of men—who had joined the Indian Army Reserve of Officers in pursuance of the notification of September, 1914—came under the consideration of Government; and it was decided that, in view of the terms of the notification, which did not explain that the rates of pay included an item on account of exchange compensation allowance which might be liable, in certain circumstances, to fluctuations, the rates offered should be regarded as consolidated rates of pay and should not be liable to alteration in consequence of the revised method of calculating exchange compensation allowance adopted as from the 1st December last.

There has consequently been no breach of faith on the part of Government with respect to the pay of these officers; on the contrary, special action has been taken to avoid any appearance of a breach of faith.

(7) The Hon'ble Member's question has, however, drawn the attention of the Government of India to the fact that in Army Order No 206 of 1917, which gave the rates of pay admissible, on appointment to the Indian Army, to officers holding commissions in the Special Reserve, the New Armies or the Territorial Force, and to officers appointed from outside India to the Indian Army Reserve of Officers, it was stated that these officers would draw the Indian Army pay and staff pay of their rank, and in detailing these rates it was mentioned that in addition exchange compensation allowance of 6¼ per cent. on pay and staff pay is given. This Army Order was issued by the War Office and the Government of India were not consulted as to its wording. The rate of exchange compensation allowance mentioned was the rate at that time in force, and (although this cannot have been the intention) the Army Order might be construed as implying that this rate was an invariable rate Steps are now being taken to amend the terms of the Army Order, so as to make it clear that officers who hereafter join the Indian Army or Indian Army Reserve of Officers under the terms thereof will, in the matter of exchange compensation allowance, be placed on the same footing as other officers of the Indian Army. The Government of India propose, however, to continue exchange compensation allowance at the rate of 6¼ per cent. to officers who have up to date joined the Indian Army or Indian Army Reserve of Officers under the terms of Army Order 206 of 1917 in the bonâ fide belief that they would continue to receive exchange compensation allowance at this rate."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Improvement in the pay and Prospects of Postmen and Postal Clerks.

13. "Is any scheme about to be sanctioned with regard to the improvement of the pay and prospects of postmen and postal clerks generally in all the important post offices of the country? If so, will the scheme be placed on the table?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"A scheme for the temporary improvement of the pay of all post and telegraph employés is now under the consideration of the Secretary of State.

For the permanent improvement of the pay of particular portions of the postal staff considerable funds are annually placed at the disposal of the Director-General, and I should mention, for the Hon'ble Member's information that, in the four years ending with 1917-18, the pay of 5,203 clerks, 9,629 postmen, and 11,876 menials was improved at a total cost of about nine lakhs of rupees."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Increase in the Production of Sugar.

14. "With reference to the statement made in this Council (September 12, 1917) that the energies of the Agricultural Department are being steadily devoted to an increase in sugar production, will Government be pleased to state—

(a) the results of the endeavours of that Department in increasing sugar production in the various Provinces;

(b) the steps, if any, that have actually been taken in Bengal and elsewhere to increase the production of date sugar;

(c) whether there has been any appreciable increase in the outturn of date sugar in India since the outbreak of the war; and

(d) the results of experiments with the best varieties of cane?"

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir Claude Hill; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur; Sir Robert Gillan; Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"(a) and (d) The proceedings of the Board of Agriculture in India which was held at Poona in December last will shortly be published and will give the Hon'ble Member the information asked for in parts (a) and (d) of his question.

As to (b) it is understood that the Government of Bengal are taking steps for the demonstration of improved methods of refining date-palm sugar on lines worked out by Mr. Annett, when Agricultural Chemist in Bengal. The Government of India have no information regarding other parts of India.

As to (c) a statement * is laid on the table showing the estimated outturn of date-palm sugar in Bengal in the five years ending 1917-18, from which it will be seen that there has been an increase of 4 per cent. in that Presidency since the outbreak of the war. So far as the Government of India are aware, no appreciable quantity of sugar is produced from this source in other provinces, but no statistics are available."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Fostering of local industries by Railways.

15. "(a) In March, 1916, did Sir William Clark in a speech in this Council remark that the Railway Board had, by a circular letter, impressed upon the different railway administrations the desirability of fostering local industries by the quotation of favourable rates for the carriage of raw materials required for manufacture and of the finished product?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether any action has been taken by the railway administrations on this recommendation of the Railway Board?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"I had better quote the words used by Sir William Clark in the speech to which the Hon'ble Member refers. 'The Railway Board' he said 'have impressed upon the different railway administrations the desirability of watching for opportunities for fostering local industries by the quotation of favourable rates for the carriage of raw materials required in manufacture and of the finished product.' They circularised all the administrations on this subject early in 1915. 'At the same time' he added 'they addressed a Communiqué to the commercial public calling attention to their letter to the railway administrations and impressing on the public the importance of giving the fullest particulars when asking for a concession.'

As regards the second part of the question, the Railway Board in February, 1916, asked the railways what they had been able to do since the issue of the circular in pursuance of the policy to which it drew attention; a summary† of the information received in reply is laid on the table. I also lay on the table a copy of two statements† prepared in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Sir D. E. Wacha in this Council last September showing the concessions in rates granted from 1st January, 1913, to 30th June, 1917. The dates on which the concessions in rates were given are not in all cases stated, and I am not therefore in a position to give a precise answer to the Hon'ble Member's question, but if the information is not sufficient for his purpose, I shall be glad to ascertain exactly how much has been done since the issue of the circular in May, 1915, till the present time."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea asked :—

Case of Messrs. Golam Rasul and Mirza Badruddin.

16. "(a) Has the attention of Government been called to the case of Mr. Golam Rasul and Mr. Mirza Badruddin, two Barristers, who though they had obtained proper passports from the Punjab Government were prohibited from landing at Mombassa on the ground that they were prohibited immigrants?

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Deputations to the Secretary of State.

21. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing Province by Province—

(i) the Associations by whom applications were made for their deputations to wait upon the Viceroy and the Secretary of State, in connection with the Reform Scheme;

(ii) the date on which each application was received by the Local Government;

(iii) whether the application was admitted or rejected; and

(iv) where rejected, the reasons for such rejection?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"A statement* is laid on the table showing (a) the associations which were permitted to present addresses, and (b) the associations whose applications for permission to present addresses were refused. The Government of India are not in possession of information regarding the dates on which the various applications were received. On the ground of time alone a process of selection was necessary. This process was carried out on the recommendation of the various Local Governments, which possessed the necessary knowledge, and the Government of India do not doubt that they made their recommendations with careful regard to the interests involved."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Scale of salaries of Indian and European Station Masters in Mesopotamia.

22. "(a) Is it a fact that there is a difference in the scale of salaries of Indian and European station masters who are working in Mesopotamia as hereunder :—

	1st grade.	2nd grade.	3rd grade.	4th grade.
Indians . .	135	99	99	99
Europeans . .	400	376	348	324

(b) If so, will Government arrange to remove this inequality of treatment?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied —

"The pay of Indian station masters serving with the Military Railway Administration in Mesopotamia is now Rs. 150; they were recruited for employment at small stations and were taken from the lower grades in India for this purpose. The European station masters who are paid Rs. 348 to Rs. 400 were recruited for employment at large and important stations. As the duties are not comparable there is no inequality of treatment."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Hardships felt by third class passengers brought to notice by Mr. Gandhi.

23. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter of Mr. M. K. Gandhi, dated the 25th September, 1917, which appeared in the Press containing the description of the railway journey which he made in September last from Bombay to Madras, and particularly to the following complaints therein :—

"(i) There were during the night as many as 35 passengers in the carriage during the greater part of it.

(ii) On the way passengers got for tea tannin-water with filthy sugar and a whitish looking liquid miscalled milk which gave this water a muddy appearance.

(iii) Not during the whole of the journey was the compartment once swept or cleaned.

(iv) Refreshments sold to the passengers were dirty looking, handled by dirtier hands, coming out of filthy receptacles and weighed in equally unattractive scales. They were previously swamped by millions of flies.

* Vide Appendix B.

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Sir Robert Gillan.]

(v) The closet was also not cleaned during the journey, and there was no water in the water tank".

(b) Are Government aware that these are long-standing grievances which have remained unredressed, and that they cause considerable inconvenience to third class passengers? Will Government be pleased to direct that immediate action be taken to remove them at an early date?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"The attention of Government was drawn by Mr. Gandhi himself to the letter to which the Hon'ble Member refers. The journey which Mr. Gandhi describes was made over the Great Indian Peninsula and Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways and copies* of reports by these railways covering the points raised in the Hon'ble Member's question are laid on the table. To show the position on railways generally I also lay on the table copies of the letter which was sent by the Railway Board to Mr. Gandhi, and of a question put by the Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea at a meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council on the 9th March, 1916, and the reply given to that question. These papers will show that the importance of the subject is fully recognised by the Railway Board and Railway Administrations, and it continues to receive, as it has received in the past, their constant attention.

As the Hon'ble Member knows, it has been necessary owing to war requirements to discontinue many passenger trains, and the troubles of over-crowding of which he complains are greatly accentuated by this fact. I would appeal to all Hon'ble Members to help the Railway Administration in this time of stress by making known in their constituencies that unnecessary travel should, so far as possible, be avoided."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

24. "(a) Do Government propose to direct the publication of a quarterly statement* for every Province giving the following information in connection with persons interned under the Defence of India Act :—

1. Name.
2. Profession and Status.
3. Place of original residence.
4. Place of internment.
5. Allowance granted to—
   (i) interned, and
   (ii) dependants.

(b) Is it a fact that persons before internment are kept in jail in solitary confinement for one month? If so, under what circumstances?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state—

(i) whether any special arrangements are made for supply of food and clothing, etc., to detenus?

(ii) whether they are allowed to mix with the residents of the places where they are interned and to remove their immediate wants by temporary borrowings from the people?

(iii) whether it is ascertained beforehand if the ordinary daily requirements of the particular persons interned are available in the place of internment?

(iv) what principles are observed in fixing maintenance allowances for the detenus and their dependants in the various Provinces? and

(v) whether any special arrangements are made for the medical aid of the detenus in places where expert medical help is not available?"

* Vide Appendix C.

[Sir William Vincent; Sir Claude Hill; Sir Hamilton Grant.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" The Government of India are in communication with the Local Governments concerned on the subject of the Hon'ble Member's questions, and will, as early as feasible, lay a reply on the table."

THE CINEMATOGRAPH BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of cinematographs."

THE INDIAN FOREST (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—" Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Forest Act, 1878, be taken into consideration. In putting this motion before the Council, I do not think I need detain the Council at all. I explained in detail the measures which were embodied in the Bill when I introduced it on the 6th February last, and I then explained that it represented the deficiencies which had been found to exist in the Indian Forest Act during the past seven years. As no amendments or suggestions have been received since that date, I think I am entitled to assume that the Bill meets with the general approval of the Council."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—" Sir, I beg to move that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE ADEN (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant :—" I beg to move, Sir, for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law to provide for the administration of criminal justice at Aden. The Act which it is proposed to amend was passed in 1864, and it is scarcely necessary to point out that a good many changes have occurred in the conditions at Aden in the meantime. A judicial machinery which was suitable in 1864 obviously may require some overhauling in 1918, and the necessity for relieving the Resident, who is also the General Officer Commanding the troops at Aden, of the burden of judicial work imposed on him by the Act of 1864 has long been realised, and has been further emphasised since the outbreak of the war. It is obviously anomalous that an officer with such important and grave pre-occupations should be embarrassed by judicial work of any kind. This has been realised, by His Majesty's Government, who have already arranged by executive action to relieve the Resident at Aden of certain cases from Abyssinia for the disposal of which he is ordinarily responsible. Executive measures are not feasible in regard to judicial work of Aden itself, and the Council is accordingly asked to approve a Bill, the sole object of which is to give the Bombay Government the power to appoint another official for the discharge of the Resident's judicial functions without in any way altering or extending those functions. There is nothing whatever contentious in the measure, and I trust it will meet with unanimous support."

The motion was put and agreed to.

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir Hamilton Grant; Mr. K. K. Chanda.]

The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant:—" Sir, I beg to introduce the Bill, and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION RE EXTENSION OF CALCUTTA HIGH COURT JURISDICTION TO PARTS OF ASSAM.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—" Sir, I beg to move the Resolution which stands in my name and which runs as follows:— 11-37 A.M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court be extended, or rather re-extended, to the British portion of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills in the Province of Assam.'

" Sir, the matter at first sight appears to be one of local interest, and I think I ought to explain why I have brought it into this Council. My answer is two-fold. In the first place, it is a sort of appeal against the action of the Local Government; and, in the second place, my submission is that there is an important principle involved in it, and therefore it is a matter of general importance. The terms of the Resolution will have shown to the Council that the Calcutta High Court had at one time jurisdiction over this district. The case has been described as one of evolution of disabilities out of a higher status and privileges enjoyed, and how this came about and what the present arrangements are, I shall now briefly state.

" Sir, the Khasia and Jaintia Hills is one of the districts forming the Province of Assam. It is one of the districts in the Province which came earliest under British administration, excepting the Bengal district of Sylhet. The head-quarters town of the district is Shillong, the capital of the Province and the permanent seat of the Local Government, not a mere summer residence only as in the case of most hill stations, but the permanent seat and the place of the sittings of the Legislative Council of the Province. The district is rich in minerals; and, immediately after it came under British administration, rival trading British companies were formed to exploit and work the coal mines and limestone quarries. As usually happens in such cases there were serious disputes and litigation between them; and, as the proprietor of one of them was the son-in-law of the then head of the district, grave charges of misuse of power and abuses of judicial processes were made against him. The matter was formally brought to the notice of the Governor General, who was then the Governor of Bengal, no Lieutenant-Governor having then been appointed; and Mr. Mills, a Judge of the Sudder Court, was deputed to inquire and report. As a result of his inquiry, the civil and criminal administration of the district was brought under the control of the District and Sessions Judge of Sylhet, which bounds this district on the south, and ordinary regular laws were introduced into the district. This state of things continued for 35 years.

" In 1869, an Act called the Garo Hills Act, being Act XXII of 1869, was passed which removed another hill district called the Garo hills from the jurisdiction of the Civil and Criminal Courts and revenue offices under the Bengal Regulations. In 1871, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, who had been appointed meanwhile, by virtue of an enabling clause in the Act, extended it to the Khasia and Jaintia Hills. In accordance with the Act rules were framed, and the Commissioner of Assam was appointed to be the High Court for the Khasia and Jaintia Hills. At that time the Council will remember the Chief Commissionership of Assam had not been formed, and the Assam Districts, including the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, were under the Commissioner of Assam who was appointed to be the High Court; Sylhet being then a part of the Dacca Division. The legality of this proceeding was questioned in a murder case that came before the High Court. Assam had then become a separate Administration. Two persons

named Burah and Book were convicted of murder and sentenced to death in 1876 by the Deputy Commissioner; the sentence was commuted to one of transportation for life by the Chief Commissioner. The prisoners sent an appeal from the jail, the Criminal Division Bench entertained doubts about their jurisdiction to hear the appeal, and the question was referred to a Full Bench of seven judges. The majority of the Court held that the action of the Government was ultra vires in removing the district from the jurisdiction of the High Court, but a minority of three judges, including the then Chief Justice, Sir R. Garth, held otherwise. The judgment of the majority was of course the judgment of the Court, and it decided that the High Court had jurisdiction. The Government of India appealed to the Privy Council, and their Lordships of the Judicial Committee upset the decision of the Full Bench and held that the Government had power to take away the jurisdiction of the High Court in the manner it did. The case is reported in I. L. R. 3 Cal. page 63. Thus the jurisdiction of the High Court was taken away. What is done now? In 1880, a Regulation being Regulation II of 1880 called the Frontier Tracts Regulation was passed, the preamble of which ran as follows :—'Whereas it is expedient for the removal of certain Frontier Tracts in Assam inhabited or frequented by barbarous or semi-civilised tribes from the operation of enactments in force therein' etc. This did not as it could not apply to the Khasia and Jaintia Hills which was not a frontier district as a glance at the map will show nor was it inhabited by barbarous tribes, but it was extended to the district by a later Regulation being Regulation No. III of 1884. In accordance with this Regulation rules for the administration of justice in the district have been framed, and they supply the place of ordinary laws. They are 40 in number and occupy two pages in print; they take the place of the Civil Procedure Code, the Criminal Procedure Code, the Evidence Act, the Police Act, the Oaths Act, and in fact all of what is called the Adjective Law. The position is thus summarised in the 'Imperial Gazetteer of India' Volume for Eastern Bengal and Assam, page 492, 'the High Court at Calcutta has no jurisdiction except over European British subjects, the Codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure are not in force, and the Deputy Commissioner exercises powers of life and death subject to confirmation by the Local Government.' I will call attention to two or three salient provisions of the rules. A man cannot be defended by a lawyer though he may be tried for murder; witnesses are not required to be on oath; there is no right of appeal if the sentence is not more than three years' imprisonment and the appeal when it lies is to the Local Government; written orders are not necessary, oral ones being sufficient. It is indeed laid down in the rules that the spirit of the Criminal Procedure Code shall be followed. I will give one or two instances to show how this is done. In 1916, a man was convicted of an attempt at murder and was sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment; he appealed to the Chief Commissioner; he was allowed to be represented by a lawyer in the appeal, and the Local Government also imported a pleader from Gauhati to support the conviction. The party applied for copies of depositions, the application was not received but was actually thrown away. The appeal had to be argued from the judgment also. The legality and propriety of the decision will be apparent when I tell the Council that comments on the judgment alone sufficed to get it reversed. Sir S. P. Sinha was engaged in a case in Shillong and he came, but the next morning the Deputy Commissioner sent him a polite request through the Bench clerk that he need not take the trouble to come to Court as he would not be allowed to appear in the case. I may mention that the rules apply to all Indian subjects who are resident in the district, no matter who they may be. Is it any wonder that the people have been trying to again and again come under the jurisdiction of the High Court? Memorial after memorial has been submitted to the Local Government and the Government of India, but to no effect. In 1915, a Resolution was moved in the local Council to bring the British portion of the town of Shillong under the High Court. It was not for the whole district, a portion of the district is under the Khasi Chief. The Resolution was supported by the Hon'ble Mr. F. R. Phukan, Barrister-at-Law of Gauhati, who quoted instances within his own experience wherein the Deputy Commissioner

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. K. K. Chanda.]

refused to allow parties to be represented by lawyers The whole of the Indian members, both elected and nominated, supported the Resolution, but as usually happens in local Councils which are believed to have an unofficial majority, the non-official Europeans voted with the Government and the Resolution was lost by two votes. But, although the Resolution was lost, the Chief Commissioner in closing the debate observed 'we certainly do not admit that Shillong is semi-civilised—and we have no objection as regards the introduction of the ordinary procedure in the portion of the town which is part of British India' But that has not been done. What has been done is, that the Criminal Procedure Code has now been introduced in the Municipality of Shillong which is British territory and the cantonment of Shillong which is not. But by another order the Local Government has constituted the Chief Commissioner the High Court, and the Commissioner the Sessions Judge. The matter now stands thus. As regards the town of Shillong only the Criminal Procedure Code is now in force, and a party has the right of being defended by a lawyer and can appeal against sentences though they may be of three years and under, but the appellate authority is the Chief Commissioner As regards the district itself, the local rules take the place of laws. Even now in Shillong we hear of a man being called upon to quit the district on 24 hours' notice ; of a man being prevented from entering the district, I may tell the Council that all the gates of Shillong are barricaded and guarded by the Criminal Investigation Department to prevent the ingress of undesirables We hear of a man being punished because his dog is not kept confined in his bed chamber at night. As regards civil matters we find big will cases and other civil cases involving thousands of rupees disposed of under a very novel procedure, which is that a subordinate officer is required to inquire into and report and take evidence, not on commission, but as a police officer makes an inquiry and the Deputy Commissioner passes judgment on his report. I will give a sample of what is done in land acquisition cases. In 1907 land extension in area was to be taken up for a road several miles in length, no notice was given to the public, no notification in the Gazette inviting statement of claims—in fact, nothing was done. Three years passed and the parties got nothing, and an application was then made to the Deputy Commissioner. No order; he then made another application. The applicant was then told to submit a stamped petition under the Stamp Act The Council should be told that the district is considered civilised enough to have the Stamp Act, the Court Fees Act, and the Income-tax Act in operation, but not the Acts confirming rights and privileges. He was required by the Deputy Commissioner to submit a rough sketch of the land. He did that. And then what were the orders passed ? The orders were passed on the 9th September, 1913, by the Deputy Commissioner, and the claim was rejected on two grounds : first, that the claim was time-barred ; secondly, that the road in question made his land more accessible. A very sound proposition, and I wonder that the Deputy Commissioner stopped here and did not call upon the petitioner to contribute towards the cost of the road as it made his lands more accessible To proceed, however, he appealed to the Commissioner. Now, what did the Commissioner do ? He passed an order in February, 1914, to the effect that the Land Acquisition Act is not in force in the district, and, even if it was, no compensation would be paid, as no damage was done to the land. Then the applicant went to the Chief Commissioner. What was the decision there ? The decision was to the effect that the Chief Commissioner regretted that after examining the cases he did not see his way to interfere with the decision of his predecessor, but the Chief Commissioner personally thought that it would have been better before cutting the road to have consulted those who were connected with the land, and he was [illegible] orders that this should be done in future. Then he applied to the Chief Commissioner for a review of the order, as he had no means of knowing that any orders had been passed by his predecessor and also applied to have his case argued by a lawyer. The order passed was in these terms: 'Apart from the fact that the petitioner's application would be in any circumstances long out of time it does not appear that the petitioner is entitled to intervene in the case at all.' Then an appeal was filed for being submitted to the Government of India; but it was withheld, and so this matter ended there.

"Now, Sir, I have told the Council just now that the Commissioner of the Division dismissed the appeal on the ground that the Land Acquisition Act was not in force in the district. But it appears the Legal Remembrancer of the Province advised the Government that, that Act was in force, and therefore, while the Commissioner dismissed the appeal on the ground that the Land Acquisition Act was not in force, the Local Government issued a notification in the local Gazette under the Land Acquisition Act for acquisition of other lands in the district. But there the attempt at compliance with the provisions of the Act ended so far as these cases were concerned. The only thing the authorities did was to publish a notification, and no compensation was awarded, and there was no District Judge to whom the party could appeal.

"I think, Sir, I have given enough sample of how justice is administered in the district, civil and criminal.

"Sir, why is this so? Can there be any possible justification for this state of things? The Council is probably under the impression that the district is probably semi-barbarous, full of ignorant and illiterate savages. But from the very nature of some of the cases I have mentioned, big will cases, land acquisition cases, cases in which eminent Counsel like Sir S. P. Sinha are briefed, you can hardly suppose that it is barbarous people exactly of whom I am speaking. I will now read to the Council a portion from the judgment of the Full Bench I referred to. Sir William Markby remarked as follows:—

'The policy of the Government has always been to keep the Garo Hills out of the jurisdiction of the regular courts and these courts have never established jurisdiction in that district. On the other hand, the policy as to the Cossyah and Jynteeah Hills was to bring them under the ordinary jurisdiction of the courts; and this jurisdiction was fully established and in action without inconvenience from 1835 to 1871. The Garos are said to be wild and barbarous tribes, whom still the Government in 1869 were still endeavouring to reclaim to the habits of civilized life. No such assertion, as far as I am aware, could be made with regard to the inhabitants of the Cossyah and Jynteeah Hills. The district is a peaceable one, the inhabitants of it carry on peaceful pursuits......There had been a decision of this Court which in effect decided that the Government had been wrong in treating certain portions of the Garo Hills as not within the jurisdiction of the ordinary courts of justice. It was to counteract the result of this decision that the Act of 1869 was passed. It was, in fact, passed to legalise the status quo. But the same Act when introduced into the Cossyah and Jynteeah Hills instead of continuing a state of things already in existence entirely revolutionised the long-established administration of the district. It threw back the people who had been living for thirty-five years under a regular and settled administration according to established laws into a condition which everyone would acknowledge to be only suitable to people just emerging from barbarism, that is to say, a condition in which all powers of Government were centred in the hands of a single individual."

That was in 1877. Thirty years later, in 1907, the 'Imperial Gazetteer' says:—

'Thanks to the efforts of the Presbyterian Welsh Mission education in the Khasia and Jaintia Hills District has made considerable progress, and in 1901 the proportion of literate persons (5·7 per cent.) was higher than in any other district of Assam. The district owes its position to the spread of female education, 3·4 per cent. of the women being able to read and write as compared with ·4 per cent. in Assam as a whole.

This was according to the Census of 1901. What is the evidence of the Census of 1911? If you will refer to the Census Report, Volume I, page 86 for the Province of Assam, you will find it stated—

'The comparatively high standard of literacy in the hills is due mainly to the progress of education amongst the Khasias, of whom such a large proportion have been converted to Christianity.'

"As a matter of fact, Sir, nearly half the total number of Christians in the whole Province come from the Khasia Hills. As regards English education the Report says—

'The high proportion as regards English education is here again due to the advanced position of the Khasia Hills which stands first in the whole Province in the knowledge of English possessed by either sex.'

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. K. K. Chanda ; Sir William Vincent.]

"Now this is as regards the whole district. Now what is the condition of Shillong? Who are the people who are residents thereof? It is a sanitarium, next in importance, if anything, to Darjeeling. It has now a Government Pasteur Institute, which will serve not only the Province, but the whole of the Bengal Presidency and perhaps Bihar also, as it is nearer than Kasauli, and as a matter of fact educated Indians from outside are flocking to it. Now I will quote to the Council the description of the Indian communities of Shillong which was given to the Assam Council when the Resolution I have spoken of was moved and the accuracy of which was not challenged. This is what was said—

'Do the residents of this town—I mean the Indian communities who are governed by the local rules and have been deprived of the benefits of the laws which the Indians enjoy in the rest of the country—do the society at all approach the people for whom these rules have been framed in their mental and moral equipment—'barbarians or semi-civilised tribes?' I need not pause for a reply. Who are the Indians who occupy this town? First take the Khasi community. I think there can be no manner of doubt that as a community the Khasis of Shillong can very well compare with any Indian community of the same status in any town, in general progress and mode of life. Walk round Maukhar where they live and you will be at once struck with the nice, neat and healthy habitations and their picturesque residences, which are undoubtedly much better than the squalid and ill-ventilated, unhealthy bashas occupied by ill-paid clerks in the towns. Then speaking of the Bengali community in Shillong, we look upon it as the model to which other Bengali communities in the Province ought to come up to. In education, in culture, in refinement of ideas and mode of life, they are far ahead of us in other towns Are these people to be deprived of the humane and beneficent laws we live under outside Shillong? Should they be governed by laws and procedure expressly and admittedly enacted and provided for 'barbarians and semi-civilised tribes?'

This is the end of my tale. This is my excuse for having brought up this matter to the Council. It is not purely a local matter but involves important questions affecting the life and liberty of all Indians who may go and live there. Sir, as regards the district, I placed before the Council the Census Report which shows it is the most advanced of the hill tracts as regards education. Is this district then fit to be governed by these rules which have been enacted? I appeal to the Council for justice to this unfortunate district, and I trust that I have not appealed in vain."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I cannot but think that the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda has been rather ill-advised in bringing this Resolution before this Council. It relates to a matter of provincial, indeed I might almost say of parochial, interest. It is also a matter for the correct decision of which detailed information and knowledge of local conditions is eminently essential, and I think also that the Members of this Council will themselves feel that they have not sufficient information before them to deal with it satisfactorily. There are, of course, many matters which are of provincial interest on which we all have a certain amount of knowledge, questions relating to the large cities or other parts of India of which we have from newspapers, books and so on, much information; but I doubt whether many of us have sufficient detailed knowledge of this district—I know that I myself have not—to be able to say whether the recommendation of the Hon'ble Member should be accepted. It is true that we have acquired from the Hon'ble Member a considerable amount of information about Assam during this Session. At the last meeting we had a pretty full discourse on Sylhet; to-day we have a further discussion on the Khasia and Jaintia hills, and possibly by the end of the Session we shall have a very accurate conception of the Hon'ble Member's views on each individual district in the Province of Assam. But I do submit that it would be unwise for this Council to adopt a Resolution of this kind on an ex parte statement of the case and without the facts being examined. 12-3 P.M.

"Turning to the Resolution itself, I ask the Council to note that when the Hon'ble Member introduced it into the Assam Council, he confined himself to proposing that the town of Shillong should be brought under Courts constituted under the Code of Criminal Procedure and the Bengal and Assam Civil Courts. Then he expressly disclaimed any intention of desiring to propose any change in the administration of justice in the rest of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills district, and I think some explanation might have been given for the more comprehensive recommendation made to this Council. The Resolution as to Shillong was rejected in the local Council. The Hon'ble Member informs us that all the Indian Members voted for it. All I can say is that, though there are fifteen non-official Members in the Council, eight only were found to support the limited proposal which he then made, and I do think that in these circumstances it is scarcely fair to come to this Council as a sort of Court of appeal over the local Council. In my judgment this is not a purpose for which this Council should ordinarily be employed.

"Reverting for a moment to the Resolution in the Assam Council, I find that Sir Archdale Earle, though he was unable to concede what the Hon'ble Member desired in toto, proceeded at once to examine the question which had been agitated, namely, the administration of justice in the town of Shillong. He made certain recommendations to the Government of India and those recommendations have been approved and given effect to. It was then pointed out to the Hon'ble Member that the greater part of the town of Shillong lies outside British territory, so that it would be difficult to extend the jurisdiction of the High Court to the whole town. On the other hand, I think the Council will see that considerable inconvenience must arise from having different Courts of justice in different parts of the town. To avoid these difficulties, and to meet the wishes of the Hon'ble Member as far as might be, Sir Archdale Earle, an officer who is, as every one knows, always anxious to meet the wishes of the educated classes, decided to extend the Code of Criminal Procedure to the town of Shillong and provided, what had not existed before, both a Court of Appeal and a Court of Session. He was, however, unable to accept the proposal as to the jurisdiction of the High Court.

"The only other question of importance then pressed was the question of the appearance of pleaders. From what the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda said, the Council might have been led to suppose that pleaders or advocates were never allowed to appear in the Courts of this district. I can only rely on official statements. I notice that Mr. Allen, when he spoke on behalf of the Local Government on the Resolution of Mr. Chanda, stated that no difficulties were thrown in the way of litigants obtaining such legal advice as was locally available. However, as there was a demand for statutory rights in this matter, the question was placed beyond doubt by a provision in the rules for the administration of justice. These changes not only provided for the appearance of pleaders in all suits, but they assimilated the criminal procedure in Shillong to that which prevails in other hill districts of the Province, and enabled the administration of justice in the two parts of the town to be identical. I may say, Sir, that when I ascertained what had happened in Assam and read the present Resolution, I began to suspect that what the Hon'ble Member really intended was to secure a change in the administration of justice in Shillong by indirect means, and that it is for that reason he has asked this Council to consider a proposal which has never been put before the local Council, namely, to extend the jurisdiction of the High Court to the whole of the Khasia and Jaintia district. He has referred to repeated memorials which have been received by the Government of India. I have caused the records to be searched, and I have only found one such petition that related to the districts of Shillong and Assam by a gentleman who I am informed is not a British subject at all.

"Sir, when notice of this Resolution was received, the Chief Commissioner of Assam was in Delhi, and advantage was taken of this fact to obtain his views in regard to it. He expressed the opinion that it would be most unwise to accept this Resolution until it had been examined locally and submitted to the Provincial Council. He pointed out incidentally that the acceptance of this Resolution might involve changes in the administration of justice not only in this district, but in the Garo Hills, the Naga Hills, the Lushai Hill Tracts and other places of a similar character. I understand also that it is his view that these districts will, for many years, prosper more under the rules for the administration of civil and criminal justice which are in force there than they would under any other system.

"Further, we have before us no evidence that the people of the district outside Shillong desire any change in the present procedure. Again, the practical difficulty arising out of the fact that the major part of the district is not in British territory.........."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"More than half is British territory."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I bow to the Hon'ble Member's superior knowledge, but I am informed, and as far as I can verify my facts, this information is correct, that the greater part of the population at any rate resides outside British territory.........."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"Sir, I base my information on the judgment of Sir William Markby in a Full Bench case that more than half the district is British territory."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I am quoting from the statistics of the Census. Anyhow, whether the British portion of the district is half, or a little more or less, there are obvious inconveniences in a system under which a moiety of the district has one system for the administration of justice, and the other half is under a different system, and I think the Council will realise that a change which would effect this is not a matter lightly to be undertaken.

"The Hon'ble Member has taken us back to 1835 when he says that the Courts in this district were placed under the High Court. It is true that in that year the functionaries who were appointed to the political charge of the Khasia Hills were placed under the superintendence of the Sudder Diwani Adalat and the Sudder Nizamat Adalat, and it is rather curious to observe that the Act which affected this change directed that the control and superintendence was only to be exercised in conformity with any instructions issued from the Government. The validity of this Act was, however, seriously questioned in 1867, and, as I have said, a great part of the district being outside British India there would appear some reason for the doubt. In 1869, an Act was passed to remove the Garo Hills from the jurisdiction of the High Court because it had been found that a special system of justice was necessary for these hills, and it was said that the retention of the High Court was not only potentially productive of political danger, but that it undoubtedly clashed with the working of the special system to which I have referred. The Select Committee reported that the policy of the Act appeared to them equally applicable to the Khasia and Jaintia Hills. It was said—I really do not know whether the statement was accurate—that the inhabitants of these hills were scarcely more civilised than the Garos, and that the administration of justice was equally crude. At present the position is that criminal and civil justice in these districts is administered under simple rules under section 6 of the Scheduled Districts Act. The Hon'ble Member has attacked the system of legislation and administration generally. He alleges that it is unsuited to the conditions of Shillong, and he seeks to get the law in force changed. Well, I am sure that if he can make out a case to the Local Administration on that point, he will secure careful consideration from the Chief Commissioner. But that is not the Resolution which is before the Council. The Council are not asked to change the law or the system of law in Shillong. It is asked to give the High Court jurisdiction throughout the district, and I doubt if the Hon'ble Member has made out a case for any such change As far as I can understand, the population of this district is mainly composed of primitive hill tribes; we know by experience that such tribes appreciate speedy and inexpensive justice, and I should doubt whether the people of the district would obtain any benefit by being allowed the privilege of appealing to the High Court at a distant centre. It is in my opinion probable that justice would be more efficiently administered by officers on the spot with a knowledge of local traditions. And when I came to examine the procedure followed in the district, I confess I myself felt very grave doubts as to how the High Court or any other Court except a local Court could administer justice satisfactorily. I want to quote a portion of the rules relating to civil justice. It says 'Sardars, Dollois and other duly recognised village authorities are authorised to exercise jurisdiction in civil cases without any limit provided they do not decide cases in which their fathers and mothers, their sisters and brothers, etc, etc., are interested.' The law goes on to provide that 'all the proceedings will be viva voce, that the Sardar or dolloi is not to be called upon to make any record or register of the decision and, after hearing both sides, he is to pronounce his decision forthwith. But if at the trial any person can be found who knows how to write, some brief note of the proceedings is to be made.' Now the point that I wish to make is, that when legal proceedings are conducted in this manner, it would be extremely difficult for the High Court to exercise jurisdiction. In fact, Sir, the acceptance of this Resolution would in reality necessitate a number of changes in the general law which prevails in these wild tracts—changes, the effect of which it is impossible to foresee with the information before us—and I venture to put it to this Council that it would be most unwise for it to accept responsibility for recommending such changes.

"I have pointed out that the main attack of the Hon'ble Member is directed not to the question of the jurisdiction of the High Court in the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, but to the whole system of Criminal and Civil law in that district. We have heard no evidence that there is any demand for the change in the mofussil part of that district, though we have heard a great deal about the town of Shillong which has only 13,000 inhabitants in it. I think I am right in that; I speak here subject to correction.........."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"Yes."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Well, the population of the district is something like a quarter of a million, and it is unreasonable that administrative changes of this character should be proposed in a district merely because the Hon'ble Member alleges they are required in a town which contains only a small fraction of the total population of the district.

"I regret, Sir, that on behalf of Government I must oppose this Resolution. I would add that I have no doubt that, if the Hon'ble Member does approach the Local Administration on the particular questions he has raised, I am sure his representation will receive very careful consideration from Sir Archdale Earle."

12-21 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. A. W. Botham :—"There are only two points I should like to mention in connection with this Resolution.

"The first is, that the Hon'ble mover has not attempted in any way to discuss the subject-matter of this Resolution with the Local Administration. Not only has he not raised the question in the local Council, but, so far as I know, he has not attempted to discuss it at all with the Government.

"The second point is as regards the population of the hills. The population of the district at the last Census was 235,000. The Native States of the Khasi Hills account for 135,000 out of this; so that the population affected by the Resolution is roughly 100,000. Out of this, 5,000 reside in the town of Shillong, and 17,000 live in various isolated areas scattered among the Native States of the Khasia Hills. The remainder, 78,000, comprise the population of the purely British sub-division, which is known as the Jaintia hills; and thus far and away the greater portion of the persons affected by the Resolution is the population of the Jaintia hills. Well, Sir, I doubt whether the Hon'ble mover has ever seen the Jaintia hills. I do not profess to have any special knowledge of the Jaintia hills, but I have marched through them from end to end, and can assure the Council that they are an extremely remote and inaccessible area, and that their population is primitive and unsophisticated to a degree."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"Sir, when I came 12-24 P.M. to this Council to-day, I thought this at least was a Resolution which the Hon'ble the Home Member will accept; and I must say I have been much disappointed. I listened with all the respect due to the Hon'ble Member to the arguments he urged against the acceptance of this Resolution. I would have understood him if he had said that the Government was not prepared to accept the Resolution at present, but that it would consider the matter, consult the Local Government and then come to a decision. But the Hon'ble Member took exception to this question having been brought up here. He went the length of saying that this was not only a Provincial matter, but a matter of parochial importance. Well, to my mind, the question as to whether the life or liberty of any British subject should finally be dealt with by the highest judicial tribunal established in the land, or by an executive officer, however high he may be, is a matter not of Provincial or parochial, but of Imperial importance.

"I will brush aside all other considerations, and will draw attention to this one single fact. The Criminal Procedure Code has been introduced in the area to which my friend Mr. Chanda's Resolution refers; but instead of a regular Sessions Court and a regular High Court being given jurisdiction to deal with those matters which arise out of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is left to the Commissioner and the Chief Commissioner to do so. I should like to know whether this by itself is not a matter which deserves the attention of the Government of India. The Hon'ble the Home Member said that the Local Government was the proper party to go to. I should like to know whether the Local Government could extend the jurisdiction of the High Court to the area in question. I thought it was the Government of India which took away jurisdiction from the High Court, and I think I speak under correction. I think it is the Government of India alone which can again extend the jurisdiction of the High Court to that area. I submit, therefore, Sir, that apart from questions of detail, the principle which is involved in this Resolution can only be dealt with by the Government of India.

"The Hon'ble the Home Member complained that we had only an ex-parte statement of the case before us. It seems to me that the Hon'ble mover of the Resolution made out a very fair primâ facie case for the Government of India to meet. The Hon'ble Mr. Chanda has told us how the jurisdiction of the High Court was taken away from Shillong. I do not wish to weary the Council by repeating what he said; but I think he made out a very clear case showing that there was very little justification for the jurisdiction of the High Court being taken away from the area in question. He referred to a judgment of the High Court of Calcutta delivered in 1877 in support of his contention. I would invite special attention to one passage in that judgment though my Hon'ble friend has already quoted it, because it supports the Resolution very strongly. Said Justice Markby in 1877—

'There was a special cause which led to the legislation of 1869 as regards the Garo Hills. There had been a decision of this Court, which in effect decided that the Government had been wrong in treating certain portions of the Garo Hills as not within the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts of justice. It was to counteract the result of this decision that the Act of 1869 was passed. It was in fact an Act passed to legalise the status quo. But the same Act, when introduced into the Cossyah and Jynteeah Hills, instead of continuing a state of things already in existence, entirely revolutionised the long established administration of the district. It threw back people who had been living for 35 years under a regular and settled administration according to established laws into a condition which every one would acknowledge to be only suitable to a people just emerging from barbarism,—that is to say, a condition in which all the powers of Government were centred in the hands of a single individual.'

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ; Sir William Vincent ; Mr. K. K. Chanda.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

" I submit Sir, that that is the case to be considered. It is not a question of whether the jurisdiction of the civil or regular Courts, including that of the High Court, should be extended for the first time to the people of the district in question. As Justice Markby pointed out long ago and as the Hon'ble Mover of the Resolution has pointed out, for 35 years—i. e., from 1835 to 1871—the people lived under a regular and settled administration. The burden of proving, therefore, that during the many decades that have passed since 1871 the people living under the administration of the British Government in Assam have gone back into barbarism, lay heavily upon my friend, the Hon'ble the Home Member ; and I submit, Sir, he has not said anything to show that they have so gone back. On the other side, the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda has shown they have improved, they have progressed in education and in culture, and they are entitled to claim the right of having questions affecting their lives and liberties tried by regular Civil Courts such as are provided for such trials in other parts of British India. My Hon'ble friend referred to the difficulty of the major portion of the district being non-British territory. Well, that is a difficulty, but such a difficulty has not stood in the way of regular Courts being established in other parts of India where British and non-British territory adjoin each other. The fact that some people living in non-British territory cannot have the advantage of the regular administration of justice which obtains in British territory, hardly constitutes a reason why people living in British territory should be deprived of such advantage. I will not dwell, Sir, upon the sarcastic remarks of the Hon'ble the Home Member regarding the information supplied by the Hon'ble mover of the Resolution about Sylhet, Shillong and the rest. When in the discharge of our duties we, non-official Members, bring some matter before this Council, if the information supplied by us is not sufficient, we look to the Government to supply the deficiency and to help the Council in arriving at a just conclusion. It is not really a right or proper argument to say that the information supplied by us is not sufficient. I expect that when it is not sufficient the deficiency would be supplied in the debate here. We labour under many difficulties ; we have not the advantage of the Secretariats of the Government of India and the Local Government ; we have not the advantage of having the latest Administration Reports of all Provinces and Districts, and if we fail to place as much information before the Council as the Government are able to, I thought that our failure to do so would not be severely criticised as it has been.

" I do not want to take more of the time of the Council. Apart from any question of such changes as may be necessitated by the extension of the jurisdiction of the regular Civil Courts, apart from whatever changes in the Civil laws may be involved by the acceptance of this Resolution, I base my submission to this Council in favour of its acceptance on the ground that the Criminal Procedure Code has been extended to the area in question......."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Is that correct ? I would ask the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda if that is so ?"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" To the town of Shillong."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Not to the district of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, but to the town of Shillong ?"

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—" It has been extended to the town of Shillong. Now the Courts that have been constituted there are not regular Courts, but Courts which are constituted by executive officers. It cannot be a satisfactory administration of justice when executive officers have to deal with these questions affecting the lives and liberties of the people. On that ground alone, I submit that the question whether the jurisdiction of the High Court should not be extended to the town of Shillong at least where the Criminal Procedure Code has been established is a matter which the Government of India ought to take upon itself to decide, because it is the Government of India which can extend or re-extend that jurisdiction. It may ask, and of course it would ask, the Local Governments for their opinion. There are many matters of importance affecting Provinces which the Government of India deal with, and I submit......"

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Pandit M. M. Malaviya; The Vice-President; Mr. S. N. Banerjea; Sir William Vincent.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" May I remind the Hon'ble Member that the Resolution does not deal with the extension to Shillong. It deals with the extension to the Khasia and Jaintia Hills."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—" Thank you, Sir. That is why from the beginning I have confined myself to the portion to which the Criminal Procedure Code has been extended. My remarks apply to that portion only, and I submit that, that part of the Resolution is one which the Government of India ought to accept."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" It is open to the Hon'ble Member to move an amendment to the Resolution. I only pointed out that that is not the question before the Council."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—" I am only suggesting, Sir, that the Government of India should take the matter into their consideration, and neither accept the Resolution as it stands nor reject it. I hope I have made that clear from the beginning, and in that view my remarks are, I submit, relevant and not out of order. What I say is that this part of the Resolution, the portion which recommends that the jurisdiction of the High Court should be re-extended to a part of this area in question, and which I have indicated should be the area where the Criminal Procedure Code has already come into existence, ought to be taken up by the Government of India and considered on its merits. It is a matter of very vital importance to the people whether questions affecting their lives and liberties should be disposed of in the manner in which they are disposed of at present, or whether they should be disposed of by regular Courts presided over by judges who are appointed to administer the law."

12-35 P. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea :—" Sir, I think I must respectfully dissent from the view of the Hon'ble the Home Member that this is a parochial matter. I think it is something more than a parochial question; it is not even a Provincial question; it is larger than a Provincial consideration, for the simple reason that, if the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court has to be extended over any area, be it in Assam or be it in western India, in any part of the Indian continent, this can only be done by the Government of India, and not by the local authorities. Nor can I accept the view that this Resolution of my friend really represents an appeal from an adverse judgment arrived at in connection with a cognate matter which was discussed by the Assam Legislative Council. I think the Hon'ble the Home Member has made it quite clear that the question that was discussed in the Assam Legislative Council affected the area of the town of Shillong, whereas the matter which we are now called upon to consider concerns two districts, or rather one district, Khasia and Jaintia Hills. Therefore, the purview of the question which is now before us is much wider than that which was discussed and decided by the Assam Legislative Council. It is not, therefore, a parochial question, nor is it an appeal from a decision which........"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" May I rise to explain, Sir. I said that the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda said that it came up as a sort of appeal from the local Council. I think he did say so. I did not say it myself."

[Mr. S. N. Banerjea; Sir William Vincent The Vice-President.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea:—"I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon; whoever said it, my observations remain unaffected."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent.—"May I ask that the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda may be corrected and not I?"

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea:—"Very well, I shift the burden on to his shoulders, and I am sure they are broad enough to bear it. I think every Indian, every non-official Indian here, must be in sympathy with the Resolution, because it is a Resolution which seeks to extend to a considerable section of the Indian population, sufficiently advanced according to the statement of my Hon'ble friend, the rights and privileges which the Criminal Procedure Code and the Penal Code confer upon British subjects. We value the personal liberty which is secured to us by the Criminal Procedure Code and the Penal Code, and we are anxious that the personal liberty which we enjoy should be extended to those who may be regarded as crude or primitive, but who day by day are emerging from that condition. I think, therefore, Sir, we all, Indian Members, are in sympathy with the Resolution.

"I understand that there are details to be considered. I think that is for the executive Government to deal with. It is for us to lay down principles, and it is for the executive Government to give effect to them. If we in our collective sense and in our collective wisdom are of opinion that the people of Khasia and Jaintia Hills should enjoy the benefits of the law as laid down in the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code......"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent.—"I rise to a point of order. May I point out that, that is not the question before the Council, Sir?"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President.—"The Resolution before the Council is that the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court be extended to a particular district, not that a particular law should be extended to that district. I am sure the Hon'ble Member will bear that in mind."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea:—"Certainly, Sir. But in discussing the matter this question was raised. I was dealing with the question of details and pointing out that consideration of details did not fall legitimately within the scope of this Council, but that principles were to be laid down by this Council, and the details were to be carried out by the Members of the executive Government. If I may be permitted to say, so with all respect, I am perfectly within my rights in making these observations. However that may be, I pass on to another point which, I think, is of great importance as affecting the issues before us. The point is this, and it has not been contradicted; I fear it cannot be contradicted. Here are these people of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills. They were in enjoyment of the laws to which I have referred; they were under the jurisdiction of the High Court many, many years ago, nearly 50 years back. Their condition has very much improved. I find from the statement which has been made by my Hon'ble friend the mover that education has advanced both among men and women; culture has gone on apace, and altogether they are fast becoming a civilised people. Is it not right, that being the state of things, that they should get back what they have lost, and that laws of an advanced type should be adapted to their condition? I think, Sir, having regard to the fact that these men had a High Court jurisdiction, that, that jurisdiction was taken away not through any fault of their own; that in the meantime they have been making rapid advance in culture, education and literacy, is it not right and proper that this Council should by an affirmative vote declare that they are entitled to get back their lost rights? Let the executive decide how they are to get them back. I venture to submit that, that will be the view of many of us in this Council."

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. M. A. Jinnah; Sir William Vincent; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Sir, I really did not wish to speak on this Resolution, because I confess that I am certainly not conversant with the Province of Assam. In fact, I may say that I am really ignorant of that Province and the administration of justice in that Province. My friends, the Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya and the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea, spoke on the subject and so I thought that I may present my difficulties. It seems to me that the matter is a little more serious. The Resolution says that the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court should be extended to these two districts, Jaintia and Khasia. Now, the grounds that were given by the mover of the Resolution were, firstly, that some decisions were given by those who are responsible for the administration of justice that were flagrantly wrong; secondly, that education has made tremendous progress, and thirdly, he controverted the assertion that the people are primitive and unsophisticated. But it does not end there, the difficulty that I feel and one which I frankly wish to put before the Council is this—if the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court is extended, what will be the position? The Hon'ble the Home Member has pointed out that the laws, regulations, and rules which are enforced in these two districts are of a very different character; it is also clear that neither the Civil nor the Criminal Procedure Code has been made applicable to these parts, that is admitted also by the mover of the Resolution. Now, Sir, the difficulty that I feel is this, if you extend the jurisdiction of the High Court, what will be the position if Courts that are constituted under the laws that prevail at the present moment are Courts that have not to keep a record, have not even got to record evidence................" 12-42 P. M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I was referring to civil cases."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"How will the High Court be in a position to deal with the cases under these circumstances if it had jurisdiction of appeal, revision or superintendence until these Courts have progressed sufficiently, and unless the laws that now exist or prevail in these districts are repealed and laws that prevail in British India are made applicable to these, it will be futile to give any jurisdiction to the High Court. Or, put it the other way, if a case is made out to extend the jurisdiction of the High Court to these two districts, then you must alter or repeal the existing laws, one or the other course must be adopted, and therefore it seems to me that this is a very serious question. I may tell the Council that nobody desires more fervently the extension of the jurisdiction of the High Court to the districts that are not under the High Court than I do, because I believe, and I firmly believe, that the High Court is undoubtedly the bulwark of the rights and liberties of the people; and certainly if there is anything that the British Government can be proud of in this country it is the High Courts. But, Sir, we must not be carried away, we must not be in too great a hurry to extend the jurisdiction of the High Court to districts which are suffering from certain inherent disabilities. Therefore, Sir, I cannot possibly make up my mind, I cannot possibly record my vote in favour of the Resolution in view of the information that has been placed before the Council at present, but, Sir, I hope that the Hon'ble the Home Member will bear in mind this discussion, and I hope that the influence of the discussion will not be lost on Government."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"Sir, my only justification for speaking on this Resolution is that the analogy of Madras may help to a certain extent in the solution of this problem. We have in the districts of Vizagapatam, Ganjam and Godavari hill tracts of about 20,000 square miles with a population of a million odd; we have there civilised men occupying the country along with primitive people; the whole of this tract along with the rest of the Presidency was for some time under the jurisdiction of the Sudder Court, and all the laws were applied to them equally, but, in 1837, 12-47 P. M.

the Government of India passed a law, No. XXIV of 1837, whereby they provided a simple machinery for the administration of justice there. but at the same time care was taken to provide that in criminal matters as well as civil the High Court should be allowed jurisdiction generally. The Civil Procedure Code is not in force in this territory—but only a few sections are extended. I read yesterday the rules prevailing in Jaintia, and I was struck with their similarity to our own. I was about to say that, notwithstanding the fact that the Civil Procedure Code is not in force and all the civil laws pertaining to the administration of justice are not in force. still the High Court has jurisdiction. subject to certain limitations; the High Court is not however trammelled by any restrictions where it exercises jurisdiction, but can freely give justice to the people in these tracts This is so far as civil justice is concerned. With regard to criminal justice, the Government have seen their way to extending the Criminal Procedure Code fully throughout that tract, and I know of many instances where sentences of death were passed, and men were saved from the gallows by the High Court. What struck me as barbarous was that a sentence of three years' imprisonment should be final; this struck me as an instance of the one-man rule with a vengeance, and that it was time for its abolition. It seems to me that there would be no difficulty in restoring the jurisdiction of the High Court. I think that the analogy of Madras might be followed in removing the attendant evils. I think the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda, if correct, does not reflect much credit on the administration, civil or criminal, of Assam in certain parts thereof. and I hope that the state of affairs will be soon put an end to. We in this Council are peculiarly responsible so far at any rate as the administration of justice goes, and in drawing the attention of the Council to the matter, Mr. Chanda has done a great service."

12-52 P. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"Sir, with regard to the technical objection raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah that the introduction of the jurisdiction of the High Court would not mend matters, may I point out that the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court can be introduced or re-introduced in the district only by one way, and that is by declaring that the Frontier Tracts Regulation is not in force. The effect of that would be that the status quo shall be restored. It was by that Regulation that the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes were declared not to be in force in that district. All these regular laws were once in force in the district. Therefore, I think I should make it clear to the Council.................."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah:—"If I may interrupt the Hon'ble Member, I submit that I do not follow him still. Does he desire that all the laws that exist should be now repealed, and that the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes should be introduced into these districts?"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"The Frontier Tracts Regulation declares that the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes are not in force in the district, and in lieu thereof there are certain other rules, and as soon as you withdraw that Regulation from that district all those rules would come into force automatically. I am sorry I did not make it clear when I opened, but that is what would happen. These rules have been made by the Government in accordance with the Regulation in place of those Acts which were repealed by the Frontier Tracts Regulation in that district, and therefore if you withdraw that Regulation, these laws will automatically come into force and there will be no difficulty at all.

"Now with regard to the objection raised by the Hon'ble the Home Member that it was not fair to come to this Council as a sort of Appellate Court over the local Council, I submit I am here to represent the grievances of the people of my Province. The Hon'ble the Home Member might be pleased to call the Resolution as one of parochial interest, but I submit with all respect that I think it my duty to represent the grievances of the people of my Province, and I am only sorry that I am unable to represent them as ably and fully as I ought to. As I have already said, the matter was brought to the notice of the local Council and the Local Government, and their decision was not satisfactory, and that is why I have come up to this Council as an Appellate Court. There have been several memorials from the district to the Local Government and also to the Government of India. Here we are informed by the Hon'ble the Home Member that he finds only one memorial from one gentleman. Of course he acted as the representative of the community. In my file I have copies of two memorials that have been submitted to the Government of India, and I find that memorials had also been submitted to the Local Government, and this statement has not been contradicted by my Hon'ble Colleague on my right who is the official representative. However, we may take it that memorials had been submitted, and as this Council was the only Council which could deal with this question, I thought it better to bring the matter to the notice of the Government of India through this Council.

"Then it was urged that there was not sufficient local information about this district in regard to this matter I submit, Sir, it is not my fault if the Government of India cannot get itself well acquainted with facts of the case. I gave notice of this Resolution in good time, and there was time enough to communicate with the Local Government and get all the facts and figures and the Hon'ble Member representing the Assam Government is on my right to correct any mis-statements I may make. Further, I submit, the facts that I have placed before the Council have all been supported by official records. They are decisions taken from the Full Bench of the High Court and the 'Imperial Gazetteer' and Census report, so no fault can be found with them.

"Then the Hon'ble the Home Member says there will be difficulty because the greater part of the town of Shillong lies outside British territory so that it would be impossible to extend the jurisdiction of the High Court to the whole town But may I point out in passing, Sir, that there are other places in India in similar circumstances, for instance, Bangalore and Mysore? There they do not feel any difficulty at all, because that portion of the Province which is in British territory is under the High Court of Madras, and that portion which is under the jurisdiction of the Native State is under the Chief Court of Mysore. I believe, Sir, there are similar rules in the Sonthal Pargannahs. There, too, the conditions appear to be similar, and although the Sonthals are by no means as advanced as the Khasias, they are far better off in this respect. In the Sonthal Pargannahs the condition is almost identical, but in regard to serious cases, both civil and criminal, they are under the High Court. It is only the petty matters that are disposed of locally in this district............"

The Hon'ble Mr. E. H. C. Walsh:—"I do not know, Sir, if I am in order in making a speech at this stage. The Hon'ble Mr. Chanda has made a reference to the Sonthal Pargannahs for the first time in his speeches, and I have therefore had no opportunity of referring to it before, and I should like to lay the facts before the Council. As he has said that the condition of the Sonthal Pargannahs is the same as that of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, which he has described......." 12-59 P. M.

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"Is the Hon'ble Member right in making a speech?"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The Hon'ble Member is no right, but the point has now been raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh had no opportunity of dealing with it before. I imagine that this Council would desire to hear what the Hon'ble Member has to say about it. I would ask the Hon'ble Member to finish his statement, but he will no doubt understand that he cannot make a speech."

[Mr. E. H. C. Walsh; Mr. K. K. Chanda; The Vice-President; Sir William Vincent.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. E. H. C. Walsh:—"I merely rose to ask whether, in view of the fact that the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda has now made a reference to the Sonthal Pargannahs, which he has not referred to in his opening speech, and which has not been mentioned until now, I have the right at this stage to make a statement with regard to the said reference. I do not wish to make a speech, but only a statement of fact. The Hon'ble Mr. Chanda says that the condition of the people in the Sonthal Pargannahs is the same as that in the Khasia and Jaintia Hills in the Province of Assam, that although the Sonthals are by no means as advanced as the Khasias, they are under the High Court in regard to certain cases, both civil and criminal; that in the Khasia and Jaintia Hills civil cases are tried locally and that the whole proceedings have to be done verbally; that no record of the evidence is maintained, as there is no one who could record it, and that in many cases there is not any one who could even sign to a judgment.

"The condition of the Sonthal Pargannahs is altogether different. The Criminal Procedure Code is in force and appeal lies to the High Court in all Sessions cases. In civil cases, too, in which appeal lies to the High Court in all cases of over Rs. 1,000 in value, although they are tried by Courts constituted under a special Regulation and not under the Code of Civil Procedure, the procedure followed under the Sonthal Civil Rules is analogous to that under the Civil Procedure Code; the cases are tried by regular Courts and a record is kept of the evidence and proceedings in every case in a manner analogous to that made in the Code of Civil Procedure.

"Primary schools exist throughout the district, and the people are not more backward than those of a similar class in other districts.

"It is therefore not correct to say that the conditions in the Sonthal Pargannahs are the same as in the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, and no analogy can be drawn therefrom as to the control of the High Court that should be exercised in regard to the latter."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"With regard to the remarks made by the Hon'ble Member who has spoken last, in the first place, regarding the condition of Khasia and Jaintia Hills, I am afraid he is under a misconception, but I have read out to the Council from the last Census Report it is in effect that the district is the most advanced district in the whole Province as regards education. I do not think Sonthal Pargannahs can possibly come up to this standard............."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I think I should ask the Hon'ble Member not to make comparisons of conditions existing in different parts of India, and we know that comparisons are always odious."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"As I have just told the Council, it will be seen from the last Census Report that it is the most advanced district in the whole Province of Assam.

"Now what is the position in the Sonthal Parganahs? Appeals from the Sessions Judge lie to the High Court. Similarly, in civil matters, the Deputy Commissioner and Sub-divisional Officers as subordinate judges are under the High Court, and what I was submitting was that similarly petty cases decided in the Khasia Hills under local rules would not come up before the High Court if its jurisdiction was extended there. May I mention one incident, namely, that the High Court has jurisdiction over the whole district under the Divorce Act.........."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Let us trust there are not many cases under that Act!"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"Then the Hon'ble the Home Member referred to a passage in the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Allen, when the Resolution was moved in the local Council for facilities for employing Counsel and lawyers, but if he will refer to the latter portion of the same speech he will see that Mr. Allen was confronted by a statement of the Hon'ble Mr. Phukan that there were cases in which such facilities were denied, and Mr. Allen said he understood the difficulty was that Mr. Phukan came from Gauhati and did not come from Shillong.

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. K. K. Chanda; Sir William Vincent; Pandit M. M. Malaviya.]

"Then, Sir, the Hon'ble the Home Member said that if we introduced a change in the administration of justice in this district, that would have to be done in other districts, such as the Garo Hills and Naga Hills, but as stated in the passage of the judgment I read, the condition of the Khasia Hills is quite different from those hills. Those hills are described as wild, whereas this district is a peaceful district and the people follow peaceful pursuits, and I referred to the Census Report to show that the people are the most advanced in education in the Province, as also in English education.

"I do not think, Sir, I need take up the time of the Council by further remarks, but as the Hon'ble Pandit Malaviya said, the fact that the local Government has introduced the Criminal Procedure Code into the head-quarters of the district gives away the case for the Government. If the Code could be introduced there, why should not the High Court have jurisdiction in the natural course of things? Why create an anomalous position? I hope the Council will give the matter their favourable consideration."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I do not propose to detain the Council for any length of time. I wish only to make a few remarks on certain criticisms that have been made. I find that a statement of mine that this Resolution is of Provincial and almost parochial interest has excited some comment. I desire to assure the Council that the statement was not meant in any offensive manner, and I do not think that the Hon'ble Member has taken offence at it. What I intended to convey was, that this was a Resolution which ought, in my opinion, to have been discussed in the Provincial Council, and indeed this was the Hon'ble Member's own view at one time, because on a previous occasion he moved a Resolution of a somewhat similar character in the local Council himself. It has also been alleged, I think, by the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya that I was very severe or unfair; was it in my criticism?"

1-4 P.M.

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—"Severe."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Well, I submit to the Council that this statement was not justified. If, however, I have been unduly severe, I can assure the Council it was far from my intention to be so. There is, however, one point on which I seek information. The Hon'ble Member has told us that this district was at one time under the High Court. Is that the case in regard to the Jaintia Hills, or was it the case in regard to the Khasia Hills only?"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—"Both places."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"The Act says only the Khasia Hills."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—"The Jaintia Hills came under it a few years later."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I will not pursue the point then. As to the appearance of pleaders, Sir, the position is this, that under the present law pleaders and advocates are allowed full liberty to appear. As to the general question, while the system of law which prevails in the district is suitable to local conditions, I am quite prepared to do this much to meet the Hon'ble Member, namely, that I forward a copy of this Resolution, and of this discussion in this Council, to the local Administration for consideration. But

[Sir William Vincent; Mr. K. K. Chanda; The Vice-President.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

I shall, as I stated before, in spite of all that has been said, be compelled to ask the Government to oppose the Resolution as framed if the Hon'ble Member presses it."

The motion was put, and the Council divided as follows:—

RESOLUTION Re RECRUITMENT IN INDIA FOR THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT AND THE RAILWAY ENGINEERING SERVICE.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—" Sir, I beg to move the following Resolution :— 1-17 P. M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Government of India do recommend to the Secretary of State for India that the recruitment for the Public Works Department and the Railway Engineering Service, excepting the proportion of posts reserved for Royal Engineers, be made, within a reasonable period of time, wholly in India '

" I ought to ask the indulgence of the Council for a brief minute while I explain the circumstances in which I bring this Resolution up before the Council. Hon'ble Members may remember that this and the succeeding Resolutions in my name were down on the Agenda for the last Session. They could not be reached for want of time. They therefore re-appear at my request through the courtesy of the Legislative Department. I mention this because many people might think that I am raising questions in which some unpleasant feeling may be involved at an inopportune time. My only explanation is that, inopportune as the time may be, this is just the occasion when this unpleasant duty has got to be done. I understand that the Government of India have this and other cognate subjects under their consideration, and we cannot allow this occasion to pass without, on such important matters, stating to the Council the point of view that we usually take amongst non-official Members.

" Since I gave notice of this Resolution, a Report of very considerable importance has been published. It is the Report of the Public Works Committee which recently sat and concluded its labours. I have glanced through the contents of that Report. Although it touches many points regarding the Public Works Department, I find that it is possible for me to move this Resolution without asking the Council to go very much into that Report, for the only effect of that Report, if it should be carried out to the full, would be to take away from the Buildings and Roads Branch of the Public Works Department a considerable number of officers, perhaps in the course of ten or fifteen years. To that extent the number of officers whom my Resolution affects will be reduced; but, otherwise, it may go on. These services, the Public Works Department and the Railway Engineering Service, deal with 928 officers in all, 648 of them being in the Imperial and the remainder, 280, being in the Provincial Service. This service suffered a retrogression in the past from which, however, it has since recovered.

" As a consequence of the recommendations of the 1886 Public Services Commission, the Service which had once been homogeneous, was split up into a Provincial and an Imperial branch, and distinctions were made between the recruits to the one or the other branch which happily have largely disappeared under the modifications of 1912. Since the last Commission sat brighter days have dawned on the Provincial branch of the Service. The Commission have recommended, in one word, that the distinction between Imperial and Provincial need not be stereotyped in the Service.

" They have further recommended that, instead of 37 per cent., which was the percentage recruited in India, the proportion should hereafter be 50 per cent. How the 37 per cent. has been arrived at I must explain. The number of posts which I just now read to the Council, namely, 280 out of 928, makes a slight fraction over 30 per cent. Besides, under the rules now in force, of the number recruited in England, 10 per cent. have got to be statutory Indians, and, therefore, we get 30 plus 7 per cent. making together 37 per cent. Therefore, when the Commission recommend that the 37 per cent. should be raised to 50 per cent., it is a considerable advance on the existing position which I recognise with satisfaction. Besides this, there is the other improvement to which I alluded, namely, the abolition of the distinction between Imperial and Provincial.

[Mr. Sastri ; Mr. F. C. Rose.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

"Now the Service is so important that a word may be said in this connection as to the extraordinary value of the Engineering Service to any country, and especially a country like India undeveloped industrially and in the matter of manufactures. Any changes therefore which the Commission recommend in the case of this Service have to be looked at by us with a great amount of attention. That is why I am prepared to say at the very beginning that I recognise with considerable satisfaction the advance that the Commission have made in their recommendations in this respect. But, at the same time, there is a point arising also out of the Report to which I will draw attention. The Commission have recognised that in the case of many technical and scientific services it is not necessary, from the point of view of the security of the country or from any political consideration, to maintain a British personnel, either wholly or in part. They have recognised this in the case of many other services. In the case of the Public Works Department, which also is technical and scientific really, they do not recognise this principle. They maintain that it is desirable in this particular Service that there should be an admixture of the European and Indian elements. They do not go further and state why that is the case. It is precisely that point in the Report which I would ask the Council to remember this Resolution of mine seeks to controvert. I wish the Government to state, if I can persuade it to do so, that, that particular point, namely, that it is desirable in this Service that there should be an admixture of the European and Indian elements, is not appropriate. It is possible, it has been acknowledged, to man the whole of the Service with the Indian element. The Roorkee, the Sibpur, Madras and Poona Engineering Colleges have been acknowledged already to be on a high level of efficiency. What defects there may be in their organisation, in their teaching, and in the quality of the material they turn out may easily be rectified ; and it is perfectly possible, as appears abundantly from the evidence, that if the Government took the necessary steps they could place all these Engineering Colleges on a level of perfect equality with any engineering institution in the world. If so, it is, I think, perfectly correct for us to state that this service is one which the Government should acknowledge to be one of those in which it is fully possible within a reasonable period of time to man them from the Indian element. I say 'within a reasonable period of time' in the Resolution advisedly. I do not commit the Government to any particular period. I know there are difficulties of every sort to be overcome, but the phrase 'within a reasonable period of time' covers that.

"There is just one other remark I want to make before I formally make the motion. I have made an exception in the case of the proportion of Royal Engineers that may have to be recruited. As many as 70 Royal Engineer officers are now belonging to this Service. It does not appear clearly from the evidence why this Royal Engineer element is admitted into the Service; but apparently it is a war reserve, and it is considered economical, as it is considered economical in the Indian Medical Service, by reserving certain appointments as Civil appointments, to reduce the cadre which otherwise may be necessary. Anyhow, it is a point on which I am not competent to say anything. Whether the war reserve will continue to be what it is or may be reduced is perhaps a point which may be taken up later on. For the time being, I recognise that it is necessary to make provision for the employment of a certain number of Royal Engineers in this Service. As they cannot possibly be recruited in India, I make an exception, 'excepting the proportion of posts reserved for Royal Engineers.' I suppose I ought to have said 'excepting the number of posts that it may be necessary to reserve for Royal Engineers.' I beg to move the Resolution."

The Council then adjourned for Lunch till 2-30 P.M.

2-34 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. F. C. Rose :—"The Hon'ble mover of this Resolution in the course of his speech has already stated that the question of the future recruitment of the Public Works Department and Railway Engineering Services has been the subject of inquiry by two separate Commissions within recent years. The proposals made by these Commissions are now under examination, and, if adopted by the Government of India, will go a long way towards the goal to which my Hon'ble friend is aiming. I note with satisfaction that he has recognized the desirability of excluding Royal Engineer Officers from the scope of his Resolution, and in the figures I now mention this class has been omitted. At present the percentage of the engineer establishment recruited in Europe, is 60 per cent. The Public Services Commission have recommended a reduction to 43 per cent., and the Public Works Reorganization Committee have made certain proposals under which the work of the Buildings and Roads Branch will eventually come under the control of local bodies, whose engineering establishment will be recruited in India. The effect of this proposal would be to reduce the European recruitment still further to about 25 per cent. It will thus be apparent that the Government of India have under examination proposals for materially increasing the proportion of recruitment in India, and I think it may be accepted that a large increase in the Indian recruited element will be made within a reasonable period of time. So long as an admixture of Europeans in the Engineering services is held to be desirable, recruitment from Europe must, I think, be continued in order to ensure as large a field of selection as possible, and in order to secure the products of the most advanced educational institutions dealing with the science of engineering. The curtailment of the European element must necessarily be gradual, as it is essential that the great engineering works of India, so vital to the general progress of the country, should be efficiently maintained, and that new works should be energetically pushed on under as skilful engineering advice as it is possible to obtain. In this connection, I may mention that engineering problems of importance are likely in the future to demand even greater skill in their conception and design than in the past. In irrigation, for instance, the easier and more straightforward works have been completed, and such extensions as are possible in the future will call for great engineering skill and talent to solve the many problems that will arise. The transfer of the responsibility of complicated engineering problems to an agency recruited wholly in this country must necessarily depend on the extent to which Indians of the right stamp avail themselves of the educational facilities provided for them out here, and even more on the extent to which in practical work they apply their theoretical education. If experience shows that in technical aptitude, resourcefulness and other essential qualities the right stamp of engineer can be recruited in India, not as an exception but as a rule, recruitment in India for the Public Works Department would be a natural sequence. In the meantime, the extension of recruitment in the country will by its success or failure indicate the rate at which it would be advisable, in the real interests of the country, to increase still further that recruitment. So long as Indian firms in this country employ, in their own interests, European engineers to control and work out engineering enterprises of real importance, I submit that it can scarcely be expected that Government can guarantee to dispense with the same element in the engineering enterprises under their control, on the success of which the prosperity and welfare of the country so largely depend.

"I think what I have said is enough to show that the policy of the Government of India is on the lines aimed at in the Resolution, but complete fulfilment must necessarily depend on the Indian recruits proving themselves fit to take advantage of the opportunities which will be afforded."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Sir, the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Rose is so very satisfactory and sympathetic, that I do not think much need be said in support of this Resolution. He realises, as we all realise, that the extent to which the Indian community can be employed would depend upon their showing their capacity for the work which the Government has on hand. But, Sir, there has been so much misconception about this subject, that it was necessary that we should emphasise by means of this Resolution that the

2-30 P.M.

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

Government should acknowledge that there are no special grounds of policy, except the one of efficiency, whereby this problem should be solved. The reason why I speak on this point is, that I sent up a Resolution last Session asking for recognition that in this and allied branches the Public Services Commission's Report which recommends that a special distinction ought to be drawn between this and scientific subjects on the ground of policy is not based on sound reasoning. I have asked that the only test should be one of efficiency, and I am glad that Government agrees with me substantially, and that on that question there is no difference between non-official Members and the Government. The Government state that for reasons of efficiency they find it necessary at the present moment to continue recruitment in England.

"That being so, there is nothing at variance with the Resolution that has been moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. It does not ask for any wide departure within any definite period, but it asks that the principle should be acknowledged that the recruitment should be made only in India when a suitable opportunity occurs, and that we should work towards that goal. Now, Sir, as has been already pointed out the Report of the Public Works Department Reorganization Committee says distinctly that a very wide advance could be made almost immediately in that direction so far as the Roads and Buildings Branch is concerned. It is acknowledged that there will not be much difficulty in finding Indian engineers to carry out these works. The Taj Mahal and numerous other buildings, public and private, which are the glory of the past of India are clear evidence that the Indian community is quite equal to the task of building construction. If the recommendation of that Committee that these engineers should be under District Boards be accepted, as I hope it will be, there is not the slightest doubt that we are really paving the way for the acceptance of this Resolution so far as that Branch is concerned. Then we come to the Irrigation Branch. In the case of this Branch also, the ancient works of the country clearly show that the Indians possess genius and aptitude for work. The numerous public tanks, reservoirs and canals are proof, and abundant proof, of their skill. But, Sir, it would be wrong not to acknowledge with profound gratitude what has been done by engineers during the past 30 or 40 years both in road construction as well as in irrigation. While suitably acknowledging that fact, it may be remarked that it is considered even by experts that it is only in India that you have abundant facilities for training young engineers in irrigation. The Public Works Reorganisation Committee says 'India is probably the finest school in the world for an irrigation engineer, and it would be obviously anomalous to import into India irrigation experts trained elsewhere, and similarly, India can compare favourably with any European country as a field for training in railway engineering.' This is what Colonel Ottley had to say in his evidence before the Commission. He said—

'That as regards European Assistant Engineers he would strongly recommend that every man selected should be sent out on probation for three years by which time the authorities in India ought to be able to decide whether he is worth retention or not.'

It is said that the selection of the European is based chiefly on the ground of the practical experience of the candidates, but the experience derivable in the United Kingdom is not of a very useful character. Colonel Ottley says—

'The men for India were simply lookers-on. A man might have been employed for only six months on works, but if his employer had found him valuable enough to pay for his services, that showed that he was useful. Hitherto the idea had been general that, unless a man had a year's practical experience, he would not be accepted, but he had had very largely to discard that idea and therefore he was thrown back on the theoretical qualifications, the candidate's recommendations and the answers the man himself gave during his ten minutes' interview.'

"We are forced to this that in some departments practical experience in the United Kingdom is not worth as much consideration as practical experience derivable in India. Then coming to Railways, here a distinction has been drawn, and I think soundly drawn, between the facilities which Europe and India afford for the training of mechanical engineers. But it is acknowledged that a large part of construction work does not require mechanical training at all. Construction facilities are available in India on a larger scale than in England, and therefore from the point of view of Railways also, except with regard to the mechanical branch, it seems to me that practical facilities exist only in India These are the arguments to prove that there would be no difficulty whatever if recruiting should be only in India. We ask that that should be accepted in almost every service, except where the special circumstances thereof render it absolutely difficult or impossible. I am not one of those who believe that this particular branch or any branch of the services should be made wholly Indian ; we do not want any special protection for any Indian ; as I understand the Empire every British citizen, including Indians, should be free to pursue his fortunes without restriction and hindrance. I do not ask that Indians should be given any special privileges or safeguards, but only a fair field and free competition. The Resolution asks that recruiting should be made in India within a reasonable time. It is acknowledged on every hand that the theoretical knowledge imparted here is as good, as if not better than what is given in England, and some think it is unnecessary that there should be so much theoretical knowledge. If then, Sir, all the facilities for imparting practical instructions are here, and if most of these Branches do not require any special skill of the kind that can be derived only in Europe, there is no reason whatever why anybody should demur to the proposals of the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. Of course the question of security does not really arise, this was the ground which some Members of the Commission took when they asked individual witnesses questions on that point. It is a question of mutual trust ; I do not think that that argument has been pressed, and I do not propose to deal any further with the question of security. There is no difference urged on the ground that the Europeans as a class are better engineers than Indians. We do not want to shut out the Englishman who has the same rights as an Indian so long as the Empire is equally open to all. Therefore, I submit that Government should accept the Resolution which suggests that gradually the recruitment should be wholly in India."

2-16 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea :—"Sir, I wish to add but one word to the discussion. We are all very thankful to the Government for expressing their readiness to accept the policy indicated in the Resolution of the Hon'ble mover......."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—"I should like to say that that has not been stated."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea :—"Am I mistaken in making that statement ? I thought that Government—I am not very clear—but as I understood the Hon'ble Member who has spoken on behalf of Government, I thought he said that the Government were willing to follow the policy indicated in the Resolution of the Hon'ble Mr Sarma and to employ in an increasing measure Indians in the Public Works and the Engineering Department...."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—"I wish to point out that the policy as described by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea is not the policy advocated by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea :—"I take it that that is the policy that, with the exception of Royal Engineers, there should be a preponderating Indian element in the Engineering and in the Public Works Department. I think that that is the policy that is indicated, with all great respect to you, Sir. Well, whatever that may be, the question of our employment in the Public Works Department will depend very largely upon our educational fitness for such employment, and our educational fitness will also depend upon the educational facilities that are given to us. And here I desire to utter a word of complaint. In the great Province of Bengal, with a population of 45 millions, we have only one Engineering College, that is the Sibpur Engineering College. I am not sure that there is an Engineering College in Bihar—I believe there is an Engineering school there, if I remember rightly. In the United Provinces, there is the great Roorkee College, but I think the people of Bengal are excluded from that college, and I believe people of other Provinces also are in the same position. There is the Poona Engineering College in the Bombay Presidency and an Engineering College in Madras. My submission is, that the educational facilities which have been placed at our disposal for fitting ourselves for the sort of employment referred to in Mr. Sarma's Resolution are not sufficient, and I think the Government's attention ought to be drawn to this matter, that we need more Engineering Institutions, Engineering Schools and Colleges in Bengal, in Bihar, in Madras and in Bombay, in order that we might be able fully to equip ourselves for the opportunities that Mr. Sarma wants to create for us in this matter. I hope that point will be borne in mind by the Government. If I have been wrong in interpreting the intentions of the Government with regard to Mr. Sarma's Resolution, I am not surely wrong in interpreting our views with regard to it, namely, that the non-official Indian Members are in the deepest sympathy with that Resolution, and they would be glad if the Government saw its way to accept it. I believe that represents, at any rate, the feeling of the non-official Indian Members here, and I hope and trust that the Government will see its way to accept the Resolution so far as practicable."

2-54 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde.—" Sir, I wish to support this Resolution, not so much on theoretical grounds, as on the ground that the experiment has been tried partially and found successful. In my younger days there was this difficulty. The Bombay Government in those days passed a Resolution that whoever stood first in the L. C. E. Examination would be enrolled or would be given one of the higher appointments in the Public Works Department. At any rate, I remember three gentlemen who came first in my time and got posts of Assistant Engineers, and though they had to start from the lowest rung of the ladder, their work has always been highly commended. However, on the question of railway engineering, I may instance the case of the small railway that has been constructed, and that is now running between Bombay and Matheran. The line leading to Matheran is a hilly tract, and I have heard competent engineers say that the construction of the line required the greatest skill, and yet that railway was built entirely under the superintendence of a graduate of the Bombay University in the Engineering Department. So, I believe, even with the limited opportunities that we have for Engineering knowledge, given the chance, our graduates have shown great competency in carrying out works demanding great skill and technical knowledge. Irrigation works, I think, may be regarded as a speciality of this country.

" Large irrigation works have been carried out in India on a scale which can hardly be found elsewhere, and here too Engineers do much better and a much higher kind of work than is generally known. They have been commended also by their superior officers. So, I think, this Resolution from my point of view does not go far enough. I believe that, so far as I have seen, Indian students educated in the Engineering colleges in this country, despite the limited facilities for education, have done really good work, and have commanded the highest commendations of very high Royal Engineers. In this view of the matter I submit that this experiment having been tried and having been entirely successful, the time has come for adopting the policy commended in the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri."

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir Claude Hill; Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill.—"Sir, I should like first of all, if I may, to thank the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution for the brevity as well as for the clearness with which he has put his Resolution to the Council, and at the same time to draw the attention of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Banerjea to the fact that the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, and not the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, has the credit of moving this Resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea.—"I made a mistake, Sir."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill.—"I think, Sir, I should endeavour to emulate the Hon'ble Mover in respect of the quality of brevity.

"There are two pivotal points in the Resolution as moved by my Hon'ble friend. The first is, were the Public Services Commission justified in omitting the Public Works Department from the list of other technical services in regard to their thesis, in regard to them that there were no grounds of policy for any considerable admixture of officers imported from Europe. That, I understand, is the Hon'ble Member's first point. The second point is one of some difficulty and one on which a great deal of the argument depends, and that is, as to what the Hon'ble Member means by 'within a reasonable period.' I must confess, Sir, I feel some difficulty in dealing with this question of 'reasonable period' for this reason, that until that period is defined more exactly, it is hardly possible to argue as to the period, one side maintaining the reasonable period to be when the transfer entirely of recruitment to India could be effected without attendant risk of all kinds, another urging that that period would arrive before that date. At all events he places us in some difficulty in regard to the question of period, and I think it is a matter of some importance, because if the Hon'ble Member were to accept our interpretation of what was a reasonable time, we could of course have probably accepted his Resolution. As things are, however, I fear that we are unable to accept it in the form in which it stands, for the reason that it has not quite put the matter in the sense suggested by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Banerjea. The Resolution in fact, I may remind the Council, asks that recruitment for the Public Works Department should be made within a reasonable period of time wholly in India. That does not of course prevent the Government of India from sympathising with the object which the Hon'ble Member has in view, and I think in the remarks which I propose to make, I shall be able to show him and the Council that the Government of India are moving in the direction desired by the Hon'ble Member at a pace which, I earnestly hope, he will regard as being a reasonable pace. And if I am able to convince him of that, I have every hope that it may be possible not to put the Resolution to the vote in the terms in which it is at present worded. The Hon'ble Mr. Rose has contended that we are, as a matter of fact, proceeding with the Indianization of the Public Works Department as rapidly as circumstances permit. When I speak of the Indianization of the services, I wish here cordially to thank the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma for the way in which he has taken this Resolution out of the category of those into which it is possible to import racial considerations. I should point out that the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri's Resolution stipulates for recruitment in India without importing into it the question of race or creed, and to that extent I am in entire sympathy with the view put forward.

"Then, Sir, this Council have also been informed by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rose, if they did not already know it, that the Government of India the year before last took the initiative in appointing a Public Works Department Reorganisation Committee to investigate the possibility of revising establishments, and although it was not specifically in the terms of reference to that Committee to investigate the question of the Indianization of the services, or indeed directly of the source of recruitment, one of the terms of reference was clearly based on the desire which we felt to secure a larger admixture of private enterprise in the transaction of the work entrusted to the Public Works Department. And of course by private enterprise the Government of India mean primarily Indian enterprise; and to that extent I might contend that art of the terms of reference was in the direction which would be approved of by my Hon'ble friend the mover of this Resolution. But in the reference to that Reorganization Committee, as Mr. Rose has quite rightly pointed out, the Government of India reserved the Irrigation Branch of the Public Works Department from the purview of that Committee's investigation; and they did so, I think the Council will agree with me, for a very excellent reason. The Irrigation Department is practically a Commercial Department, and it is the biggest Commercial Department of its kind in the world. The works which are in charge of Irrigation Officers are not only of stupendous size and cost, but are of paramount, indeed of vital, importance to the welfare of this great country and to millions and millions of its inhabitants. For that reason we felt, in appointing this Reorganization Committee, that for the present at all events, we should reserve consideration of the organization of the Irrigation Department for a later day, and that we should only appoint the Public Works Reorganization Committee to investigate the Roads and Buildings Branch of the Service. Now, when I say that we were reluctant to imperil the safety of our huge irrigation works, I am sure the Members of this Council will exonerate me from any intention to suggest that peril would necessarily follow from an Indianization of the Public Works Department. That is not my meaning, and I am sure Members will endorse my contention to this extent that we should not be justified, in the pursuit of any ideal towards complete Indianization, in jeopardizing in any degree whatever the welfare of the millions who depend upon the security of the great irrigation works of this country. In regard to the maintenance and up-keep of those irrigation works, I think Council will agree with the view which I suggest to them, that we should, for the present at all events, insist upon the right to call to that Service the services of the best possible men whoever they may be. I recognise that my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma has made a very good point in indicating that in regard even to irrigation works, antiquity points to irrigation works of great magnitude; but I believe I am correct in thinking that there are no irrigation works that we know of in ancient times which are at all comparable to the magnitude of some of those already undertaken, and still less to those which we contemplate undertaking; and, when I mention for the information of the Council, that there is one project coming up, to which I shall have occasion to refer later on in greater detail, which involves 5,000 miles of canals and an annual irrigational capacity of over 2 million acres, I think that my point will be admitted to be made.

"Then, Sir, my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rose, I think in a very relevant manner, indicated that at the present day those big engineering firms in India, the private engineering firms of Calcutta, Bombay and so forth, all do employ on their staff in the higher paid appointments a considerable proportion of Europeans. Now I am quite certain that those firms, some of which are Indian—the most eminent of which is Indian—do not employ Europeans in the higher posts from preference, but simply from necessity. And in saying that I do not wish for a moment to be regarded as derogating from the capacity of Indians eventually to be able to take the place of any European at present in India or of doing work of equal importance; but I do say that a responsible Government, in dealing with a question of this kind, must, in the very nature of things, aim at security. In other words, I suggest to you that the Government of India, who are a far bigger engineering firm, if you like to call it so, than any private firm in India, cannot, when the nature of the case is as I have described—when private firms still find it necessary to emply in their higher ranks Europeans—I say in such circumstances it is impossible for the Government of India to assent to the acceptance of an ideal at the possible sacrifice of the needs of the near, or rather distant, future, according as the Hon'ble Member interprets his term reasonable, within a few years or after many years. So from that point of view, I submit it would be altogether wrong—and I am sure this Council will endorse that point—for the Government of India to accept a Resolution which could in any sense be held up hereafter as tying their hands in their choice.

"But, Sir, I do wish to lay emphasis on what we have done within quite recent years in the direction of Indianising the service. It is, I think, a very great stride in advance when we reflect that the Public Services Commission proposed, as Mr. Rose has explained, an ultimate reduction from 60 per cent. to 43 per cent. of the European recruitments, and a still greater stride in advance is suggested by the Public Works Reorganisation Committee, which will have the effect in the Buildings and Roads Branches, if adopted, of reducing the percentage to 25. Well, Sir, I suggest that a reduction on one side of the Public Works Department, even though I am unable to say at the moment that the Government of India will accept in full the recommendations of the Public Works Reorganisation Committee, still the very suggestion that there should be a reduction at that rapid rate, which, if carried out, will be carried out within comparatively few years, and which goes such a long way towards meeting the ideal which my Hon'ble friend has in view in putting this Resolution, almost tempts me to suggest to him that he might leave it at that for the present, and that he need not, in the circumstances, put his Resolution, aiming as it does, we hold, at a somewhat unpractical ideal, to the vote of the Council. But at the same time I recognise that it depends so much upon what interpretation my Hon'ble friend is going to put upon the word 'reasonable' that I do not wish to press that point until my Hon'ble friend explains the precise limitations which he connotes by that term. But in regard to the general thesis, I think, although terminologically my Hon'ble friend Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea did not quite accurately express the terms of the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, that no one who has spoken is very much at variance ; and it is really a question of whether this Council wishes to impress upon Government the necessity for dotting of the i's and the crossing of the t's of their policy as to rate of development, or whether they are satisfied, in view of the explanations given, with the rate of progress we are endeavouring to make in the direction desired."

The Hon'ble Mr Sastri :—"Sir, I have heard with great interest, and may I add with great pleasure, the full and clear statement made by the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill. In one word he has extended to me, as the author of this Resolution, his sympathy, though not his full acceptance. I will try briefly to meet the two or three points that have been made in a sense opposed to my Resolution, I will not say in a hostile spirit, but not quite friendly. 3-12 P.M.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Rose in a speech conceived in an admirable spirit made the suggestion or rather implied that, if the course which I suggest were adopted, it is just possible—he hinted it merely—it is just possible that the efficiency of the service might be affected, and the large and very difficult works of engineering which have still to be undertaken may be imperilled by a speedy consummation of the ideal to which I have referred. I cannot, Sir, standing here, accept the apprehension as at all well-founded which underlies this statement. In my opinion the whole of the Public Works service may be recruited in India without serious loss of efficiency. Where, however, works of great skill and magnitude have to be undertaken and the Government think that the interests at stake are much too large for them to run any risks, no one, certainly not I nor any of my Hon'ble Colleagues, will object to their engaging at that time the best available services from the whole world at any price that may have to be paid. That is a reservation that throughout the Hon'ble Members in charge of these subjects may take it that we are willing to make at all times. We seek for knowledge and assistance from the entire world, and we are prepared to pay any price that may be demanded. Short of that, it is, I think, somewhat hard on us to be asked to accept the doctrine hinted at, though not expressly stated, that the further Indianisation of the services might cause risks to the efficiency of the Public Works Department which the Government was unwilling to undertake. In my opinion experience has already shown that there is very little risk run by an extension of this policy.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Rose seemed again to hint that an experiment was going on, and that on the results of that experiment as to how far the new element showed its capacity to bear the burdens placed upon its shoulders would depend the further extension of the experiment. I rather think we have long passed the stage of experimenting.

"There is only one other point to which I must refer, and that is the employment of European engineers by Indian firms. Yes, I have read some of the evidence, especially of the representative of Messrs. Martin and Co. on the subject. Well, I cannot pretend to penetrate into the mind of Sir Rajendra Nath Mukerji and say exactly why he said what he said. Certainly, Indian firms like other firms are business firms, and they do not engage costly agency unless they know that it is in the long run not costly really but cheap, that is to say, that it is perfectly economical. As I said, I am perfectly unaware of the conditions of Messrs. Martin and Co., and I cannot pretend, with my ignorance of engineering matters, to say why Martin and Co. employ European engineers. But I may say that I recall in this connection an analogy from a field with which I am familiar, namely, that of education. In education at all events nobody will say, certainly not on our side of the subject, that Indians are not able to manage big institutions. Still it is a fact to-day—and I make a present of it to the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill—that there are a great many indigenous managers of educational establishments who would rather have a European principal than an Indian principal, while Government are willing to appoint Indians to the principalships of first grade colleges. I can mention indigenous agencies which run only big High Schools or Intermediate Colleges which hesitate to appoint Indians, however meritorious their qualifications may be. Now, the inference to be drawn from this, we people who are employed in education know, and although I cannot venture to say that that inference is applicable also in the sphere of engineering, I merely suggest it to the Council as a possibility that there is something in that point of view in our case at all events in the case of education. There is a great deal of advantage—material advantage as well as moral advantage—to be obtained by appointing Europeans to the principalships of Intermediate Colleges in the hands of indigenous agencies. They carry so much more prestige in the present popular estimate of things, and they are able besides to get the wants of their institutions attended to by Government agencies much more easily than Indian principals are able to do. Besides, Sir, there are one or two other things which only we educationists can know that account for this preference without, however, touching the question of intrinsic merit or efficiency. I will not weary the Council with them, but it just seems to me that it is possible that, when Messrs. Martin and Company employ European engineers, they are certainly not doing anything ruinous to their finance, but doing something which materially and morally improves their position, but does not necessarily carry the corollary that a European engineer was superior in point of efficiency to an Indian who might have been engaged.

"There is only one other point I have to touch upon before I resume my seat, and that is the precise interpretation that I was going to put on the words 'reasonable period of time.' Well, I will not be drawn even by the seductive voice of the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill to make more precise what I think I had better leave there. But, in the course of the day, I shall put the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill's interest in this matter to the test by actually proposing a period and find out then whether he extends more sympathy then than when, as in this Resolution, I leave it out. As I said I really cannot say that this can be done in such and such a period. Surely it is not open to me to say so, that is why I leave it there. I think it is not open to me to state the period now, but in the other Resolution I will mention it."

The motion was put and negatived.

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. Sastri.]

RESOLUTION RE APPOINTMENT OF INDIANS TO SERVICES RECRUITED IN INDIA.

3-26 P. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"Sir, I beg to move that—

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that—

(a) immediate steps be taken to ensure that Indians are appointed to the great majority of the posts in the services ordinarily recruited in India; and

(b) the educational qualifications prescribed for admission into these services should be sufficiently high and the same for all candidates irrespective of their creed or race.'

"This is a somewhat delicate Resolution which it has fallen to my lot to place before the Council. It touches services which, by the Report of the Public Services Commission, are at present wholly recruited in India. Here at all events that precise question of discrimination between European and Indian to which I had to refer in the last Resolution need not occur; but I am afraid this element does come in even in this Resolution, along with another element to which I have now to draw the Council's attention. I will enumerate some of the more important services which come under this Resolution. They are the Post Office, Telegraph, Land Records, Registration, Northern India Salt Revenue, Excise and Madras Survey. Of course the Provincial Service in certain other Departments might also be mentioned, e.g., the Survey of India or the Forests.

"Now, in all these cases there is a peculiar phenomenon, although the recruitment is confined entirely to India. Taking all the posts of Rs 200 and above in these services together, we get something like 1,410 appointments. Of these, 404 are in the enjoyment of Europeans, 533 are in the enjoyment of Eurasians or Anglo-Indians, and only 403 or 28 per cent. are in the enjoyment of Asiatics of unmixed descent. If, however, we take posts in these Departments which carry salaries of Rs. 500 and upwards, only 11·5 per cent. fall to the share of Indians. When we pass the limit of Rs. 800 the proportion falls to 7 per cent.

"Now, I beg the Council to consider this question a little. Here are services which are recruited entirely in India at present—are recruited, not proposed to be recruited; and yet this is where Indians stand. It is a phenomenon which requires very careful consideration. It has been brought about by a system of preference for which the explanation, I think, would be extremely difficult. The preference is always in favour of Anglo-Indians, the discrimination being made against Indians of pure Asiatic descent. It is really difficult for me to understand—especially when we remember that this Anglo-Indian community numbers on a favourable estimate somewhere about a lakh all told in the whole of India. Europeans and Anglo-Indians together, if we exclude those in the Army, would come to slightly over 2 lakhs; and yet the community, small as it is, numerically almost negligible, takes such a very large percentage of the posts I have mentioned in services entirely recruited in India. Is it because their educational qualifications are invariably superior? The fact will be found to be the contrary. As a matter of fact, the educational qualifications required are different in the case of Indians to what they are in the case of members of this community. In several services no Indian of pure descent, who has not a B. A. degree, is allowed entry; while the educational qualifications are expressly lowered in order to admit competitors from this favoured community. Unfortunately the Commission, in so many ways suggesting improvements, seem in this particular matter to have been unable to shake off the inconvenient tradition that the services have gathered round themselves, and suggest that this differentiation, this lowering of educational qualifications in order to facilitate the entry of members of the Anglo-Indian community, should be perpetuated. They enunciate the thoroughly wholesome principle that, even although the recruitment may be solely by nomination, the nomination should be confined to those who show a high educational qualification—as high as may be prescribed considering the sort of services that the Department has in view. But they proceed to add in the case of members of the Anglo-Indian community, however, that the educational test may not be precisely the same as for members of other communities, but something which the Government of India may prescribe as of an equivalent standard. Now, it is well known that in European and Anglo-Indian schools, the teaching is only up to the Entrance standard. In some schools which teach very well, indeed, up to a high degree of efficiency, the standard may be somewhat higher; but it is still below the Intermediate of the Universities. When therefore Indians of pure descent are asked to produce a B. A. degree, while Anglo-Indians are to show something lower—admittedly lower than that demanded in the other case—it is there that we must look for the cause which has brought about their enormous preponderance. In these circumstances, it is not therefore superior educational qualifications that may be urged in explanation of this disparity. It is something else. I cannot undertake to say what it is. It is for the representatives on the official side to state the real grounds for this preference.

"My point is made when I have indicated this preference, this marked preference, and inquired why it should be. I have only to read now a certain extract which shows that I am not drawing on my imagination when I speak of the difference in educational qualifications that are required from members of these two communities. In certain services the selection is done by nomination. In one service, the Northern India Salt Revenue, the selection has been done by a competitive examination during recent years, and that has been the means of bringing in a few Indians of pure descent into that service. But even there the examination is not open. It is confined to persons previously nominated, and it comes out in the evidence that the nominations are so carefully made that Indians of pure descent will have only a small chance at the final result. Even the Public Services Commission in their liberal recommendations are obliged to say in the case of one of the services that at least one in every three nominated for the examination should be an Indian of pure descent. In another place, they say that when one appointment is given to an Anglo-Indian, let one be given to an Asiatic of pure descent. Why, when we have such a preponderance in numbers, when we have educational advantages to our credit, why we should be asked to be content with such a small modicum of representation in these Services is something that calls for immediate explanation. Here is something. I am reading from Colonel Burrard's evidence :—

'Admission to the Provincial (Survey) service was by competitive test. The rule was also laid down that three-quarters of the vacancies should go to the domiciled community, and one-quarter to the Indians. There was one examination for all candidates... ; supposing that there were four vacancies, the first three Anglo-Indians were selected and the first Indian. If the rule were abolished, it would lead to a large increase in the number of Indians recruited. One or two Indians had almost always to be knocked out. The three-quarters rule was not justified on the score of efficiency, but by other reasons.'

What this witness has stated clearly and candidly must have been present in the minds of others who did not, however, go to the root of the matter and state the facts exactly with the blunt directness that marks this passage. I therefore move, Sir,—

"That this Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that—

(a) immediate steps be taken to ensure that Indians are appointed to the great majority of the posts in the services ordinarily recruited in India; and

(b) the educational qualifications prescribed for admission into these Services should be sufficiently high and the same for all candidates irrespective of their creed or race."

3-35 P. M. The Hon'ble Mr. B. D. Shukul :—" Sir, this Resolution rightly claims to secure for Indians the majority of posts in the services ordinarily recruited in India. These posts in theory are intended for the children of the soil; yet in practice there is a marked tendency to encourage such posts being given to Anglo-Indians. These departments are manned mainly by Anglo-

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. B. D. Shukul; Sir William Vincent; Mr. Sastri.]

Indians and the higher appointments are practically shut out to the children of the soil. This constitutes in itself a long-standing grievance which is greatly resented by those who are already in the Service. We can hardly expect them to be content when their future prospects are marred. Sir, as long as the present difference continues, how can it be expected that respectable and highly-qualified Indians would be attracted to these Services, and how can those who are already in the Service be relied upon to work with contentment while they are smarting under an insult as they rightly regard the preference shown to Anglo-Indians to be? Inasmuch as this Resolution seeks to remedy this evil, it has my full support. The Government, in my humble opinion, should have no objection in accepting it as its claims are so modest.

"So far as the second part of the Resolution is concerned, it seeks no favour. It demands but justice and fair-play. The same test of qualification to all alike for the same nature of work, without any distinction of creed or caste, is all that is demanded. At present in certain departments such Indians as are allowed admission are required to possess higher educational qualifications than the members of other communities, such as Eurasians and Christians. In all fairness there should be no distinction made of whatever kind between an Indian and a member of any other community. Any inequality shown in this respect leads to general discontent, which it is not desirable to perpetuate in the interests of the very efficiency of administration which we are all so keen to maintain. For this reason, above all, I hope this Resolution will commend itself to the acceptance of this Council."

3-39 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Sir, the question raised in the first part of the Resolution was specifically covered by the reference to the Public Services Commission; after deciding that there had been an inadequate advance in the employment of Indians in the higher Services, that body found it necessary to dismiss the idea of any single solution of this question from their minds, and they decided to deal with the question in particular relation to the circumstances of each Service. I venture to think that this Council would be well advised if it accepted the same principle. In other words, I think it is unwise to try to apply a single universal formula to a set of Services selected not because of any essential affinity in their functions or their organization or anything else, but merely for the accidental reason that they happen to be recruited in India. I would suggest that it would be reasonable to take each separate Service and to consider its particular requirements and its circumstances. The general policy and aims of Government are quite clear and unequivocal. But it is impossible to lay down any rigid standard or time-table in applying this policy to every Service Sir, when I received notice of this Resolution, I was in some doubt as to what Services exactly were covered by the Hon'ble Mover's recommendations. Those doubts have now been removed. If I had known earlier, however, exactly what it was that the Hon'ble Member meant, I should have been saved a good deal of trouble . . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—"I could have told you, Sir, if you had asked."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"It was hardly my duty to inquire. Another point is, I was not at all sure at first that the Hon'ble Member intended to include in the term 'Indians' all those who used to be known as statutory natives of India; even now I am not quite clear that . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—"I should have stated, Sir, that the word 'Indians' is in this connection used in the sense of the Public Services Commission's Report, as meaning Indians of pure Asiatic descent."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Quite so, from what he has said I thought that, following the Public Services Commission, the Hon'ble

[Sir William Vincent.] [27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

Member had adopted that classification. Well, accepting this principle, I wi l attempt to show the Council that there are many Services recruited in India in which the position of Indians cannot but be regarded as already very satisfactory even from the Hon'ble Mover's point of view, and that in all great progress is being made. On the other hand, we know, Sir, that different Services draw suitable recruits from different sources, and for this reason, Anglo-Indians naturally form a larger proportion in some Services than in others. But whether they are classed with Europeans or with Indians, I think myself they will require special consideration. I trust the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri does not contemplate, and I am sure the Government would not contemplate with any complacence, their immediate exclusion from the Services to which they have hitherto been freely admitted.
